PATRIOTIC EFFUSIONS.

When we take a view of the commercial exigencies, we find them equally deplorable. Trade, on account of the agricultural distresses, and the want of a foreign market, was never so depressed. Thousands of industrious mechanics, in every district of the country, are out of employment. In this district, the want of employ, and the unprecedented reduction of wages, are severely felt; many, even by the closest application, not being able to earn above from 5 to 8 shillings [from $1.11 to 1.77] a-week. Nor is the distress, as in former times, confined to those engaged in the cotton and silk manufactures. The calamity is general,—its effects are sweeping, and felt by all.

The proprietors of land, particularly in some parts of England and Ireland, are feeling its effects severely. Farms which were let at 1800 per annum, have fallen so low as 1100; and in numberless instances, they have been necessitated to take them into their own hands, none being found willing even to give an offer for them. Though this state of things is much to be regretted, it is impossible not to feel a kind of satisfaction in the perplexities of this class. They are the chief supporters of the Pitt system, and of those measures which have brought the country to its present situation, and when any person had the courage, and the patriotism, either by speaking or writing, to expose the folly of the one, or the pernicious consequences of the other, nothing gave these gentlemen more pleasure, than to see the Attorney General pounce upon him, and usher him into smug lodgings, in one of our comfortable prisons. While these gentlemen were basking in the sunshine of fortune, it was in vain to expect any reform; but now that their coffers sound hollow, they may perhaps feel disposed to examine into the causes which have emptied them. We may therefore conclude if the fumes of the bumpers which they have swallowed in toasts to the Pitt system, have not driven out of their heads what little sense they possessed, that as the only means of saving that part of their property which yet remains, they will cordially join the country in the attempt to procure a reform in the representation of the people in Parliament. To this they will be induced, from the conviction that it is the only measure that can be resorted to for the prevention of anarchy and confusion: it being impossible that the people can submit much longer to the privations under which they labour. It is, in a particular manner, the interest of all who have money in the "Stocks," to promote a reform; for it does not require a person to be endued with the spirit of prophecy, to predict, that without the reduction of the greater part of the standing army; the abolition of every useless place and sinecure, the reduction of allowances to the Royal Family, and of the salaries of all persons holding situations under government, to a standard conformable to the times, it is impossible that the interest upon the National Debt can be paid, in the failure of which the "Socks" must tumble into ruin. But by adopting the aforesaid measures, the nation would be restored to health and vigour, the manufacturer would again be able to dispose of his goods to advantage, the mechanic would find employment and food, the agricultural interests would be reanimated, and, in short, all classes would soon reap the benefits that would not fail to result from a constitutional reform, and share in the salutary measures, which would naturally spring from it.

Happily this is no wild Utopian scheme. Its effects have been nobly illustrated in the United States of America, where it has risen to maturity. Under the influence of a House of Representatives, freely chosen by the People, and holding the national purse in their hands, she has increased in power, population, and prosperity, in a manner unprecedented in the history of the world. The late war, and the exertions that it called forth, have shown that they have preserved that love of liberty, for which their forefathers were distinguished. She is now stretching out her arms and calling upon the oppressed of every nation to come; she yields them protection from civil despotism and religious tyranny; and she welcomes them to share in the bounties she lavishes on her children.

There, indeed, "every man lives under his own vine and fig-tree, none having the power to make him afraid." for there, they have no Grenvilles, or Graftons, no Campdens, or Ardens, no Melvilles, Huskisons, Cannings, Roses, or Huns; swallowing up the industry of thousands. Give us a fair representation; and we will

BRIDGETON, APRIL 27, 1818.

[COMMUNICATION.]

Mr. SCHULTZ,

Late in the afternoon, yesterday, we were alarmed by the appearance of a considerable fire in the direction of Bacon's Neck, which was in a short time ascertained to be the dwelling house of Mr. Job Bacon, which I lament to state, was totally consumed; the furniture and provisions were mostly saved—some of the family lost the greater part of their wearing apparel. It has not yet been discovered how the fire was communicated; it at first burst out in the kitchen chamber, and in almost an instant after, the whole roof was in a blaze. The loss to Mr. Bacon is severe; he is quite young, with a wife, and one child—but a short time established upon the farm which in part belongs to him. His misfortune has excited no small degree of sensibility in this neighbourhood, as he is much beloved, industrious, and of pleasing and popular manners; no exertions will be spared to alleviate his misfortune, and I trust the friends of virtue and humanity at a distance, will not be wanting to what a sense of duty may prompt, upon this interesting and unfortunate event.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Extracts of a letter to the editor, dated Washington, April 20, 1818.

Both Houses of Congress were adjourned about 8 o'clock this evening, after a session of 141 days, to meet again pursuant to law on the 16th of November next.

Anxious as the members were to revisit their homes, their families, and friends, it was evident they did not part without participating largely in those peculiar feelings (of regret if you please) which are naturally, if not necessarily experienced, upon the separation and dispersion in different directions, and to remote places of those who have long been associated in the transaction of important business.

The last week of the session was extremely busy, and most of the bills of an important public character which had been reported, were definitely decided,—passed in laws—or rejected—Many bills and reports, of minor consequences, most of them of local application, or relating to individuals were left on the files, and will have a fair opportunity of receiving early attention at the next session.

I had intended at the close of the session to have given a brief review of the most interesting topics that have undergone consideration, especially those that have resulted in law—but as I have occasionally furnished details, and particular notices of those subjects, as they have passed, and as I have not sufficient leisure for the purpose, I feel myself under the necessity of declining it, which I do with the less regret, as the acts that have been passed are in progress of publication, and will shortly be laid before the public, when each individual will have an opportunity of judging for himself.

British Navy.—The British are building at their several Dock yards, 5 first rates, 14 second rates, and 38 frigates, and 15 sloops, 74 vessels of war!—Yet some of her people appear alarmed at our building 4 or 5.—Niles' Reg.

British Cabinet.—The British Cabinet consists at present of the following ministers:—Lord High Chancellor, Lord Eldon; lord president of the Council, Earl of Harrowby; lord of the privy seal, Earl of Westmoreland; first lord of the Treasury, Earl of Liverpool; master general of the ordnance, Earl of Mulgrave; Secretary of State for the foreign department, Viscount Castlereagh; Secretary for the home department, Viscount Sidmouth; first Lord of the admiralty, Viscount Melville; Chancellor of the Exchequer, right hon. N. Vansittart, president of the board of control, right hon. George Canning.

Pedestrian Performance.—In England a man named Howard, lately completed a march of 600 miles, in ten successive days! for a bet of 200 guineas. He was excessively exhausted, and toward the close of the period, suffered greatly, but he won the wager.

FROM THE N. Y. MERCANTILE ADVERTISER, APRIL 21.

By the brig White Oak we received last evening, the Louisiana Gazette of the 31st March and 1st inst. from which the following articles are copied.

Natchez, March 26.

Extract of a letter from Dr. John Sibley to Dr. John H. Robinson of this city dated Natchitoches, March 16, 1818.

“Some persons have just arrived here from Galveztown, and report an extraordinary assemblage of French gentlemen being therewith a large quantity of warlike stores, as well as farming tools.—Near three thousand more were expected there by the present period.—They came principally from Philadelphia, all their packages were marked Mobile. Gens. Lallemand and Rigaud are amongst them. They cautiously avoid offending our government. The views of these people are not understood, but it is conjectured that they are going to some place beyond the river Grand (perhaps Tampico), to possess and occupy a country to become an asylum for discontented Europeans. The armed vessels our government ordered to that place, had not appeared in the middle of last month. Before the arrival of these Frenchmen, the place was occupied by Lafitte the younger, and his party who had brought in some prizes of great value, particularly the Spanish ship Campeachy, of 450 tons, with a cargo worth $360,000.

I expect to hear again from Galveztown, and will communicate to you the intelligence I may receive. Some valuable silver ore has lately been sent in by some Indian traders who found it beyond the Colorado.

NEW-ORLEANS, April 1.

Rumour has been for some time busy in this city, with the designs now on foot against the Spanish provinces beyond the Sabine. It is currently reported that the French exiles in the U. States formed a plan some time since for taking possession of the province of Texas, with perhaps the adjoining country called Provinces Internes. A subscription was raised amongst the most wealthy to defray the incidental expences. Mr. Girard is said to have subscribed 50,000 dollars, and Joseph Bonaparte, Marshal Grouchy, &c. are also believed to have contributed largely.

Some have gone so far as to assert that the leaders notified the spanish minister at Washington of their intention to colonize the above province, where they were willing to acknowledge the supremacy of Old Spain, in case she allowed them to remain undisturbed.

We should have treated all this as idle rumor, had not the above letter from Natchitoches set the matter beyond all question.

MARRIED.
