> CIRCULAR. WASHINGTON, May 8, 1822.

SIR IT has been my practice, at, the close of each Congress of which I have had the honor of being a member, to address to my constituents a letter, in which I have endeavored to give a fair and intelligent summary of the most important subjects considered and measures adopted by it, accompanied with occasional reflections in relation to them. As public attention has been more than usually directed to the present Congress, 1 have determined now to take some notice of its late session, whilst the transactions of it are fresh in the memory.

In the present House of Representatives there are eighty-one members who had never before been in Congress, besides others, who although formerly members had been several years out.-Whatever talents these possessed, or however useful they may prove, they were necessarily but little acquainted with Congressional legislation, and were moreover strangers to each other. With the expiration of a Congress all the pending business falls, and if it is afterwards considered, it must be originated de novo. Subjects to be legis-lated on are introduced by the recommendation of the Executive, by petitions, or at the suggestion of the members;-these subjects are almost invariably referred to committees appointed at the commencement of the session, (in the Senate by ballot, in the House by the Speaker.) which are composed of members from different parts of the Union, entertaining oftentimes a diversity of sentiments, and accustomed to different modes of transacting business. Many of these subjects require much reflection, and minute investiga tion; it is some weeks, therefore, before many reports of an interesting character are made, after which they are printed, and a reasonable time allowed for the other members to examine them before a final decision is considered safe or proper. These facts and statements readily account for the apparent tardiness of the proceedings in the early part of the first session of a Congress. The same causes have their influence, but less forcibly, on the second session. It is a period properly speaking, of propositions and preparation of business; and those who estithis time, and in fact for the greater part of the session, the service performed out of the House is more fatigueing than that within it. After this first stage, which usually continues from four to six weeks, has passed away, then comes the long debates and set speeches. Certain subjects that will best admit of amplification, and in which it is presumed the nation feels considerable interest, are selected for the purpose, and those who consider themselves as having a reputation for public speaking, or wish to acquire it, embrace the opportunity of displaying their argumentative and oratorical powers. It is at this stage of the ses-sion that the time is often most unprofighly expended. I am aware that subjects are sometimes presented which require ample discussion. These debates, however, when fairly entered on, are rarely restrained within proper limits; but are, on the contrary, protracted till patience becomes wearied by the discursive ranges of some, and the repetitions of others of the speak-

I do not mean to depreciate the whole season. Without the fostering last year by the Russian government; care of the government, in granting in which they claim a right to territory derogate from the importance of their eatraordinary facilities to the trader, on the North West Coast of America, attainments; it is the misapplication there is no fear but that the mercantile of their learning and skill to which I object—efforts, if not gratuitous, at least disproportionate to the occasion. It is worthy of remark that the new nembers are most inclined to consume time in this way, and that the longer a person is continued in Congress, gene-rally speaking, the less disposed is he to indulge in long and frequent speaking; being convinced that it is unne-cessary if not improper. This second stage of the session continues, with little disposition to interrupt it, for several weeks more, and until the accumulation of business hecomes so great, and so much time has elapsed, as to excite alarm lest the period of adjournment arrive before a tolerable proportion of it will be deci-ded. Then follows a conflict between those who wish to act promptly, and others not yet satisfied with debate, and this continues till near the close of adventure, or listless inattention, in the session with various success, till this branch of business, will always finally the urgent necessity for action naturally draw after them embarrassoverpowers the talking spirit, and de. cisions are made in rapid succession, and often with too little cleliberation. This I consider to be a tolerably correct representation of a session of Congress, and will apply as well perhaps to the late one, as any that have begree to impair the obligation, or les. preceded it. We see the time passing sen in the minds of the people the moaway, and comparatively little donethe people reproach us-we reproach ourselves, yet no one will include himself in the censure. In legislation it is thought more mischief is to be apprehended from precipitation, than from slow and cautious movements, yet this caution may be, and often is, carried to an estreme. The evils complained of are, I apprehend, in a great measure inseparable from our free institutions, and for the sake of the greater good, must be borne; pet it seems to me that the procedure might in some measure be corrected, if the people at the elections would place more value on experience and soundness of judgment, and less on flippancy speech The session has been extended to 157 days, which is about the average length of the first sessions of the several, Congresses since the adoption of the Constitution; and I perceive no reason to expect that they will hereaf. ter be shorter. lo addition to the causes of long sessions, before stated, the population and concerns of the nation are constantly enlarging and becoming more diversified.

I will now proceed to notice summarily a few of the topics which have eccupied our attention during that time.

The census having been completed. it became our duty to fix the ratio of representation under it. 'This proved to be a matter of considerable difficulty, as a contrariety of sentiment prevailed in regard to the relative eligi. bility of a more or less numerous House of Representatiwe, - it was also apparent that the effect any given ratio would have upon a particular state. had an influence with its members .-Forty thousand was finally adopted, which will bring into the next House about twenty-five additional members: consequences will ,follow. There is mate the labor of the members by the New-Jersey retains her present num too much wisdom in the councils of are still employed, by benevolent lations in regard to revenue to be rea-time employed in public session, do ber, and is again left with 3 large frac-then great, injustice, inasmuch as at tion. I was, nevertheless, of referred, made an elaborate and able the opinion, that it would be unwise at report against the repeal, which was this early period of our history; to so satisfactory that no attempt was swell the number of members much, if any, beyond the present limit, appre-hending that by more minately dividing the responsibility, the security for the faithfulness. of the representative would be diminished, and that as the the government cannot retract. As I body was increased, the tardiness of remarked on a former occasion, this its proceedings, already so much com-plained of, would be greater. Notwithstanding the ability by which the Bankrupt bill was advocated, it was finally rejected by a larger ma invity than had been expected. cultivator of the soil, who often loses spirit of the nation will be as active, and carry its operations as far, as the real welfare of the country requires. -The disposition to commercial enter. prise certainly does not need a spur, on the contrary, if there was a greater preference for those employments which produce new property, or add increased value to that already in existence, and less for that which consists merely in the sale or exchange of articles produced by others, the nation would be a gainer. A Bankrapt bill being intended confessedly to aid this spirit, and containing provisions which would make distinctions among the citizens of a character not very congenial to the genius of our institutions, I voted against it. I presume that in mercantile operations, as well as every thing else, the most prudent succeed best. Desperate hazard, ill-judged ment and ultimate ruin, - and perhaps it is unwise, on common occasions, to interpose between folly or even indiscretion and their consequences. I would be exceeding loth, at this time, to do any thing that should tend in any sen in the minds of the people the moral force of engagements.

A Territorial Government has been organised in Florida, on principles which have heretofore been adopted in the other territories of the Union .-Although there is much barren poor land within Florida, yet there is a sufficiency of good soil to enable us to extend very materially the cultivation of the cane and cotton. Some good judges also believe that coffee, cocoa and other tropical productions may tie successfully cultivated there. The extensive forests of live oak are likewise highly important to the United States. The primary advantage of the acquisi rion, however, consists in the jurisdic-tion, by which the ingress ut 3 foreign , antl the hostility of the Indians enemy in that quarter will probably, be pre-vented: The voluminous correspond vented: ence which grew out of the difficulties between General Jackson and the late Spanish authorities, and Judge Fromentin, were communicated to Congress by tlie President, in pursuance of a call of the House, but Congress de clined adopting any measure in relation thereto - thus leaving the adjust merit of those difficulties with the Executive Government.

By a vote of great unanimity, the fact of the Independence of several of the American governments south of the United States, has been formally aunounced, and provision made for establishing a diplomatic intercourse with them. It is believed that considerable commercial advantages will result to the United States from this new order of things. The Spanish minister resident here has protested in. the name of his government, against our recognition, as also the proceedings of Governor Jackson against the exgovernors of East arid West Florida bul I do not apprehend that any serious difficulty. Application was made from several parts of the Union, particularly Virginia, for the repeal of the countervailing navigation system, which has for some years been in operation against The committee of commerce, to which the several memorials on both sides were made to set it aside. It is by no means certain that our policy operates upon the whole injuriously, even for the time being, on, the United States ; and if it were otherwise, it appears to me nation has always acted defensively on the subject, and will readily meet the other party at any time on recipro cal ground; and there'is reason to believe that the complaints and sufferings of the Colonies will compel the British Ministry to give way. The espected commercial arrange ment with France has not yet been made. It is understood Mr. Gallatin has remained at Paris longer than he wished or intended, in the hope of effecting it. It appears so reasonable that an adjustment should be consent-

This has been the subject of a spirited correspondence between the Secretary f State & the Russian Minister resi dent here,-nothing conclusive is decided, although, as must necessarily be the case, our government have the ar-gument on their side. A bill was again, reported, but not acted or, to authorthe occupation of the Columbia River. At some future day we may have serious collisions in that quarter in regard to boundary, &c. but I do not apprehend it soon.

> The Resolution in regard to the distribution of a portion of the public lands among the old states for the purposes of education, which was submitted in the early part of the session, was never called up for discussion.-It is among the list of orders laid over to the next session. Notwithstanding several of the States have requested their representatives to advocate the measure, yet I have no doubt that a decided majority of the present Con-gress are against it. So long as serious doubts of the justice of the claim exist, the very great difficulty which would attend any attempt to carry it into effect, will prevent its adoption.

> The time during which those indebt-ed for public lands may avail them selves of the privileges of the act of last session, is extended to the S0th of September next. This indulgence will operate principally in favor of remote non residents, who had not time after the necessary forms were distributed, to accomplish the requisitions required by the law within the time limited by it. A further time is also granted to those whose lands were sold for direct taxes, to redeem the same in all cases where the purchase was in behalf of the United States.

> The law establishing trading houses with the Indian tribes is repealed, the capital employed in the trade directed to be withdrawn, and the business wound up. For several ears a grow ing hostility to this establishment hac beeu observed, much of which I have always considered ascribable to inter ested motives; be that as it map, the Indian trade for the future is to pass wholly into the hands of private licens-ed individuals, who will be required, by a late act, to give heavy bouds for the faithful observance of the laws regulating the trade, and particularly not to introduce amongst them arden spirits. Since our acquaintance with the Indians beyond the Mississippi and in Florida has been extended, the capital employed by the government in this department was so disproportionate to the necessities of the trade, that many of the friends of the system were of the opinion that unless it could be enlarged, the whole concern might as well be given up. It was in vain to expect the former, and therefore the latter was consented to with the less

Great efforts have been made, and the condition of the Indians. The government has lent its helping hand, by'a small' annual appropriation from the Treasury. As the game becomes scarce, and they compelled in a measure to abandon- the hunter state it seems highly proper that they should be encouraged, and taught to engage in husbandry and household industry,we owe them tnuch, and ought to omi no efforts which may be calculated to preserve and make them comfortable. Thave witnessed, therefore, with painful sensations, even in Congress, a disposition to decry, almost denounce, these well intended- labors. Unsuita-ble agents may have been sometimes employed, and injudicious measures adopted in furtherance of the object; but these are surely not good arguments against doing any thing. We have had, during the session several/statements of the amount and quartity of the Public debt of the Unit-ed States, and sundry estimates of the revenue for the present and one or two rather make present sacrifices to meet. succeeding years. This is a subject about which the people ought to be well over to posterity, who perebance may cial reports have not usually been a plain and intelligible as they ought to be; but I think those of the latest date are less obnoxious to this objection. By these it appears (and in this matter there can be no mistake) that the fun-ded debt amounted, on the 1st of January last, to upwards of ninety-three millions, four hundred and twentythree thousand dollars, which with out; standing unsettled claims, and the five millions stipulated tobe paid to our cilizens by the Florida treaty, will make an aggregate of debts of nearly one hun-dred millions, or about ten dollars per head on the people of the United States including free and bond -Until 1825 little of this d bt is payable, but in that and the three succeeding years, the whole of the unredeemed war loans, smounting to at least sixty-three millions of dollars, will become so .- During the years 1820 and 1821, the revenue proved insufficient to meet the current expences of the Government, discharge the interest of the debr, and reimburse the small portion of the principal of it which became due.— Loans were therefore resorted to. This year it is presumed it will be about equal to those purposes, consequently no loan was asked for. There is much diversity of opinion in regard to the avails of the present system of revenue for future years. It is apparent that any estimate in relation to it cannot be im: plicitly depended on-and the bad calculations for some years past, will naturally increase the distrust of those. which are now hazarded. At present, there is a partial revival of trade, and the imports of this year will probably be greater than the last, but it is very doubtful whether the improvement in the revenue from this source will be permanent. The imports must neces-sarily be limited to a great measure by the exports, in which there was a fall-ing off last year of several millions, the effect of which, was to create a great demand for stocks, and a drain of specie, to discharge the balance against the country. The high rate of exchange against us indicated that this balance was no light matter. -I apprehend that the importations of this year are, thus far, dispro-portionate to the exports. The conunued demand for specie, cramping the operations of the banks, has already produced a scarcity of money in our principal sea-ports, and it will not at all be strange if before the close of it, this circumstance should operate, to suddenly reduce the imports, and consequently the revenue. Improvements, in machinery have afforded such a fa=" cility in the manufacture of merchandise, that unless the raw materials of which it is composed fail, there will always be such an abundance of it. ready to be crouded into every tolegable market, that those nations who receive their supply principally from abroad will be deluged with it, and drained of their cash. This is too muchour case, notwithstanding the flattering success which has attended a few of our manufactures. I have no doubt but that true wisdom requires that other branches of them he more effec-ually protected. We shall never become rich by exchanging raw for manufactured articles. It was thought that in consideration of extending the time of redemption the holders would be willing to make this sacrifice; but the late change in the money market renders it very a doubtful whether it, can now be effect ed. The idea of a large national debt is repugnant to the feelings of the American people; they well know that it locks up, and puts out of the way of beneficial investment, a greater portion of capital than this young nation can spare. The holders of the stock are to be sure conveniently accommodated, but how much more advantage= ons would it be to the nation if those sums were expended in judicious internal improvements, or vested in useful branches of home industry & The necessity of postponing the paymentof the debt, (if indeed the necessity exists) is much regretted. ashed to a greater extent than seems pranticalle consistent with the preser it has been thought proper to preserve; or the revenue must be increased—to increase which there appears to be ob-Sions on the part of the government. The reluction of the aumy, which took blace last year, and the economy which bas been infroduced into that is ober, infrantriants of the government—the diminution of the spierse of collecting the revenue, which will result from a law passed a few days ago, and en-creased care in guarding drainst detal-intums, will lessen the arroual expend-tiurs. The appropriations for the graduat increase of the navy, for the public huildings, and for for infections, will after a year or two be diminished, as will after the expense of the pension its. Further efforts will, likewise be the revenue, which will result from a rified. list. Eurther efforts will, likewise be ade to reduce the charges for every mails to reduce the charges for every department of the government. If these should be successful,—and after making full allowance for every thing Therem enumerated, I still entertain the chalts I formerly expressed, whether the field can be paid in any reasonable time from the avails of the impost sys-tem—a system which must forever be precarious and fluctuating in its pro-ducts, influenced as it may be by a ducts, hiftuenced as it may be by a thousand contingencies nut subject to our control. As the revenue derived from this source is collected at a small expense, and is moreover a form of exaction less liable to be objected to han any others, it will and, perhaps ought to be a principal resource; but there are strolly arouments in favor of ought to be a principal resource; but there are strong arguments in favor of combining with it a moderate system of excise—without it many of the poor man's articles of necessity are heavily taxell, whilst many of the rich man's luxuries are exempted. It is impossi-ble to adopt an impost system that will be equitable in its operation. Believ-ing, therefore, that from necessity if ing, therefore, that from necessity if not choice we shall be obliged to come to it some or later. I regret to see a disposition to prejudice the public mind against it. The increase of domestic manufactures will have some effect in manufactores will have some energy of duminishing the imports, but not to the extent many imagine. We shall pro-banly purchase to near the value of our exports, — and if those articles we have been accustomed to import should be orberts actual by the hume production, others; will be sought. I consider the providently of the most useful branches of manufactures ar important, that as Fring as the impost is relied on for re-venue, the interests of the Treasury, abstractly considered, will be at war with the interests of the nation apart from it . Who does not perceive that this has been connently the case for the Jast seven years? Fettered by this system those whose duty it has been to provide the ways and means have been compelled to bear against the manufacturing interest, whatever their private feelings may have been. Bills were introduced, but not de eided, further to reduce the officers of the army, to reduce the number of officers in the navy, and the compensa-tion of members of Covgress, and the civil officers of the government generally -- serious objections were like wise made to going on with the system of fortifications, which had been com-monced. These propositions grew out of the state of the Treasury, the diffi-contrestor which appear the most co-gent argument in favor of retrenchment. To be occasionally in this state is calculated to produce a salutary effect, by necessarily inducing a rigid inquiry into the out goes, and will tend to restrain extravagances, which will ever he ready to creep into the expenditares of a government as well as of individuals. My, opinion, is that the army might be placed under the command of a single Brigadier General, and otherwise so modified as to lessenative expense without impairing make myself unhappy about it, believ, same end in view, it is very natural the efficiency of it. We have also a ing that most if not all of them possess that different sentiments should be engreater number of naval officers than the service requires. Knowing how important good officers are in this service; that it requires time to make them; and also if we should again be involved in war it will be principally of a naval character, I should be loth to nact with any of the choice men of this coeps; but the service is encum-bered, as every service will he unless occasionally purged, with some men whp are a dead weight, if not disgrace I am in favor of reducing the to it. list sufficiently to enable the govern ment to get rid of these. Respecting the reduction of the nav of members of Congress and the civil officers generally, my opinion is unchanged. True economy in public or private affairs is promoted by granting good and faithful agents a liberal com ensation. I heartily wish that none but those of this description should even be employed; and would be glad to see all of a different character forthwith sischarged. I am of the opinion that is one of the salaries, are higher even, the expenditure must be dimin- although I do not believe that the present compensation is, when privation and sacrifices are taken into account much if auy too great, Respecting the extent to which our system of for tifications ought to be carried, there is very naturally an honest diversity of opinion, as there is no means of estimating the value of a preventive rem ody. If by the expediture of a few millions our principal cities can be rendered secure, and an enemy kept out of our most important inland waters, every body would consider the money well laid out. There is such a thing as to be "penny wise and poundfoolish," in public as well as private, affairs; and if hy negligence in these particulars we should in any measure invite aggression, and thereby be in-volved in war, the proverb will be ve-

> This Congress has proved very quisifive-an unusual number of inquiries have been submitted, and all hands about the Executive Departments kept busy in preparing answers: have no doubt they are heartily glad that we are about to grant them a res-pite. Some of these inquiries are rather frivolous in their, character, and lead to no practical result, perhaps occasionally they may be induced by a querulous spirit; but these must be tolerated, as it is right for Congress to ask, and the duty of the Executive to afford information on subjects connected with legislation, when required .--This investigating spirit will, I apprehend, have the effect of inducing great-er circumspection on the part of the administration, for 1 consider it as having partook, in some measure, of the heedlessness and improvidence which took such deep root, and pervailed all classes and almost every individual after the close of the late The formidable list of outstandwar. The formidable list of outstandagents is one among other evidences of Although a great proportion of these balances are merely nominal, yet the lists afford ainple evidence that not very vigorous efforts have been em ploved to bring the accounts to a close. From what has passed in Congress, casual observer would conclude that there is a rankling hostility in it to the Executive government. I do not beheve this to be the case ;- honesty and correct intentions are at once accorded to it; but they are disposed to charge on it a sort of inertness, and want of business-watchfuiness over the money concerns of the nation. Several of the heads of departments are considered candidates for the Chief. Magistracy; a circumstance which it is fcared will create if it has not already produced, jcalousies among them, not very favorable to that oneness of purpose and harmony of movements which ought to characterise the cabinet. It is this also which has given rise to much of the cross firings and bickerings which have taken place in Congress. Many of the resolutions and propositions introduced having for their ultimate object the elevation of a favorite or the depression of a rival candidate. These things, which it would he idle to attempt to conceal, are truly unfortunate; but I have the satisfac tion of knowing that the representatives from New Jersey, as well as the editors of newspapers and citizens within it, have in a good measure kept themselves along from this sort of ha siness, under the impression, no doubt that management in matters of this kind is never to be commended, but is particularly improper and premature at this time. I am altogether unable to determine upon which, or whether any of the candidates that have been named, a majority of the electoral suf-frages will be united. Under a persuasion that the policy of the government will be much the same, let who wisely ; but there can be no doubt of may succeed, I am not disposed to the purity of its intentions. With the the requisite talents and patriotism. By the law of 1820, in relation to Revolutionary Pensions, many that had previously been placed on the roll were stricken from it on account of the amount in value of the property held by them. In some instances this pro-perty was subsequently sold to satisfy bona fide debts of old date. The law adverted to, was given a construction which did not allow the Secretary of War to reconsider a case once stricken off, with a view to reinstatement. In consequence of numerous petitions for relief, from persons of this description, a bill passed the House to direct the bead of the war office to restore to the rolls all those who may prove to his satisfaction that they are really in needy and distressed circumstancesbut this bill was rejected in the Senate, leaving these poor old men without hope. What is particularly mortifying to many of them is that hundreds less meritorious are still in the enjoymen of their pension. If the difficulties of the Treasury were esteemed an insur-

A bill was introduced into the Senate authorizing the Supreme Court to take. cognizance of and determine disputes in regardeto boundaries, &c: between theistates. It was occasioned by our difficulty with New York. The bill being general in its nature was objected to, and the subject is laid over to the next session, when it is believed, if an amicable arrangement shall not sooner take place, permission will be granted to have this unpleasant and long stand ing controversy settled by the umpirage of that venerable tribunal.

An act has been passed directing that the District Court for the District of New Jersey shall hereafter be held at New Brunswick, on the second Tuesdays of March and September, & at Burlington on the third Tuesdays of May and November, in every year. A new Post Route has been estab lished from Philadelphia by Woodbury Glassborough, Malaga, Cumberland Furnace, and Etna Furnace, to Beasley's at the mouth of Great Egg Harbor river. Five thousand dollars have been appropriated for the erection of a Light House on Cape May.

The predicament in which the Cum herland road is placed, by the refusal of the President to sign the bill author-izing the erection of toll gates on it, is much to be lamented. It will be disreputable to the nation if this great work which has cost so much should be suffered to go to decay.

The Post Office establishment is in ather an-unpleasant state. The expenditures of it last year exceeded its receipts about $150,000. Congress have just authorized a long list of new routes, without at all increasing the revenue of it. A necessity is hereby imposed on the head of that department to use more diligence in calling in the outstanding balances against present and past Postmasters, many of which are of long standing,-for this neces-sity I for one am not sorry.

Several other subjects are at least worthy of a passing notice,-but con trary to my intention I have already extended myself too far, and must therefore desist.

In conclusion, I must say that the present Congress is very respectable in point of ability—that I have no reason o believe it to be less patriotic than those which have preceded it, & that though all that was desired, has no been done, yet a great deal of secondary business has been disposed of, and the general tenor of its proceedings are, I doubt not, calculated to promote the public interests. The tardiness of its proceedings affords perhaps just cause of complaint; but it is nothing new, and cannot, I fear, be easily re medied, certainly not unless in the manner before adverted to. The A mericans, especially those in the mids of active political life, are too proud o their equal rights and the privileges of speech and debate guaranteed to them by our excellent Constitution, ever to yield the exercise of it to a few head men or leaders, as is the case in the British parliament. Wishing to be entirely candid and impartial, I am not conscious of having bestowed com mendation or blame unjustly. I have witnessed many things not altogether agreeable to my mind. The people at large have no doubt done the same,it is their province to admonish and rebuke,-to make known their complaints, and to judge of public agent-by their, works. I should lament to have their confidence withdrawn from the government, not believing there is any necessity for it. It has no doubt sometimes mis judged, and acted un tertained as to the best means of com-passing it. The evils most complained of are, I hope and trust, in a train of Ours is the best constitucorrection. ted government on earth,-let us cher ish and protect it, so far as its acts are justifiable, and fearlessly and honestly administer reproof where it is due.-The civil and religious privileges we enjoy as a people are of the first order which demand our unfeigned acknowl edgements to the Giver of all Good, and which it would be the height of ingratitude to withhold.

pecting companions. They who were witnesses of the extraordinary scene, resolved never again to fire on one of the monkey race.

The foregoing is an extract from Forbes' Oriental Memoirs. A story which was told us by a gentlemon who had resided for some time in the West Indies, would seem to prove that the occidental race of these animals is not very different from the oriental, or, in other words, that monkeys are monkeys all the world over.

Dr. ---- of the island of Antigua, in riding out one day, alighted from his horse to pick up a half grown animal of that species, which lay wounded in the middle of the road. On finding itself a prisoner in the hands of that dreadful creature, man, the young monkey changed the piteous moans its wounds caused it to utter, for screams of terror, which quickly summoned a multitude of its own tribe to its assistance. These formed a circle around the Doctor, and made their approaches with great regularity, apparently determined to res-cue the prisoner by force, if negociation failed. After they had taken such arrangements as were deemed beces-sary, one or two of the party advanced a few steps to act as orators, the others taking care or preserve the line of bat-tle unbroken. The orators began to chatter, mixing tones of expostula ion and intreaty, with threats and upbraid ing, and the Doctor, partly moved by their eloquence, and partly intimidated hy some movements which indicated a disposition to proceed immediately from words to blows, released the pris-The whole tribe were then disoner. persed.

Interesting Anecdote.

At a trial some few years ago in Ire and, a Mr. Morton prosecuted one John Farrel, for au assault with an attempt to commit a rape upon his daughter. When Mr Morton had given his testimony for the crown (as the term is.) he was cross examined by, the counsel for the prisoner .- The first question, asked by one the counsel was, " Pray sir, is this young lady your daughter." The witness replied "Yes." "Pray Sir," continued the council, "How do you know she is your daughter ?"

The witness thus expressed himself -* Gentlemen of the jury I am called upon in this court to give my testimo ny.-I have given it; and given it hon-estly to my mind, and true as to the fact. A counsel (at least I suppose him so by his-impertinence) has asked me whether I can upon oath, swear this young lady is my daughter P-many of you are fathers, and will feel up an this occasion as I do. One observa-tion I beg permission of the court to make; it is that in support of the laws of the country. I come forward to punish a transgressor at my own expense; and that man who has asked me the question as to my daughters legitima cy, and who, no doubt, ineans to ask many more of the same sort, is a person bribed to prevent the course of jus tice.

"Gentlemen I will prove the asser tion. Look to his brief-he there ac knowledges to have received ten guin-eas to defend a villain.

"Will you believe the testimony on oath of a man who is not purchased, in preference to the argument of a man who is purchased, in preferance to bribed, or will you not? That is the question." the argument of a man who is publicly

At the same instant the earthquake was felt, and all the congregation fell upon their knees to implore forgiveness of their sins. Wonderful preservation of three nats crews by a Poland dog.--During the gale, which proved so latal to the Thomas and Mary, and her "crew, on the 4th ulf, three boats were seen in Chiswell Cove, with the crews in most imminent danger from the fury of the waves, which, rising in terrific majesty, frustrated every attempt of the people on shore to render them assistance. At this critical juncture, a dog of the Newfoundland breed, but born in the island, plunged into the water, and succeeded in reaching the nearest boat. The crew immediately put a line into. his mouth, and the sagacises and brave animal returned with it to the shore! the This line was eagerly grasped by the sailors on the beach, a rope was fastened to it, and by great exertions and presence of mind, the three boats were safely pulled on the heach, the boats having communication with each other, by means of a long rope. This is not a solitary instance of the vast utility of the dogs bred in Portland, in case of marine distress. Wey. Gaz. Wey. Gaz.

One of them was that the trade should go on as before on condition, that when the English arrived in their, own country, they should relate the affair to their own sovreign, and next year bring the spe-cified number of Englishmen to be butchered according to their absurd laws, which consider an accidental homicide as equal to a deliberate murder. Such concessions, little as they were calculated to satisfy the British, made the lower classes of the people outrageous against the Viceroy, as they supposed that he had compromitted the horror of the Chinèse empire, and it was generally thought, that the Empewhen informed of his conduct, тог. would order him to be decapitated. The contest in the minds of the Chi nese is between pride and avarice, both powerful passions, the latter of which,

General Gazetteer Improved, Or, a new and compendious

Geographical Dictionary; Containing a description of the Empires kingdoms, states, provinces, cities, towns forts, seas, harbors, rivers, lakes, moun-tains, capes, &c. in the

KNOWN WORLD:

With the government, customs, manners, and religion of, the inhabitants; the extent, boundaries and natural productions of each country; the trade, manufactures and cur-osities of the cities and towns; their longi-tude, latitude, bearings and distances, in English miles, from remarkable places; and the various events by which they have been distinguished: distinguished :

INCLUDING The Constitution of the United States, the ordinance of 1787, and the Constitutions of the respective States; Together with a succinct account of a least fifteen hundred cities, towns and vil-lages in America, more than have appeared in any foreign edition of the same work; in which the numersus mistakes & deficiencies of European Gazetteers, respecting this country, are corrected and supplied.

Illustrated by a neat colored Map of the United States.

BY WILLIAM DARBY, Member of the New York Historical Society,

Author of a Map and Statistical Account of Louisiana ; Emigrant's Guide ; and a Tour from New-York to Detroit.

IN order to render this edition in a pecu far manner valuable to an American reader the publishers have employed William Dar-by of this city as editor, to collect and insert the names of such remarkable places on this plan which has been contemplated for sev-real months; and now offers his services to have not hitherto found a place in any ga rave not interest for modify such articles as are erroneously or defectively stated, in the original work; and in fine, as far as practi-cable, to comprise all the places worthy of notice in the world.

So many changes have taken place in Eu-rope in the course of the last 8 or 10 years, as to render necessary a careful digest of the resent limits of most states in that quarter of the world.

It must be obvious that in an age of activ enterprize, discoveries, improvements and changes in objects of Geographical Science will be so rapid, and unceasing in their ope-rations, as in a few years, to render defective or ob slete any System of Geography, howeven erfect they may be at the time of pub-lication. It must also be more than apparent that the correctness of these observations apply with particular force to America; in one section of which, a widely extended re-volution is daily developing, as objects of Geographical and Historical record, names of places, very imperfectly or entirely un-trouve to science previous to the occurrence the events which have given them a title to literary, attention - and in another quarter, the energies of a free and enterprising people are effecting revolutions on the face of nature, with a celerity and an extent wliich has no parallel in thr progress of hunan affairs.

The publication of the work lias hitherto been delayed in order to procure the census of 1820, which has not yet been completed. The publishers however confidently hope to receive the necessary document, and present the work to their patrons, in the course of the ensuing season: in 3 form worthy of their acceptance : but tlic Gazetteer will not be put to press before the returns of the census are obtained; collated, and the various arti-

The Post Office list will be carefully arranged up to the present time, and the marks placed before the description of all places containing a Post Office. Lancaster Bank, Easton,

No comment can he necessary to elucidate the advantages which must be comprised in 3 portable volume, in which will be concen trated the proposed improvements and additions.
