SECTION OF BOUNTY LANDS.

ALL persons interested in obtaining WARRANTS for Military Bounty Land due to the soldiers of the late Army of the United States, are requested to take particular notice of the above Caption, or TITLE, in order to distinguish between the information that issues from THIS OF-FICE, and the instructions given by the Commissioner of the General Land of FICE attached to the TREASURY DE-PARTMENT; from whence the Patents, or Definitive Titles to the land here spoken of, as well as of all other lands sold and ceded by the United States, must issue.

The present notice appears to be necessary, from errors that have frequently occured of late in the proceedings of persons who have lost, or pretend to have lost, an "Honorable Discharge," or the evidence of a Military Land Warrant which has been issued upon such a discharge.

A special law was made by Congress for the relief of persons who have bona fide sustained such loss as was contemplated by this law. The executive rules and regulations applicable to it, were duly promulgated so long ago as July 1816; of course, according to the general tenor of all laws of that class, that is, the execution of which is directed to be according to "such rules and regulations as the President of the United States shall prescribe,' -those rules became a part of the law, and are only to be abrogated, or altered, by the same line of authority through which they were first established; excenting, indeed, the Sovereign authority should interfere.

In several instances recently presented at this office, individuals, who probably may be entitled to the benefit of the law above cited, have erroneously confounded their procedings with those directed by a late regulation proceeding from The General Land Office where blank declarations ready to be filled up, have been distributed throughout the United States, for other laudable purposes, but which are not calculated to serve in a compliance with the law relative to Lost Warrants and Discharges; in the execution of which, it is not intended that any innovation shall be sanctioned.

For the information of all persons interested in such cases, it is thought proper to re-print the following correct copy of the rules and regulations in question from which no deviation can be permit-

"Rules and regulations to govern in application at the Section of Bounty Lands, War Department, in cases of Lost Warrants and of Lost Discharges.

War Department. The act of Congress of the 26th of April 1816, having provided that, where any Military Land Warrants shall be lost or destroyed, upon due proof thereof to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War, a Patent shall issue in the same manner as if the Warrant was produced; and, when the same proof shall be produced, that any Soldier of the Regular army has lost his Discharge and Certificate of faithful service, the Secretary of War shall cause papers to be furnished such soldier as will entitle him to his Land Warrant and Patent: To enable all persons comprehended by the provisions of the said act, to avail themselves of the relief intended to be granted, the Secretary for the Department of War has directed that, in case of Military Land Warrants, which have been lost or destroyed, the party shall, upon oath in writing, state the time, place, and manner of such loss or destruction, the date and number of the Warrant, and the company and regiment to which the Soldier belonged at the time of his discharge; and also the state, county, and township, in which he resides. The oath must be made before an officer Iduly qualified to administer it and the official character and signature of such officer must be certified by the clerk of the County, the Mayor of the City, or by such other officer as is required by the laws and usages of the state where it is mage. Every application will be advertised one month in the papers of the state where the applicant resides, before any decision will be made in the case by the Secretary of the Department. Evidence in corrobation of that of the party, will be required, where it is not satisfactorily shown to be out of his power to produce it.
In the case of lost DISCHARGES, the deposition, in addition to the fime, place, and manner, of the loss or destruction of the DISCHARGE, must set forth the time and place of enlistment, the company and regiment to which the Soldier belonged at the time of his discharge, the date of the discharge, and rank and name of the officer who signed it :- it must also state whether the discharge contained the certificate of faithful service required by law, or the words "Honorably Discharg EE," or words of that import. The deposition of a disinterested witness, as to the service and discharge of the applicant, in corrobation of his own testimony. Where this is not produced, the reason of its nonproduction must be satisfactorily stated. The testimony must be authenticated in the manner [above] prescribed in the case of lost. Warrants. Where the precise dates or numbers cannot be stated, they may be stated to the best of the recollection of the witnesses whose credibility the Magistrate who takes the evidence must certify in the usual form.

July 20th 1816.

The papers which promulgate the laws of the United States will insert the above once a week for three successive weeks, and forward their accounts to the "Section of Bounty Lands,"
War Department, for payment.

LOVE AND PATRIOTISM; 02,

THE EXTRAORDINARY ADVENTURES OF M. DUPORTAIL,

Late Major General in the Armies of the United States. Interspersed with many Surprising Hacidents in the Life of the late. COUNT PULASKI.

Pulaski here interrupts his daughter with a certain degree of harshness: Indiscreet and weak woman! exclaimed he, is it before me that you dare to hold such a discourse as this?

Alas! replied she in a mild accent, alas! must

I forever tremble for the life of a father and a husband! Lodoiska also made the most affecting complaints to me, and sighedafter a more happe futurity, while fortune was preparing for us the most cruel reverse 🤈

Our Cossacks, placed at the out-posts, now came in from all parts, and informed us that the Russian army was approaching. Pulaski reckonsed on being attacked at beak of day; but he was not: however, about the middle of the following. night I was informed that the enemy was preparing to force our entrenchments.

Pulaski, always ready, always active, was actually defending thems during the course of this fatal night, he atchieved every thing that might have been expected from his valour and experience.

We repel the assailants no less than five dif ferent times, but they returned unceasingly to the charge, pour in fresh troops at every new attack, and, during the last one, penetrate into the very heart of our camp by three different avenues, and at one and the same time. Zaremba was killed by my side; a crowd of no-bles fell in this bloody action; the enemy refus cd to give any quarter. Furious at seeing all my friends perish before my eyes, I resolved to pre-cipitate myself into the midst of the Bussianbat.

Heedless man! exclaims Pulaski, what blind fury urges you towards your destruction? My are my is entirely routed—destroyed—but my cour, age still remains! Why should we perish useless. here? Let us begone! I will conduct you into climes where we may raise up new enemies against the Russian name. Let us live, since we can still serve our country! Let us save ourselves, let us save Lodoiska!

Lodoiska! am I capable of abandoning her.

We instantly run to her tent-we are scarce in time: we carry her off; precipitate ourselves into the neighbouring woods, and on the next morning we venture to sally forth, and present ourselves before the gate of a castle that was not altogether unknown to us.

It indeed belonged to a noble Pole, who had served during some time in our army. Micislas served during some time in our army. Micislas, instantly comes forth, and offers an asylum, which he advises us, however, to make use of for a few hours only. He informs us, that a very astonishing piece of news had spread abroad on the former evening, and began to be confirmed, according to which the King himself had been carried away out of Warsaw, that the Russians had pursued the conspirators and brought back the monarch to his capital; and that, in facilities the monarch to his capital; and that, in fine, it was talked of putting a price upon the head of Pulas-ki, who was suspected of being the author of this

Believe me, says he, when I assure you, whe ther you are engaged or not in this bold plot, that you ought to fly; leave your unforms here, which will assuredly betray you: I will instantly supply you with clothes which are less remarka-ble; and as to Lodoiska, I myself will conduct her to the place which you have chosen for your Lodoiska now, interrupts Micislas: the place of my retreat shall be than of their flight, for I will accompany them every where.

Pulaski represents to his daughter, that she was unable to sustain the fatigue incident to such a long journey, and that besides we should be liable to continual dangers.

The greater the peril is, replies she, the more Lought to partake it with you. You have repea ed to me a hundred times, that the daughter of Pulaski ought not to be an ordinary woman. For the last eight years I have constantly lived in the midst of alarm; I have seen nothing but scenes of carnage and horror. Death his environed me on all sides, and menaced me at every moment, will you not permit me to brave it now by your side? Is not the life of Lodoisk? c nnected with that of her father? Loyzinski, will not the stroke that fells you to the ground. send your wife to the grave? and am I'vno longer worthy-

I now interrupt Lodoiska, and join with he father, in stating the reasons which determined us to leave her in Poland.—She hears me with impatience: Ungrateful man, exclaims she at length, will you fly without me? You shall remain replies Pulaski, with Lovzinski's sisters, and I prohibit you.

"PUNCTUALITY IS THE LIFE OF BUSINESS."

From an essay under the above title in a southern print, we make the following extract, for our own benefit-

Perhaps it may not be amiss to remember the p inter in my discourse. He trusts every body, he knows not whom; his money is scattered every where, he hardly knows where to look for it. His paper, his ink, his presses and his types, his labour and his living, all must punctually be paid for. You, Mr. —, and Mr. —, and Mr. —, and Mr. —, and Mr. — and wour maintenance in the maintenance dren, and your neighbours have been amused and informed, and I hope improved by it-if you miss one paper you think very hard of the prin-ter or post for it, for you had rather go without your supper than paper have you ever compiled with the condition of subscription? Death of the Princess Gharlotte -- By late arrivals at New-York, London and Liverpool papears to the 10th and 12th of November have been received. The only event of importance which occupies these papers is the death of the Princess Charlotte, the only legitimate heir of the Prince Regent to the throne of England, who expired on the 7th of November, a few hours after having been delivered of a still born hale child. The Princess Charlotte was in the 22d year of her age, and was married the 2d of May 1815. As a Political event, the death of his Princess is of great moment, when we take into view the advanced ages and the circum-stances in which the members of the royal family are placed. With regard to the other collateral branches of the family, there are one child, ve grand, and four great grand children of the the Queen of Denmark, his mujesty's sisters, on hom the crown will descend on failure of lineat descendants from the English princes. Under existing circumstances the Duke of York, is presumptive heir to the crown. No member of the royal family has at this time a legitimate child living.

New Daily Paper .-- Proposals have recently been issued in Philadelphia, by Richard Bache, for the Publication of a new daily newspaper, to e called the FRANKLIN GAZETTE.

New Branch Bank .- Great exertions are said to be making at Albany, to obtain the establish-ment of a Branch of the United States Bank in that city, with some prospect of success.

Buenos Ayres ... Captain Smith airived at Proridence from Buenos Avres, reports, that the Birector Puerrydon had reared from the government, and that another President had been elected for six months, in his stead; that prizes to the Patriot privateers were arriving there daily some of immense value. The Portuguese troops were still besieged in Monte Vidio, by general Artegas, the Patriot commander, and were said to be much distressed for provisions.

Aneha Island taken -Official intelligence has been received of the capture of Amelia I land by the U. S. troops under the command of Colone Bankhead: Commodore Aury and his troops was allowed to evacuate the island—One of the Representatives of the government of Amelia, has arrived at New-York, on his way to Washington Mr. T. S. Holmes, late secretary to Com. Aury has furnished the New-York papers with a coby of the answer of Com. Aury to the demand for his surrender.

Mediterraneun Squadron.-The U.S. frigate Constellation, capt. Shaw, has arrived at Norfolk from Gibraltar. Passengers capt. Creighton and lieutenants Watson and Nicholson of the Navy and Captains Hall and Breckennidge, late of the marine corps. The Washington, com Chauncy, United States, capt. Crane, Peacock, capt. Rod-gers, and Spaik, capt. Nicholson, were left at Cibraltar.—The Erie, capt. Gamble had sailed

Health of the Soldiery —It is stated in a Boston paper, that in all the forts, &c. from Castine to New-London, in which are 1019 men, only one has died in the last six months, and that one of a lingering consumption.

The Battle-Field.

Reader! whatever may be thy situation in hie —whether doomed to houest toil, or cher-libed in the lap of luxury and ease,—it alive to observation,-if susceptible of humanity,-thou have witnessed with indignation, the horrid havock, the baleful consequences of the wars, which have so long lacerated the fondest ties and learest interests of humanity. Avarice may allege, ambition affirm, and prejudice assert the necessity of shedding human blood; but pity reason, and religion alsown the barbarous maxim. The period approaches, the faint glimmerings of its dawn already appear, when the proudest glory of the Hero will vanish like the passing meteor; when the warrior's fury will be viewed with hor-ror,—his character with contempt, his name with detestation. The sanguinary deeds which have so long blotted the page of history, caught the ideot stare of folly, and attracted the mistaken admiration of mankind, will be contem plated with surprise and pity by the simple, pious, and philosophic votary of peace. The triumphal arch, the victor's column, and the ruined fort, will be viewed by him as the bideous vestiges of an age productive of Warriors and Savages, when society was enfeebled by corruption, devoted to errors, and replete with crimes.
Were writers of all descriptions unanimous in pointing the finger of contempt, hatred, and scorn, at the Naggard forms of avarice, ambition, and revenge and in painting the scenes of desolation produced by these furies, in all their hative deformity and horror; the hum in heart recoiling from such disgusting spectacles, would gradually regain its pristine placidity,—every bosom would swell with the inspirations of benevolence,—the mists of prejudice which throw ground the warrior's head, a halo of apparent glory would vanish,—and "the mighty conquerors of the earth" would be most justly associated with robbers, murderers, and assassins, excelling them only in the audacity, number, and enormity of their crimes.

The following stanzas were chiefly com-posed, while Humanity still wept over the fatal field of Waterloo.

CHILD of Coila! wake thy lyre; Sing the toils,—the woes of War.: Flash the warrior's glow of wrath,— Slight of formen, scorn of death, O'er thy native hills afar!

Sing the scene where havock reigns; Let the war-shout swell thy strains; Mark Destruction's giant path. Thro' the horrid tide of death;

Mark the squadron's loud huzza, Cheering to the charge again.

Bid that squadren disappear, Fallen in their fierce career, A heap of carnage on the plain; Let the storm of battle rise,—
Shouts of triumph,—dying cries,—
Onward,—enward, point the brave
To vict'ry or a bloody grave!

"They fly !- they fly !- the formen fly !" Let the ghastly havock cease, Bid the beamless Sun descend-Bid dull evining's shadows bend, In darkness, o'er the vale of peace. But ah! that peace !-sa sad its reign,-So drear its silence on the plain,-That not the war-shout's deaf'ning bray. Inspires such horror and dismay.

Beings here, once fear'd, or lov'd,-Madly fierce, or sternly brave,-Possess'd of passion, sense, and mind,---Friends and foemen, -- are consign'd, To one wide, unhallow'd grave, Tyrant! mark the gory plain,--Mark the mingled thousands slain,--And in sad, remorseful mond,

Bid the soldier' spirit rest; Pour the death-song o'er his grave:

Think who pays the price of blood.

If ambition fie'd his brease, He fought, the fell ignobly brave. O'er his grass-bound covert low, Time's impetuous stream will flow His blood-smear'd arms, in future days, Will meet the fear-struck plough-boy's gaze.

Child of Coila! change the strain;--The widow's---orphan's sorrows tell, Mark the matron's bursting sigh, And the virgin's wilder'd eye.

Brooding o'er the last farewell. Weeping orphan! stay that tear,--It falls not on a father's bier; The long, rank grass waves darkly o'er His ashes, on a distant shore!

Tyrant! can thy boasted pow'r Raise wan sorrow's drooping head? It canno joy to grief impart; It cannot heal the broken heart It cannot -- cannot raise the dead! Mourners! hush your weary woes; Tranquil be your last repose: Now the daisy's artless bloom Springs and withers on your tomb.

Ye who fire the train of War, Explosive of a nation's joy; Can ye, for some idle name, For interest, or inglorious fame, Bid the sateless sword destroy? The hapless or skan's curse will swell. The clangour of your fun'rat knell! Posterity will chaunt the stave Of execuation o'er your grave.

Child of Coila ! hush thy lyre! Hush the sad, unsoothing strain; And never may such notes of woe, Dread, and indignation-flow
From its trembling chords again! Oblivion? draw thy mystic gloom Round the warrior's narrow tomb! Man! dwell thou in social bliss

Beneath the olive-shade of PEACE! AMICOPACIS

FOR THE WASHINGTON WHIG.

Variety's the very spice of life,

That gives it all its flavor COWPER. A few days ago it happened to me to be where a number of neighbors had got together to while away a rainy afternoon in social chat. Their assembling so, was altogether a casualty, for not one could tell why he came there: there had been no recent disaster or calanty in the ne gh-horhood to excite curiosity—John's hogs had not rooted up my uncle Sam's potatoes, neither had his cows got into the corn-the wind had not blown down a single barn, neit er liad the inundation destroyed the buckwheat.-What it was b ought them together so, the dear above knows, but so it happened that they were all sitting to-gether, and all talked by turns.

I had just before this, lost myself in a fog of spleen, (an invariable at endant on rainy weather) but the scene now opened, imparted an air of vul-gar cheerfulness to every thing around, and I seated myself in a corner of the room, to "laugh and be well." After some time spent in loose disjointed chat, is was agreed, that two of the company should be set apart to talk for the rest; and that their conversation should be argumentative; the subject to be given by the company.— This arrangement was highly granfying to me, and now every cloud of dullness was swept, as with a besom, from my intellectual horizon.—

A subject was soon found in considering the ills of life, and the question proposed was this:-"Of two evils, which is the greater—a smoky house, or a scolding wife!" Our champions Ralph Ring'em, and Tim Twist'em, squar'd away for ve bal combat.—Ralph began in his usual style, "I hate a smoky house above all things, for to this cause may be attributed all the scold ing that aunt Rachel ever did .- I can very well remember, when she was mild as a May morning the day thro, and knew no more about scoldthan a pet lamb, and so she would have remained to this day, if she had not got shov'd into that awkward house there, that's always as full of smoke as the garret of a glass factory.—Be-sides making wives scold, it makes children cross; and I hold, that a house full of fretful peevish crying children, is a greater evil than either of these we are now considering -If a se of cross children wont set a woman's temper a-going, I dont know what will. You know George Grumble very well; only look at him now as he passes, and see what he has come to just by living in a smoky house.—When he mar ried Tempe Tacit there was nt a prettier couple in all the Township, nor a pair that liv'd happier than they, until George moved in that house that Hiram, the bungling stone mason, built for him, the year after the whiskey-boy affair-That has alw ys been a smoky house you know; the very first fire they kindled in it, smoked the white ceiling as brown as an old Dutch bible cover.—Tempe nearly lost her eyes—the child

cry'd incessantly, and George promised his wife that he would have it altered; but you know how these promises are fulfilled generally; every day George renewed his promise, and every day Tempe pressed him to send for the chimney maker. Human forbearance has its bounds you know; Tempe's sensibilities did not differ radically from other people's; her patience was a length exhausted, and she began to fret. George's business generally kept, bim from home all day, but he now, began to stay out of evenings he grew neglectful, every day weaned him more effectually from home, and its ties. He mowed his grass; half cured the hay, and then left in out till it spoiled in the raint he ploughed ling ground, but sow'd no more than half of it-hi never replaced a bad rail with a good one, and the neighbors cattle and hogs destroyed his crops before they were ripe—he grew angry and revengeful—his countenance changed from a placid cheerfulness, to a scowling severity. He one day took his gun, and shot three sheep and five hogs that had unwittingly got hato his pumpkin paich—an hour or two afterwards he grew ashained, and not liking to feel ashained, he went off to the tavern to drown his bad feelings; as he said, in a glass of mim. There with haif a dozen refugees from smoky houses, he continued "wetting 'tother eye," until he began to reel and stagger, and folder of "not drunk nor reel and stagger, and folder of "not drunk nor reel and stagger, and folder of "not drunk nor reel and stagger, and folder of "not drunk nor reel and stagger, and folder of "not drunk nor reel and stagger, and folder of "not drunk nor reel and stagger, and folder of "not drunk nor reel and stagger, and folder of the same than the same and th get sober, but brother to both." From this time, George declined fast. He soon lost his ambition and sunk down to what you now see him, a wandering vagebond, begging an idle chew of tobacco, of all he meets. Tempe—unfortu-nate girl—baring her bosom to the drawing storms of life that threatened to destroy her, determined to resist the evil to the last; but her efforts were vain; a series of overwhelming distresses hurried her into the grave.—Her children were register-ed with paupers, and bound out by the overseers; and remain only the living monuments of one truth, namely :- A smoky house has desolated a fumily! Now, I venture to say, that if George had rebuilt his chimney, and kept the smoke out of his house, he would at this day have been a wealthy and respectable citizen; and Tempe, once the sweet solace of his life, would have continued to soften his cases, soothe his sorrows, and encrease his enjoym nts. Here then Tim, you see a whole family desolated by a smoky house, and there is nothing in this instance out of the common course of things.—Where is there a scolding wife that has done as much? Where is there a scolding wife that was not made so by smoke. I hold that a scolder is a mere matter of smoke, any way.-A wife may scold, and scold, but then her clack never disturbs but one of the senses; whereas a smoky house disturbs them all: it blinds the eyes, offends the nose, deprayes taste and appetite—impedes breathing—blunts the feeling—disturbs the circulation of the blood, and animal spirits, and thereby occasions disorder and confusion in the operations of the mind.—These are its immediate and direct effects; in its consequences, it learns men to forget their promises, and become treacherous; it destroys patience—breaks the bounds of forbearance—excites to fretfulness—augments the cares—aggravates the anxieties, and destroys the happiness of life; it drives a man from his fire-side and family, and breaks the strong ties of natural affection; it excites to revenge, shame, and its consequence, intemperance.—It changes the careful farmer to a mere indolent clodpole; it makes youth look like age; turns philosophers into fools, and nier into brutes; and what is worse than all, it kills folks by inches—as it did poor Tempe. Now, what can all the mischiefs in the world do more than this? Kill us, there s an end.-Pd rather donk castor-oil by the pail full, than live in the smoke; it is worse than any bodily disease, our Doctors tell us of, it is worse than any punishment which the refined cruelty of savages have invented.—The halter, the gullot ne, the rack, the tortures of SANTA FE, or the barbarities of the Spanish Inquisition, are nothing to it—No, no-thing to it!" Here, Ralph finished, and it was high time too, for he had got the whole company into the spirit of his subject, and it was better to leave them there than to lead them out by a train of dry remarks—It was really pleasing, to see the various effect that Ralph's harangue had upon the members of the company .-- There was our 'Squire Sueman, and a number of others that shewed many signs of feeling; but I was most diverted with the manners of Se jeant Slash'em, who used to dash away at Billingsport; he kept his seat most of the time, but it was with difficulty; towards the winding up of the matter, he had as many as forty thousand ideas in his brain, and each one struggling to kick itself out—
"Blood o'noons!" said he, "Ten Batteries—yes, ten batteries, would I undertake to storm single handed, rather than be cooped up in a single handed, rather than be cooped up in a smoky kitchen ten minutes? — Batteries! what kind of Batteries, Sergeant? said our 'Squire.— "Why, as to that, I'll—I'll—leave Tim Two em to tell you, as I see he wants to talk

CONGRESSIONAL

Extracts of letters to the Editor, dated Washington, Jan. 6, 1818.

"On the 1st. inst. the President's House was open for company, from 1 to 3 o'clock; during which time, a large number of the Members of Congress, Officers of the government, citizens, and strangers called at the President's, tendered him their salutations, and in free and familiar intercourse, exchanged civilities with each other.

The bill providing for the pay of the Members of Congress was yesterday reported by Mr. Holmes: In it the per diem allowance was fixed at $9 a day, and the same sum for every 20 miles travelling to and from the seat of government. Today the House went into Committee on the subject, went through the bill, reported it to the house, and ordered it to be engrossed for a third reading to-morrow, with very little debate ---The Ayes and Noes on the proposit on to amend in the House were ordered, and are as follows: On the motion to strike out 9 and insert 6 dollars for the daily allowance of members, Majority against it.

On the proposition to strike out 9 and insert Ayes 99. Noes 70.

Majority, 29.

The mileage was in the first place reduced to $6 for every 20 miles, by a majority of 17, but was afterwards reconsidered, and fixed at $8, the same as allowed for daily service .-- In this state the bill now stands and will probably pass to-morrow.

The Holydays are over; important business is. pressing upon the consideration of Congress, and it is probable, that during the remainder of the Session, there will be little relaxation.

To-day Mr. Strother presented a petition and documents from Gen Armistead T. Mason, contesting the election of Mr. Mercer of Virginia, to a seat in the House, which was referred to the Committee of Elections.

The Committee of Elections have reported against the memorial of C. Hammond, who contested the right of Mr Herrick of Ohio, to a seat, on account of his having held an office under the general gove nment, after the 4th of March last, the time at which the memorialist insisted that the incompatibility commenced. If this report should be sanctioned; which is probable, it will decide the whole of ten cases included in the list received from the President."

Washing on, Jan. 7, 1818. "After an unsuccessful attempt to re-commit the engrossed Compensation bill, as it is fashionable to call it, the vote was taken on its final passagn, and decided by ayes and hays as follows: For the Bill, 109

Againts it, 60 ... Five or six of those who voted in the negative a declared their opinion in favour of nine dollars; or even a higher .m, and as that could not be obtained, they would vote against every less. sum. An extrao dinary circumstance was disclosed to the House to day. A colonel John Andesron, of the Michigan Territory, who has been here for some time past urging claims, in his own right, and as agent for others in said Territory, for destruction of property, and damages sugarined during the late war, who had, so far as observed, conducted himself with property, and succeeded in gaining the sympathies of many of the members, and in whose favor two bills had been reported by the Committee of Claims, one of which had passed the House, presented this morning to Mr. Williams of N. C. Cha rman of the Claims Committee, a letter signed by himself, in which he engages to pay said Mr. Williams, as a compensation for the trouble he had given him, and the services he was under the necessity of performing as chanman of said com-mittee $500, to be paid as soon as a bill for the relief of certain sufferers on the Detroit Frontier, respecting which he was an agent, should have become a law. Mr. W. after sensibly repelling the indignity, and ordering him from his room, determined upon laying the letter, together with a statement of the facts and circumstances attending the interview with Anderson, before the House, which having been read, it was: unanimously ordered that the Speaker issue his Writ to the sergeant at arms, commanding him to pursue and take the body of the said colonel John Anderson, and him safely to hold in custo-dy, subject to the future directions of the
