SONGS OF THE SACRED MOUNTAINS.

LEBANON.

Spread thy cedars, Lebanon,
Thou the glory of the land;
Shelter from the burning sun,
Panting flocks that 'neath the stand;
Bear away the bitter blast
That sweeps o'er thy towering head,
From the tender herbs that rest
At thy foot, in lowly bed.

Fling thy shadows far and wide;
Elevate thy crown on high,
Like a monarch in his pride
Boasting of his majesty.
But thy grandeur soon will fall,
And thy crown of beauty fade;
Till thy barrenness, shows all
That remains of earthly pride.

Kings and queens in jovial state,
Banqueted upon thy wine:
They have yielded to their fate,
And thou, too, hast bowed to thine,
Thus, thy mountain picture shows,
How the waste of time runs on:
As man's greatness comes, it goes;
Ever changing, going—gone. M,

PROVIDENTIAL DELIVERENCE.

In offering the following well attested instance of Divine interposition for the columns of the "Pioneer," we feel almost prepared to expect from some readers, cavil and objections: on the ground, that such immediate communication of our Heavenly Father's will to the soul of his creature man either is not now vouchsafed, or we are not capable of attaining thereto. But we believe far otherwise. And we think that to interpose any medium between such immediate communication of the will of God, and beings created for his glory and continually upheld by His power, or to sever between the hungry panting soul, and its universal sustaining Father "in whom we live and move and have our being," is no less than to intercept the free circulation of the divine life in the Vine, from the branches which subsist thereby; or to amputate the spiritual Head, "from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God." That they are not often grieved, is too true to be gainsayed. But enough to animate our path we see;—enough to prove their truth; and also that their origin is Divine. We believe the cause why they are not more frequently manifested to us, is not from any shortness or unwilling in the omnipresent Holy One, "whose mercy endureth forever, but from our own sad lack of faith in, and obedience unto him, which would cause all things to be possible, and would no doubt realize to us, (being the children of His new covenant day; Heb. viii, 8 to 13 and xii, 24) our Redeemers own unqualified promise and assurance, when speaking of the advent of the comforter, or Spirit of Truth: "He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you," "He may abide with you forever," "He will guide you into all truth." "He shall teach you all things, bring all things to your remembrance; and will show you things to come, John xiv and xvi." To which the apostle Peter on the great day of Pentecost, quoting the language of the prophet Joel, bears concurrent testimony, viz: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out, in those days, of my spirit, and they shall prophesy."

Oh! that there were but an earnest seeking after, and faithful abiding with the Spirit of this heavenly Immanuel, God with us; then how would He condescend to our weakness and helplessness without Him; would lead about and instruct us and anointing our eyes with the eye-salve of His kingdom, would cause us to become stewards of divine mysteries. And His Holy Spirit would take of the truths concerning our Holy Redeemer, and apply them to our hearts and understandings; yea, in that blessed Redeemer's own language, "would show us things to come." And not only this, but what does religion now is, and what it is, and what it will do for us, when it is made over to us by the Holy Spirit.

His New Will.

The striking account of a Gentleman [illegible] a person of respectability and standing in society, residing in the city of [illegible] month [illegible] one night [illegible] a voice [illegible] and [illegible] season." [illegible]

General [illegible] month [illegible] sleep. In a very short time he awakened under stronger feelings, on a similar command, which he still treated with neglect, though more reluctantly than before, and after falling asleep, was a third time aroused under sensations which admitted of no further postponement. He therefore arose and mentioned the singular occurrence to his wife, who endeavored to discourage him from attempting so long a journey at such an hour of the night, and especially as he had no apparent object in going there. But his uneasiness was so great that he was not to be turned aside from his purpose, and saddling his riding horse, he sat out. After proceeding some miles in the chilly darkness, groping his way as best he could, his resolution began to waver, and he reasoned with himself on the folly of his undertaking.—"Surely" said he, "I am going on a fool's errand. I am an entire stranger in Launceston, I have no business there, nor any one on whom I can call." Under the influence of these cogitations he turned his horse towards home and thought of returning, but had retracted only a few steps when his mind became exceedingly distressed, and the words seemed to sound in his ear, with commanding authority, "Go to Launceston—go to Launceston" Yielding to this renewed requisition he resumed his journey, and reached an inn in the town soon after breakfast time.

While eating his breakfast, he inquired of the waiter what objects of interest there were in the place. "O," said the waiter, not many—there is the old castle—people sometimes go to look at that. But now everybody is going the the Court of Assizes which is sitting here. The bell is ringing now, and the court assembling." After finishing his meal, he inclined to go to the court-house, and found they were trying a man for his life, on a charge of burglary.—Two witnesses deposed positively that they saw the prisoner in the house at the time of the robbery, and the evidence being conclusive, the judge asked him if he had any defense to make. The poor man was evidently much distressed, and firmly but earnestly asserted his innocence—declared that he was in Plymouth at the time specified by the witnesses against him, and that there was a gentleman in that town who could prove it, if he were here. The judge told him he had heard the evidence against him—that it was full and positive, and that the court could not receive his assertion in the face of such testimony. That if there was any one in Plymouth who could prove him to have been there at the time specified, he ought to have procured his attendance on the trial. The prisoner said he was poor—had been shut up in jail, and had neither the means nor the opportunity to obtain the attendance of witnesses. That he was an innocent man—that it was hard to die for a crime which he had not committed, and that he had no refuge but to trust in that Being who knew his innocence. His bearing and manner of speaking made an impression on the audience, and attracted more than ordinary attention.—The judge said he pitied him, but if he had no testimony to adduce, he must instruct the jury to find a verdict of guilty. The poor man again asserted his innocence, spoke of the gentleman in Plymouth who could exculpate him, and closed by again committing his cause into the Divine hand.

The judge made some further remarks about the person of Plymouth, and the desirableness of having him produced, when as the prisoner glanced his anxious eye around the crowd of gaping pedlators, he suddenly descried the face of the Plymouth gentleman; and calling to the judge, said: "My lord, there he is now." The court requested the prisoner to point him out; the traveler appeared to have no idea that he was the individual alluded to. On facing the bench he was desired to look on the prisoner at the bar and say whether he knew him. "No, my lord," ans'wered the man, "I never saw him before." This seemed discouraging; but leave being given to the prisoner to ask him some questions, the following interrogatories and replies, in substance, ensued:

Prisoner.—Do you not remember a person calling at your office on the day specified and asking you to give him a supposeni?

A. Am—I do not remember such a circumstance.

P. Do you not recollect his telling you that he had a large family, and was destitute, and in great distress?

A. No; I have no such recollection.

P. Do you not remember that you gave him some encouragement to hope you might soon be able to employ him, and gave him permission to call on you again?

A. I do not.

P. Do you not remember expressing sympathy for his distressed situation, and a desire to help him, and that you might not overlook his case, making a memorandum of his name, and the date, &c., on a note-book with a red leather cover?

A. I cannot recall any such circumstance.

The prisoner seemed distressed at the want of recollection in the witness, and ceased to question him. After a few moments' silence, the witness remarked, "But I believe I have my note-book in my pocket, and will refer to it, and see if there is any such entry." On this, he drew from his pocket the little book with the red morocco cover, and turning over the leaves, suddenly paused, and looking towards the bench with a countenance expressive of strong emotion, said, "Why, there is the name, the date and all about it. It had all entirely passed from my memory." The excitement through the court room had been increasing, as the conversation had been proceeding, and now [illegible] the memorandum book, [illegible] [illegible] The judge [illegible] [illegible]

WEAVER ON MARRIAGE.

Mr. G. W. Vanson, Dear Sir:—Much as has been written, spoken or published on the subject of matrimony, we doubt whether a more rational view has been presented to the public than is found in that popular work of Rev. G. S. Weaver: Hopes and Helps for the Young. Believing, as we do, that few sections of country in the Union contain a larger proportion of unmarried men and women, than the region through which the Republican circulates, may we ask the indulgence of a few paragraphs in your paper from the above author on the duty of marriage.

"The young man who marries not, casts the best and strongest stay of his life, and forsakes for most perversity of temper, faith in one of the most palpable duties of life. He deprives himself of life's most refined and exalted pleasures, of some of its strongest incentives to virtue and activity, sets an example unworthy of imitation, and fails to do his duty to society. Moreover, he leaves one who might have made him a happy and useful companion to pine in maidenhood, of heart, through all the weary days of life, to be less useful to society than she might have been, had he performed his duty to himself and her. They should prepare for a life of usefulness whether they marry or not. He or she who prepares in early youth for a true and useful life will be prepared for marriage.

We have said that God marries the truly married. He sanctions the union of those fitted for each other. True unions are founded in congeniality of spirit. This is the fundamental law of marriage. There is a certain class of woman, how large or how small we prefer not to say, that are so nearly alike in their feelings, desires, aspirations, and spiritual characteristics, that they impress their intimate friends in a most similar manner. There is also a certain class of men so kindred in their natures, that when you know one you know them all, who under similar circumstances, will always all be effected alike and not alike. Their spiritual constitutions are kindred—they are formed after the similitude of the same pattern.—Call this class of men A. and this class of women A. Now any one of these women would make a suitable companion for any one of these men. Between these two classes there is a harmony—a congeniality—kindredness that would render them proper companions for each other; when any two of these are united they are truly united. Their hearts flow together, their souls blend in one; their raptures coalesce, their lives mingle like the meeting of two mountain streams, and flow sweetly on together. Intellectually, morally, socially spiritually they become one. A single individual is always but half an ex[illegible] A perfect character is a complex circle, capable of feeling and manifesting the harmony of being. A single being existing alone, is always inharmonious, incomplete; something is wanting to make it whole and perfect in the play and activity of the feelings—that something is its mate. That mate is kindred with itself, the other half of itself. They think, feel and act as one when united. Their joys, labors, trials and hopes are the same. Their hearts beat against each other and beat as the same time. This is a true union; it is such a union as God sanctions; those two classes of men and women should all be united. There is also another class of women differing a little from the first, and a corresponding class of men which should all be united. These might be called classes B., then would follow other classes till the whole race would be found properly associated. To be properly united each one of any class should be united with one of a corresponding class. If this could be universal the race would be in harmony.

After speaking of the amount of unhappiness that would result from a man of the A. class marrying a woman of the B. class; he inquires, how shall we know our mates?

1st. It is necessary for youth of both sexes to be perfectly honest in their intercourse with each other, so as to exhibit always their true character or nature. Thus they can know and be known, see and be seen as they really are, and rational companions will know each other almost as soon as they meet. Souls of real kindred feel that kindredness almost as soon as they come into each others presence. When they associate with pure hearts and honest purposes.

2d. The second subject of interest and importance concerning a choice of companion is the physical constitution and temperament. We want a companion kindred with our own souls. The character of the soul is, to a certain extent, exhibited in the outward person. A coarse, harsh, roughly organized body is never the tabernacle of a refined, sensitive and ardent spirit. But the rough, often makes people appear what they are not. There is a vein of tenderness below the rocky strata of the outward man, which woman should know how to penetrate and bring up for her own as well as his enjoyment. Harmony of physical constitution and temperament is absolutely necessary to congeniality of spirit.

3d. The next point of importance is intellectual harmony. For philosophy to marry a bishop is absolutely wicked. For a [illegible] to marry a theologian is not [illegible] the place. For a [illegible] to [illegible] with a woman of good [illegible] and is to be [illegible] and vice versa. Intellectual enjoyments constitute a great portion of life's real pleasures; they are mild, [illegible] and satisfying. [illegible] will constantly wear or at least detract from the peace and happiness of any union however perfect in other respects. Above all things else, look for moral harmony of soul, seek for kindredness in this highest department of mind. A union must extend to the moral nature or it cannot be true and blessed.

5. Equally important is the harmony of affection. The various affections of the heart should be mutually and equally cherished; a full, perfect and ardent congeniality should be felt in all the loves. It is love that inspires and sanctions marriage. The thoughts, opinions, feelings, activities and pleasures must be mutual. Thus concludes Mr. Weaver's lecture on Marriage, and we believe it is calculated to correct several erroneous impressions upon the minds of the young relative to this most serious and important subject. Too many there are who remain single simply because they believe that no one among their acquaintances will make a suitable companion. Whereas, according to the above author, a more intimate acquaintance would reveal the fact that numbers among this or that class have the positions and characteristics similar to their own. Talk about the study of character being too deep and obtruse for the common mind! As well might you speak thus of any branch of education or science.

Every youth both male and female should study this entire subject in all its bearings and relations. "A true marriage is the soul's Eden. It is the portal of heaven.—It is the visiting place of angels." D.

AGRICULTURAL.

THOUGHTS AT THE PLOW.

We were thinking, the other day, of the dignity of the intelligent and industrious farmer as a painter and poet. But there is a higher dignity than all that which attaches to his profession, and if he would only appreciate it as he ought, the sense of it should make him walk as erect, and look the blue heavens in the face as proudly, as any man that walks the earth. Not that any man should be proud, positively, or take on airs on account of his position, do we say this, or anything more than to convey the idea that no industry to which human hands were ever set, since the first pair were made, is deserving of higher estimation than that of the farmer. For of all the toilers on this earthly ball, he stands in the closest copartnership with Divine Providence, in its realm of nature. The connection of all other occupations is more remote than we mean by the term secondary. To put this relationship in commercial phraseology, the farmer is the importer; the manufacturer, the jobber, and the merchant, the retailer in the great dealings with Nature or Providence, in the material world. That is a week figure, too. That will not do.—Our plow made a balk there, and we must go back and turn up the idea better than all that. It was the fault of the soil, not of the share. Importer will never do in the world as a comparison whereby to measure the precedence of the farmer in the matter of human relationships to Providence. Importer has a mercenary sound and meaning, he is one who buys with more money, in the cheapest market, the fruits of others' industry, and sells them in the dearest, at a large profit. We take back that figure, and apologize to the farmer for putting it on his position. For lack of a better term, then, we may call him the senior earthly partner of Providence in the governmental department of Nature. See now the conditions of the copartnership: the capital which each is to invest in one summer's crop. There are one hundred acres of land; thirty plowable, thirty pasturage; twenty meadow, and twenty woodland. The Creator might have made that land bear stout crops of wheat, rye, corn, potatoes, all of itself, without man's help, but he didn't, and wouldn't; he condescended to admit man to a partnership, in variegating the verdure of those acres, in covering them with waving grain and yellow harvests. He would not let Nature work to the production of any crops for human sustenance without the co-working of human sinews. The wheel of the seasons kept turn forever, scattering rain and dews, light and heat, and every germinating influence; but unless it was bolted on to man's industry, it would not turn out a sheaf of wheat or loaf of bread. But see what comes of the connection, when a pair or two of hands and hoping hearts join their activities to the revolutions of that wheel! How generously Nature divides with man the honor and joy of the crop. How she works with all the sublime and minute economies of the season, in this partnership of toil! The very shape of the earth's orbit, and all its million mile march stages around the sun, as well as the fine dew-distillery of the evening sky, are brought to bear upon the production of those fields. See how the light and heat are graduated to the growth of that five acre lot of corn, see, the temperature that nurses it into the blade, then into the stalk, then into the silken setting of its ears. See what purple curtains are flung around the horizon, what dying, jubilant amen winds blow, what red-faced and clown upon the long, trailing ears, reddening them to the Indian summer tints as they lose from the blanched and fainting drapery that embosses them. Look at this night, Master Brooks, and drive more lectures, discourses, sermons, or your lips, when you talk about merchants, or manufacturers, or joint-stock companies, or any other occupation or profession whatever. Just look at that corn, [illegible] of that [illegible] farmer's kingdom, [illegible] farm. What a firm of farmers are we here! What a diversity of capital is contained in the partnership! What a diversity of capital is invested in the enterprise! What sympathy [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] his bounteous [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

BRIDGETON

Saturday Morning, Nov. 19.

The Pioneer has a LARGER Circulation than any weekly Paper in this State!

Only $1 00 per Year!

JAMES B. FERGUSON,—Editor.

☞ By Divine permission, Rev. J. Spencer Kennard will preach at the Alms House, on Sunday afternoon next at 3 o'clock.

☞ We are requested to say that O. G. Bellows, the Magician and Juggler of this town will give one of his grand entertainments at the Academy at Newport, on this Saturday Evening, Nov. 13th. We bespeak for him a crowded house.

☞ The Legislature of this State will convene at Trenton, on Tuesday the 11th of January.

Thanksgiving Day.

Gov. Newell of this State, has recommended Thursday next, the 18th inst., to be set apart as a day of public prayer and thanksgiving to Almighty God, "for all the blessings of the past, and to implore his loving kindness and protection for the future."

The stores in this town will be closed, as usual, and public worship held in the different churches.

The 18th will also be observed in New York and Pennsylvania, and the 25th in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maryland, Illinois, Iowa, Alabama, Mississippi, Michigan, Missouri Wisconsin, Vermont, and Indiana.

☞ The Steamer Express, will make her last trip to this place the present season, this Saturday, leaving here on Monday next. Taking into consideration the unfavorableness of the past season, the Express has done as well as was anticipated. She is expected to resume her trips in the Spring.

We return our thanks to the Company for the kind invitation extended to us by the gentlemanly Captain, G. E. Wills, to make ourself at home on their boat, whenever agreeable, on the same liberal terms that printers usually travel.

DOUBT NO MORE.—For the information of those in doubt, we would say that the Messrs Samual Swan & Co, of Augusta, Georgia, continue to give prompt attention to orders. The drawings of their Combination Lottery takes place every day of the week, and of the single number Lottery every Saturday, when the handsome Capital Prize of $70,000 is disposed of, and numerous others of a smaller denomination. Prizes cashed promptly immediately after the drawings.

Gleason's New Weekly Line-Of-Battle-Ship has made its appearance. It is a folio form of very large size, and for typographical beauty excels anthingy of the kind we have ever seen. The heading is a representation of a line-of-battle-ship under full sail, making Boston harbor, while in the distance is a bird's eye view of the city; on the right of this, resting a pedestal, is the goddess of Justice, and on the left is the goddess of Liberty; between these, surrounding the vessel, is the ornamental title of the new sheet. The inside boder is unique and novel in its appearance, and the whole is certainly a graceful specimen of taste and design. The illustrations are profuse and well executed, and Mr. Gleason has exhibited great tact and talent in producing a sheet so elegant and complete in all its departments. We say success to the noble ship and her gallant commodore—Boston Sunday News.

A Winch, 320 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, who is agent for the Battle Ship, will supply subscribers and the trade at the earliest moment.

Lectures in Bridgeton.

A course of Six Public Lectures will be delivered in this town, the present season, by some of the most eloquent and popular speakes in the country. One every two weeks. The first of the course on Friday evening next, at Sheppard's Town Hall, by Rev. A. A. Willitts of Philadelphia. Subject—"Patrick Henry as an orator; or, the elements of Effective Eloquence."

The character which Mr. Willitts has already established in this place, as an eloquent and effective speaker will, insure for him a large and appreciative audience.—Hundreds who had the pleasure of listening to his soul-stirring eloquence and sound logic in this place last winter, will undoubtedly be desirous of hearing him again.—The announcement made last week that he would lecture in this place on, or about the 18th and 19th, will be impossible to be complied with, as his services cannot possibly be obtained two nights in succession within three months of the present time. He will therefore lecture on Friday night next, and again during the course.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and other renowned lecturers are expected, the names of whom will be made public in due time. The forthcoming course will undoubtedly be the most popular ever delivered in this place, as the first talent of the country has been secured, and we doubt not will be highly appreciated by this community. A fine opportunity will be afforded our friends from the neighboring towns and villages to visit Bridgeton on the lecture nights and enjoy such intellectual treats as are seldom afforded in this part of the country.

Remember, Friday evening next the first lecture of the course will be delivered by Rev. A. A. Willitts, a self-educated man, whose motto is "Excelsior." A man who knows no "can't," and attracts larger audiences and gives more universal satisfaction than almost any other orator of the present day.

About twenty years have elapsed since camphene and burning fluid first [illegible] burning fluid. The [illegible] of light which it [illegible] French and [illegible] it [illegible] thousands of families. But to many it has proved itself a treacherous friend indeed.—There is scarcely a city or town in existence where it has been in use, but what has experienced from it accidents, more or less severe. It has swept many of the stage of existence without a moment's warning. It suffers no opportunity to escape of maiming and disfiguring every individual within its reach, and of destroying our pleasant homes and combustible property. It is estimated that the number of its victims surpasses that killed by extract of vitriol. Whether this calculation would stand the test of comparison or not, we are unable to say;—one thing, however, is very certain, when looking over our weekly exchanges, we rarely, if ever, escape noticing at least two or three deaths resulting from it, or its twin sister—burning-fluid. Only last week, Miss HANNAH HARRIS, a worthy young lady of this town, was burned so severly with burning-fluid that she died from its effects in less than twenty-four hours after. The particulars of the case are as follows:

Having purchased a fresh supply of fluid of Mr. Whipple, a gentleman who carries it through the town, she put it into a bottle used only for that purpose. Filling it very full, quite an effort was required to replace the cork. While carrying the bottle across the room to its accustomed place, she at the same time pressed the cork in very tightly, and, just as she was passing the stove, the bottle bursted, spilling the fluid both upon the stove and her dress. It caught fire immediately; and in a moment's time she was all in a blaze. She and her mother were the only persons in the room, and did all in ther power to smother the fire. They thought of the carpet and endeavored to use it, but could not, as it was nailed to the floor. The suffering girl then rushed into the street, when assistance arrived, but not until too late to save her. The fire was, with some difficulty, extinguished, and the poor girl was carried back to the house, burned nearly to death. She caught fire on Friday last, at 11 o'clock, A. M., and died at 4 on the following morning.

Mrs. Harris was also burned very badly, in trying to save her daughter, but it is thought that she will finally recover.

It is very true, that by exercising much care, many such accidents might be avoided. But, as every one will admit, it is impossible for any one to become perfectly familiar with anything dangerous, and at all times be fully conscious of its danger, and regard it as a fiend, ready at the first opportunity, to hurl them into eternity. Such is the case in many families who have used camphine or burning-fluid for years with perfect safety. They become so familiar with them, that they cease to regard them as more dangerous than ordinary lights.—Hence the cause of so much suffering, the many deaths and loss of property. We are inclined to doubt the propriety of introducing such dangerous substances into families, and think that their general use should be abandoned. The fact that there is an article now in use, which is an excellent substitute for them, renders it quite probable that, in the course of a few years, it will be used altogether in their stead. We have reference to "Coal Oil," a notice of which appears below.

COAL OIL.

One of the greatest discoveries of the present age is that of "Coal Oil," manufactured from bituminous coal which abounds in Kentucky. For some months past experiments have been made with it, until it is so improved as to be free from the odious qualities which heretofore prevented its introduction into general use. As a portable illuminating substance it has no equal for brilliancy and economy, being far superior to any light heretofore brought into general use. The illuminating Oil manufactured from Kentucky coal gives a light equal to camphene or gas, and is preferable to either, having no explosive properties, and is as safe for use as sperm oil. When burned in the improved Coal Oil lamps, it is the cheapest and most brilliant light ever introduced. Being a new article, it is offered for sale with innumerable unmeaning titles, and at scores of places in the city, many of which are mere bogus establishments, and the oil and lamps sold there unfit for use. We would therefore advise those who contemplate using it to call at the Wholesale and Retail Depot, No. 132 South Second Street, Philadelphia, where the pure article may be obtained. We understand that Mr. Whipple, who has been supplying this County to a considerable extent with burning-fluid, will have in a few days a large supply of this and the non-explosive fluid, so that none need fear accidents happening from the use of either of these articles, which are so much cheaper and better than other lights.

For the benefit of those who wish to know a handy place to obtain the article, or a lamp of any description, we refer them to the Fluid Man's Depot, lately opened in this town, in the store formerly occupied by Isaac Norcross, Commerce Street.

THE PASTOR OF THE OLD STONE CHURCH.—A neat little volume with the above title has been laid on our table by Mr. Benj. O. Thompson of this place. It contains 144 pages, is gotten up in good style, and will undoubtedly meet with ready sale. The work was compiled by Rev. B. B. Hotchkin, and contains the Memorial Judge Elmer's Eulogy, and Rev. N. C. Burt's Address, with other interesting matter. The work is embellished with a [illegible] sketch of the Old Stone Church, and a portrait of [illegible] taken at the time of his decease. Thanks are tendered for a copy of this work, and we wish the author success. It is for sale at the office of this paper, or at Brewster's, or S. L. Pithian's, as but a limited number of copies have been printed.

[illegible] Convention.

[illegible] your readers [illegible] Sabbath School [illegible] be interesting [illegible] done at the Sabbath School convention held at New Brunswick on the 3d and 4th of this month, invitations having been previously sent to almost every pastor throughout the State, requesting that their Sabbath Schools should send delegates to attend the meeting. On Wednesday morning the meeting commenced. Rev. [illegible] Webb, of New Brunswick, was called to the chair after prayer, proceeded to business; the morning session was taken up in appointing committees, &c. The first business of the afternoon session was appointing officers for the Convention. His excellency Gov. Newell, was appointed President, on taking the chair he expressed his pleasure in being able to co-operate in such a good work. On account of previous engagements he could only be with us a few minutes. On leaving he gave up the chair to the senior Vice President. The time was principally occupied in debating the subject of forming a permanent Sabbath School Association, which discussion was participated in by a large number of the delegates; also, by Mr. Burtis, of the American Sunday School Union, who spoke of the good that had been done by similar organizations in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut. After the subject had been discussed, it was resolved to form a State Sunday School Association, and a committee was appointed to draft a Constitution. In the evening addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr Fish, of Newark, and Rev. Mr. Whitaker, of Bordentown. President Frelinghysen was expected to have addressed the meeting, but on account of indisposition, was not there. The first part of the session, on Thursday morning, was occupied in hearing reports from different Sabbath Schools. The Committee on Constitution reported, and a Constitution was adopted. The officers are a President, one Vice President from each co-operating denomination; Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Treasurer, and a Secretary in each County. The duties of the County Secretary, I can best explain by copying part of articles 3 and 4 of Constitution:—"The duties of the County Secretary shall be to call a County Convention of the Teachers and friends of Sunday Schools at as early a day as practicable after the adjournment of the State Association; to visit as many Churches and Sunday Schools in the County as possible, co-operating with the Township Secretaries in awakening and sustaining an interest in the Sunday School Cause, and to collect such facts and statistics for the Annual meeting of the State Association as may be desirable, and to make a report to the Corresponding Secretary at some time prior to the annual meeting of the State Sunday School Association. The County Conventions are expected to form permanent County Organizations, and at their first meetings, and annually thereafter, to appoint one or more in each Township, to whom shall be committed the general interest of the Sunday School cause as connected with this association." In the afternoon the officers were appointed. President, Theodore Frelinghyson; Vice Presidents, Rev. Dr. Webb, Rev. S. Y. Monroe, Prof. Cook, Hon. Ira S. Whitehead, Hon. M. O. Halstead; Recording Secretary, W. J. Magee; Corresponding Secretary, J. G. Sweet; Treasurer, Hon. James Bishop; the County Secretary for Cumberland, Isaac W. Mulford; Salem, T. D. F. Rusling; Cape May, Rev. Mr. Willamson; Atlantic, Rev. C. E. P. Mayhew; Camden, A. J. Dumont.

The meeting adjourned to meet at Trenton on the 16th of November, 1859.

The Convention was attended by a large number of delegates from the different evangelical denominations, and union and good feeling prevailed throughout. It is hoped that every Sabbath School in the state will send one or more delegates to the next Convention. The minutes of the Convention will be printed and distributed to the Pastors and Sabbath Schools throughout the State at an early day. M.

Memoir of Dr. Willets.

The subject of this sketch was born at Beesley's Point, on the bank of Egg Harbor River, on the glorious fourth of July 1801. When a child his parents moved to Willets Point, a few miles south of the former place, where he remained until his 15th year. In the latter part of August, 1815, he with the consent of his parents, left the parental roof to seek and make his fortune. He commenced his efforts in the village where he died. There he exercised himself for a period of eight years, in the capacity of clerk, four years with Mr. Joshua Brick, Esq., who (the feeble, still lingers on these mortal shores and four years with Mr. Thomas Lee, dec'd. In the year 1826 he was married to Miss Hannah Brick, and took a farm near Buckshead, for three years. From thence, he moved to Dyers Creek, where he dwelt 16 years. The winter of 1837 he spent in Philadelphia, College, with Dr. Gilbert, and returned to his full course of business, with renewed energy, taking his degree, with satisfaction to himself and the approbation of his patrons.

In the year 1842 he was elected by the voters of Cape May, representative to the Legislature and served two years in the house of Assembly, and was the author of the new Constitution, which was adopted by the people, giving general satisfaction to the sensible portion.

In the winter of 1844 he was appointed Justice of the Peace, which office he held until his death, a period of 15 years, with unimpeachable integrity, and general satisfaction to the public. In the year 1845 he joined the M. E. Church, and continued till death, a most worthy and useful member.—

[illegible] was skillful and highly [illegible] employed him.

His [illegible] were of a superior order, [illegible] would most favorably [illegible] him for a promising [illegible] election. His cheerful spirit, easy and graceful manners, pure and flowing style, and general intelligence, together with his strong ability, tended to make him one of the most agreeable, entertaining, and profitable companions, and no house a place of peculiar attraction. In his death [illegible] a most severe and irreparable loss. He was one of the best of husbands, children are robbed of a kind and affectionate father, the community a most worthy citizen; the Church an invaluable member; and the Gospel a liberal supporter. But our loss is certainly an infinite gain. He died as the good man dies. The last year of his earthly pilgrimage he suffered extremely from a malicious attack upon his moral character. All this he bore in the spirit of a true Christian; sealed his innocenty with his dying testimony, and left a blessing for his enemies. A short time previous to his death, when it was known to himself and family that he must die in a few hours, he was asked by his pastor if he would forgive his persecutors, "O yes, said he, "and love them too." Shortly after, he quoted distinctly the following words:

"When life sinks apace, and death is in view,
The word of his grace does comfort me thro'
Not fearing or doubting, with Christ on my side
I shall die shouting, the Lord will provide."

And then added, "yes he does provide." His disease was Erysipelas. His suffering was great, but of short duration. On Tuesday, October 19th, he ceased to suffer, work and live. On the following Friday, his remains were committed to the dust, attended by a number of ministers, and a large concourse of weeping and sympathising friends, there, to sleep till waked by the sound of the arch-angel's trump. By the solicitation of the writer, and the kindness of the Dr.'s former pastor, the solemn occasion was improved by an eloquent and impressive sermon delivered by Rev. F. Robbins, from the words, "He was a good man."

"Dearest brother, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

Politics and the Election. A street fight.—High tides. Three children burned to death.

MR. EDITOR:—Nothing of interest to your readers, having transpired at our County seat lately. I have been silent. For some time past, every day in the week, and Sunday too," have been appropriated to the business and talk of the day—politics. The election, however, being over, the fever is subsiding—men begin to attend to their business—the State which was upside down, is now "right side up,"—the "country is safe"—the union not yet dissolved—some men are elected, others are not,—the world still revolves on its axis—sunbeams have not been split into shingle shavings, nor moonbeams woven into green ribbons. Hurrah for we! The elections in our county, pretty generally, passed off quietly. Last night we had a melee in our hitherto quiet town. The Nixon men attempted to fire a salute, from a canon owned by the citizens of both parties, and the opponents attempted to interfere; a round or two had been fired, when a fight ensued, in which a man named Peachy, was dreadfully beaten by one Ramsey. Several others were injured by blows, whether struck by friends or foes is not known, we believe, as the night was very dark. RUM began the quarrel, the old scoundrel!

We have had unusually high tides in our rivers, overflowing the roads in many places and sweeping hay from the meadows; one gentleman near Oatawba, lost about thirty tons, other night.

A fire occurred at a place called Skunktown, five miles from the Landing, on Tuesday of last week, consuming the house of Mr. Archibald Campbell, and burning three of his children to death, aged about three, five, and seven years. The parents were absent, attending a religious meeting, and the children in bed. It is not known how the fire originated. Children should not thus be left alone. Yours,

CURING HAMS.—BRIDGETON, NJ.—A correspondent—Mr. Wm. H. Bonnett, of Warwick, R. I., sends us the following description of a method practised with great success by him for several years in curing hams:—"In the first place, take the cask in which the hams are to be salted, and smoke it for half an hour over a low fire made with walnut chips. He then makes a pickle for two hundred pounds of ham by dissolving fourteen pounds of Turk's Island salt, half a pound of saltpetre, and two pounds of molasses in sufficient water to cover the meat, when placed in a barrel. The pickle is allowed to cool while the meat is being dissolved and is boiling hot. When cooled down, this pickle is poured upon the hams in the barrel, and they are thus left to lay in pickle until they are wanted for smoking, when they are taken out, hung up and smoked with a slow fire of corn cobs, black and red oak chips. When the meat is smoked, it is packed down in barrels, with layers of dry bran between the layers of hams, and thus left until wanted for use. This process has been in use in the family of the writer for several years, giving general satisfaction to his sensitive nose.

In the middle of spring, if hams are intended for general use, they should be taken out of the bran, and hung in a cool place, where they will not mould, and during the hot weather they should be given an occasional smoking, to prevent the worms from taking possession of them. When the hams are wanted for use, they should be taken down and boiled with a little saleratus in the water, to remove the smoke, and then they are ready for the frying pan or oven.

SAVE YOUR DOCTOR BILLS & TIME.

MT. SAVAGE, MD., July 7, 1856.

Dear Sir:—In consequence of taking cold after a bad attack of the measles, some eleven years since, I have from that time suffered greatly with enlargement of the liver and stomach. I have been at times so bad that my life was destaired of. I was induced some time ago, through the persuasion of a friend, Mr. Henry Schaefer, to try a bottle of Hoofland's German Bitters, thinking if it done no good it could do me no harm; and knowing Mr. Shafer to be a gentleman, who would not recommend any thing to me, that he did not have confidence in, before I had taken the third of the bottle my bowels became regular and I had a fine appetite. When I had used two thirds of it I considered my health as good as ever it was, and could eat anything without its disagreeing with me in the least. I now keep a bottle of the Bitters in the house continually, and in case I take cold, or feel unwell, I take one or two doses, and it makes a change in my bowels, which is all I need, whereas, for the past eleven years, my doctor bill has been from $10 to $25 per year, besides loss time and severe illness.

Yours, truly, P. J. THRASHER.

SIXTEEN YEARS IN THE WILDS OF AFRICA.

1,000 AGENTS WANTED TO SELL

Dr. Livingstone's Travels & Explorations

During a residence of 16 Years in the Wilds of Africa. This is a work of thrilling adventure and hair breadth escapes among savage men and more savage nature. Dr. Livingstone was alone and unaided by any white man, travelling with African attendants, among different tribes and nations, all strange to him, and many of them hostile, and altogether forming the most astonishing Book of Travels the world has ever seen. All our Agents acknowledge it as the most saleable book published. The most liberal commission made to agents, in small or large quantities. For particulars, address

A. W. BRADLEY, Publisher,
48 North Fourth Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Copies sent by mail, free, on receipt of the price, $1.25.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

From among the hundreds of favorable notices from the most responsible journals of the country, of our cheap edition of Livingstone's Travels and Explorations in Africa, we take the following:

"It abounds in descriptions of strange and wonderful scenes, among a people and in a country entirely new to the civilized world; and should be regarded as one of the most interesting books issued within the past year."—Daily Democrat, Emerson, N. J.

"It is emphatically an edition for the people; and, judging from the rapidity with which it is selling, it is fully appreciated by them."—Christian Freeman, Boston.

"The book is having a great run, and will be read by every reading man, woman and child, in this as well as in other lands"—Ashtabula (Ohio) "Telegraph."

"The work is finely illustrated, well printed, and firmly bound, thus answering in every respect the demand for a popular and cheap edition of the Journeys and Research in South Africa." Those of our readers who would have a delightful book for reading at any hour, will not be disappointed in this work.—"U. S. Journal."

"With truth we can say, that seldom is presented to the reading public a work containing such a vast amount of solid instruction as the one in question. The volume is handsomely illustrated, and presents that unique appearance of exterior for which Mr. Bradley's publications are noted."—"Family Magazine."

"This interesting work should be in the hands of every one. Its interesting pages of adventure are full of instruction and amusement. Ten thousand copies it is stated have been sold in one month."—Auburn "American."

"Dr. Livingstone's Travels in South Africa [illegible] day Post."

"The edition of Dr. Livingstone's Travels, published by J. W. Bradley, is just what it purports to be. Like all Mr. Bradley's publications, it is excellently gotten up."—"Toledo Agitator," Pa.

"We can recommend the edition of Dr. Livingstone's Travels, published by Bradley, of Philadelphia, in every way worthy of public patronage. Its excellence and its cheapness recommend it over all others."—"Frank Leslie's Magazine."

CAUTION.—The attention of the Publisher has been called to spurious editions of this work, put forth as "Narratives of Dr. Livingstone's Travels in Africa." Ours is the only cheap edition of this great work published, and contains all the important matter of the English edition, which is sold at six dollars.
