CONGRESSIONAL. Extracts of letters to the Editor, dated Washington, Feb. 11, 1819.

"The House have, for the three last days, been principally employed on the general appropriation bill, and a bill from the Senate, proposing to increase the salaries of certain officers of the government; both of which were to day ordered to be engrossed for third readings, and will likely pass to-morrow.

The other bill embraced, when it was received from the Senate, the Heads of Departments and Post Master General. In the house, the Judges of the Supreme Court were added, the annual salaries of which are, it seems, to be advanced.

Proposed Reduction of the Army. "It will be recollected, that in the early part of the present session Mr. Williams of N. C. offered a resolution to reduce the army of the United States-it was then, at his suggestion, laid on thetable. On the 9th inst. it was called up, and referred to the Military Committee, with instructions to enquire into the expediency of the measure. On Thursday, on motion of Mr. Williams, the Military Committee were discharged from the further consideration of it, and being again in the house, and in the power of the mover, was modified to read as follows:

Resolved, That the military peace establishment of the United States shall consist of such proportions of artillery, infantry and riflemen, not exceeding in the whole, 6,000 men, as the President of the United States shall judge proper; and that the Committee on Military Affairs e instructed to report a bill for that purpose.

Yesterday the consideration of it was consented to, when Mr. W. spoke nearly two hours in favor of his proposition; the debate continued until today, the resolution being also advocated by Messrs. Sawyer and Livermore, and opposed by Messrs. Harrison, Simpkins, Johnson of Ky. and Storrs, it was finally ordered to lie on the table, 71 to 66. It is scarcely probable, that it will be taken up again, this session.

Equestrian Statue.

The Senate have passed a bill for the erection of an Equestrian Statue of the late Gen. George Washington, in the Capital Square of the city;-$150,000 is calculated as the probable cost. The a third reading was taken by ayes and noes, Mr. Dickerson voting in the affirmative, and Mr. Wilson in the negative. The vote stood 23 to 14.

District Banks.

Mr. Herbert, from the committee on the district of Columbia, has reported a bill for reducing, upon the Omnium lodged there, must be re-deemed by the 12th of February. The funds fell in consequence a half per cent. district to 6, two in each of the towns of Washington, Georgetown & Alexandria. The bill proposes that the capital stock of the several institutions shall be so united, as that each shall consist of one million of dollars. The banks created by this act are to be required to aid in constructing roads connected with the district. It is, therefore, a favorite object here, to connect this place with the Great Cumberland road, by means of an additional turnpike-a circumstance which; fi effected, would no doubt be of much advantage to it.

FOR THE WASHINGTON WHIG,

THE WOODLAND COTTAGE. The morning breeze blows sweet among the bowers; The wild bee sleeps upon the drooping rose; Sweet is the fragrance of the honied flowers, Sweeter the form that on them courts repose; Upon her cheek the blush of morning glows, Thro' her dark eyes the stars of beauty shine, And from her coral lip such sweetness flows, That biassed love would paint her so divine, A fairy's face might fail to match with Rosa

In sooth she was the fairest form that e'er Hung o'er the lattice of a cottage dome; But in that eye the sympathetic tear, (Tho' formed for pity) never found a home; Wavering and wild she lov'd the wood to roam To scare the the songster from her twittering young;

And thoughtless as the wandering sylph or gnome,

She placed no bridle on that soft toned tongue Where melody itself around the threshold hung. Not so young Geraldwood:-'twas her delight Within the lowly cottage door to stay, And ply her rustic wheel from morn till night, And guard her aged mother's closing day; As oft in retrospect she traced her way To Appalachia's distant hills of blue: And Geraldwood would love with her to stray, When twilight grey her earliest shadows threw, And night's dark waving plume was drenched in morning dew.

Around her face no rays of beauty shone; But yet there was placed sweetness there; And when 'the hollow, winds would make their moan

She loved the sound that murmured through the air: And oft the pensiveness of sacred prayer, A soul of spotless purity would prove; As when the vesper winds of Summer bear, The plaintive notes of tenderness and love, From the wood shaded nest that hides the cush at dove.

And softly to the lone retreat she crept, Where her fair sister lov'd 'at ease to lie; Where oft in heat of summer noon she slept Or scanned the fairy page of poesy: "And come" she cried " and throw thy legend

Our mother ramble through the wood to share, The warblers wake their sweetest melody;

All nature blooms luxuriantly fair Twill cheer her drooping age to breathe the morning air."

But Rosaline upon the book was bent, Nor did she heed the words that passed her by, Her Grecian head upon her hand was leant Reneath a rustic vine-leaf canopy : At length she raised her dark enraptured eye,

And with a look between a smile and sneer, "Sister I cannot come,"-was lier reply;

While Geralwood retired to hide the falling tear Oh! Rosaline in glen and valley grey, The Sheppard lets at large his fleecy care; Will you not leave the pleasures of the day, Awhile your aged mothers joys to share? Full oft in youth 'has she been wont to bear Your tender form along these inountains wild, And rock'd your cradle in the summer air: You must remember well" she said and smiled Who led your wand ring steps when you were yet a child.". My sister Geraldwood you reason well, In sooth you do, but I had rather stay.". Faintly and low the muttered accents fell Upon the breeze that blessed the dawn of day : "But as you will."-She flung the book away And bounded onward to the cottage door, Their mother soon was ushered forth to stray, Those pleasing scenes of happiness once more, Which oft in youthful days delight had rambled

And thus as thro? the woodland path they trod To Geraldwood and Rosaline she said;-My children soon beneath the grassy sod Your mother's failing body must be laid; And when beneath the spreading elm-tree's

O may the choice which you shall then have

Be such as I would cheerfully have chose, And may that peace be yours which virtue only knows.

"Remember that tho' beauty charms the eye, Virtue maintains her empire in the soul;

Dull age must come and beauty's charms must But virtue cannot taste the withering bowl, She lives in cheering smiles beyond control,

When pain and sickness spread their dark'ning gloom; And when beside the cypress-shaded knoll

The rose of beauty fades upon the tomb, Still virtue's lily glows in everlasting bloom." ORLANDO.

Anecdote-When Mr. Clay was some what unpopular with the people of his district for favoring the famous compensa-tion bill, Mr. Pope, who has had the misfortune to lose an arm, was run in opposition to him. During the electioneering campaign, Mr. Clay, in a playful manner, asked an Irishman which candidate he intended to vote for. The votary of St. Patrick immediately, though with much good humour, replied, "And faith, Mr. Clay, I think as how I shall vote for the man who can get but one arm into the treasury.
