Captain Fleetwood of the schooner Sam. arrived here yesterday in 25 days from Porto Bello, reports that General M'Gregor made his appearance off the harbour of Porto Bello on the the 7th of April. London, April 16. The letters obtained to day from the manufacturing districts are not so favourable as could be wisned. In Lancashire par-ticularly, distress seems rather to increase and Mt Leigester it is said that for the last ten days, 5000 persons are represented as being out of work. The commercial accounts from Liverpool are also of gloomy description. The arrival of a number of ships from the United States was expected, which would occasion a further de-cline in the price of cotton.

The Persian Ambassador. A Paris pa-per contains south curious details of the history of M. r. Abdoul-Hassan-Khan, the Persian Ambassador, now at Paris, on his way to Loudon. Being descended from a distinguished family, who occupied the highest post of honor and power under the kings of Persia, he himself when young was appointed to the governwish of a district of the kingdom of Persia bordering on the Persian Gulf. While thus enjoying his sovereign's favor, a reverse of fortune not uncommon in the despotic countries of the east, plunged him from the pinnacle of honor into the depths of adversity. His uncle, who filed the situation of prime minister at the court of Persia, was accused by the calumnies of prime minister at the court of Persia, was accused by the calumnies of prime minister at the court of Persia, was accused by the calumnies of prime minister at the court of Persia, was accused by the calumnies of prime minister of prime minister of prime minister of prime from the pinnacle of honor into the depths no other reason than because they hap pened to be connected with his family Abdoul-Hassan, the Ambassador, who was deprived of his government and threatened with a similar fate, happily escaped his death by being forgotten till vengeance was satisfied, and after lan-guishing in prison for three months was allowed to retire from office and danger into foreign lands. His first object was to visit the tomb of the Prophet at Mecca, and this pilgrimage inspired him with the wish of more distant travel. According-ly, after seeing the chief city of the Wechabites, and other parts of Arabia, he embarked at Bassorah on board an Engtardy discovery of his innocence, and restoring him to favor, had summoned him home. In 1809, by the influence of a surviving uncle, with warminister of finance, he was sent to England in quality of ambassador, accompanied by M. Morier, who was at that time Secretary of Emissey. at that time Secretary of Embassy at the court of Persia. In Loudon he remained Persia along with Sir G. Ously, who was appointed our Minister to Persia. In his passage home the vessel touched at Rio Janeiro, and Abdoul Hassan was perhaps the first Persian ambassador that saw the new world. When he returned to his master, his services were requited with the title of Khan, and new marks of confidence. He was employed to conclude a lowing year proceeded as ambassador to St. Petersburg, whence he returned home after a stay of three years. The ambassador is not only known for his diplomatic have cultivated learning with distinguished success. He speaks several lan-guages, English, Arabic, Russian, and Hindostance. He has witten an account of his travels in England, India, and Russia, which, whatever he its merits, has been by annexing his observations on France and Germany. Mirza Abdoul Hassan is about 44 years of age, of an extraordinary height, but of a noble and agreeable exte rior. His mind is as enlightened by study and experience as his manners are grace ful and polished by his extensive travels, and his intercourse with the highest society. He is an accurate observer of works of art, and takes an account of the most rein the French capital. .

rable block, the British public." Now, it is in vain for these insolent bigots to assure the world, that the inventor of steam boats was the first man who entertained the notion, that steam might be applied to the purposes of navigation. He may claim the merit of inventing the idea, that the force of vapour would drive a boat as well as turn a mill; but is this to invent the boat, -to devise the machineto put things into practical operaion? Some obscure individual may have made attempts fifteen hundred years ago to employ steam as a mechanical power; but was he, therefore, the inventor of the steam engine. Mr. Fulton never claimed to have invented boats, or steam, or steam engines, any more than he claimed to have invented rivers and tides; but did he claim -not the mind of a clerk of 22, when the to be the inventor of that combination of powers and mechanism, called the steam boat; and the conclusive answer to all those, who would rob him of this merit, is, that, with all the researches of industrious malignity, his enemies can produce no instance, before his time, of any such boat, that could be made to go. Of what possible utility was it, for Jonathan Hulls to publish his lucubrations on this subject in 1717? The question is: Did he make a steam boat? Would it do? The merit is not in thought, but in action; -not in tell-but in doing it. Of one thing Mr. Buchanan and the Quarterly Review may be perfectly certain; namely, that, granting the accuracy where, posterity is to learn; and the first and transactions of Lord S——, that trial, of which they can speak with any was useful to him while before the public certainty, is that of Lord Stanhope; who, in 1793, caused a boat to be constructed with paddles, on the principle of a bird's wings; closing as they were brought forward, and opening, when driven back. But this contrivance proved abortive; and, in 1802, a Mr. Symmington tried a boat, upon a different construction, in the frith of Clyde. How it was constructed, we know not but it is enough to say, that no good ever resulted from the experiment. Five years before the attempts of Stanhope, and fourteen before those of Symmington, the following postscript of a letter from Dr. Franklin to Dr. Ingenhawk, dated Philadelphia, October 24, 1788, will show, that a boat was actually driven by steam against the tide of the Delaware. "We have no philosophical news here at present," says the Doctor, except that a boat, moved by a steam en gine, rows itself against the tide in our river, and it is apprehended the construc-ion may be so simplified as to become generally useful."

Moravians,-The fallowing, which i from the pen of PAUL ALLEN, editor of the Morning Chronicle, is a just tribute to th character of this even play sect.

ENTHUSIASM.

Looking over a late paper, we were very forcibly struck by a report of the success of the Moravians in the propagation of the gospel. Many very affecting instances of heroism are there recorded which would appear perfectly incredible to those who judge by the common feelings and motives by which mankind are isually stimulated to action. What shall we say for instance to an example of such self-devotion to the cause of Christianity, as this; two Moravian missionaries who contemplated file erection of the standard f the Redeemer on the burning sands of Africa, were given to understand, that the tribute of natives to whom they proposed to dispense the light of salvation, would endure the residence of no white man mongst them, unless in the character of a slave. He who measures human inotives by the ordinary standard, would be led to elieve from this formidable obstacle, that the enterprise itself was abandoned. No! quite the reverse: these two missionaries, with a zeal and devotion little short of Apostolic, embarked in this expedition with a firm determination to sell themselves for slaves, if their their object could be accomplished by no other means. This severe trial by the mercy of Divine Providence however did not await these faithful servants of the gospel, they were received by the natives with open arms, and abundant success crowned their labors of love. What is to be said to all this? The common cant of the day is, that this is to be attributed to enthusiasm, which renders the concerns of this life subordinate to a better—that enthusiasm that would dispense life, and hilarity and perennial joy, as wide as the dimensions of the world that we inhabit—that enthusiasm that, in the accomplishment of this noble object, sacrifices ease, all the allurements of pleasure and grandeur, and devotes itself to persecution, to sufferings, to privations of every kind, to calamny, more cruel than the sword, to dungeons and to leath. Examples of this kind of self devotion, are by no means rare amongst Chris-tians; but the infidel startled by the fact astonished by such evidence that he cannot explain, account for, or deny, flies to the word enthusiasm, for shelter; which in his sense of the phrase, is absolutely a word without any meaning whatever, But we will now suppose that this strong principle of enthusiasm, as it is courteously termed, had been turned not to the salvation, but to the destruction of the human race; that its effects were seen in the tears of the widow and orphan, in the conflagration of their dwellings, in church yards prematurely filled with their silent and butchered inhabitants. All this is termed the warriors pride, and the millions shout with rapture at the approach of this sanguinary hero. This principle, so destructive in its application, is no longer called by the name of enthusiasm now; it changes its character, and the word glory, is regarded by the infidel as more than equivalent for all these enormities. Let a plan be suggested for assuaging the miseries of our unhappy race, whatever hazard may be incurred in the attempt is sufficient to dishearten any one engaged in the enterprize, he is laughed to scorn and denounced to the world as an enthusiast. If this enthusiasm once turns to the destruction of our species—to invent engines of death of more species—to invent engines of death of more specify and certain executions to devise any plan to hasten the approach of the king of terrors, and he is hailed at once as a public benefactor. The Christian however, looks with other eyes on the world which he considers only as his world, which he considers only as his place of temporary residence: anxious ony to obtain the applause of his Maker, he devotes his life to his service, unawed by the frowns, unseduced by the smiles of the world—he casts his eyes toward the starry firmanent, and awaits the arrival of the hour, when his existence shall surpass in duration those glittering spheres. Death comes at last, not robed in darkness and in tempest—he appears an angel of light bright with celestial beauty, he stands beside the couch of the Christian; and whisers in his ear these consolin "Well thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into thy master's joy."

AN EXPRESS

Arrived at this place about 7 o'clock, who stated that a Bear was seen this morning crossing the road near Bowen-town. Our sportsmen, to the number of 20 or 30, immediately set out in the pur-suit. They, were out but a short time when Bruin was started. The novelty of a Bear hunt in Cumberland, (the race having become nearly extinct many years since) the number and keenness of the sportsmen, and the long seeing of dogs, in full cry, and but a short distance behind their game, produced an animating scene. ran bim but a short time, when the dogs had gained so much, that at every spring they would snap at him, and (unused to such big black varments) fly back again. The Bear too, rather dipleased at the number of his pursuers, would turn round, lift his paw, and then retreat. At length, finding the number of his antagonists in-crease too rapidly, he ascended a sapling about the size of a man's leg, as nimbly as ever a tar ran up the rattlings; got into a crotch near the top, and the tree bending over, made him a very convenient seat. The horn immediately called together all the hunters, who, after they had satisfied their curiosity, blew poor Bruin through the head. They then laid him across a horse, formed themselves into a company, and rode into the town two and two. All who saw this triumphant procession

The corner stone of this edifice, to be built of Maylvania Marble, on a site in Chesnut, be-gen Fourth and Fifth streets, in Philadelphia; as recently laid with much ceremony by the President and Directors of the Institution. The Pfecident and Directors of the Institution. The architectural design of Mr. Strickland for the building has been adopted by the Bank; and the blevation is represented in the Analectic Magazine for March last. The design is of the Grecian Doric, liaving eight fluted columns, four feet six inches in diameter, embracing the whole front, taken from the Parthenon, or Temple of Minerva; being divested, for the sake of the dis-tribution of space and light, of its flanking columns—and, for the sake of simplicity, of the sculptured metopes, the freize and the basso relievo figures in the tympanum of the pediment "The columns rise from a basement 5 feet in elevation, supporting a plain entablature, extending along the sides of a parallelogram 86 by 160 feet, including the body of the building and porticoes that project 10 feet 6 inches from each to the fronts. The vertical angle of the pediment to the fronts. The vertical angle of the pediment of 1528, forming an uninterrupted line from end to end of the ridge or apex of the roof.

"The ascent to the porticos from the street, is by a flight of six steps, to a terrace or platform, extending 16 feet or each flank, and in front of the edifice.

"It is on this terrace that the building is record or this terrace that the building is reated, and from which it derives a great portion of its effect. The gateways on the right and lef , open into paved avenues, which extend from Chesnut to Library street, along each of the flanks, serving to insulate the building from surrounding objects, it being inclosed along these avenues by a return of the iron railing exhibited in the front elevation.

"The door of entrance opens into a spacious vestibule, leading to the banking room, which is placed immediately in the centre of the building. On the right and left of the vestibule is the loan office and transfer office, which are entirely distinct from the rooms appropriated to heaking distinct from the rooms appropriated to bagking purposes. The banking-room in plan, is a spacious parallelogram of 45 by 80 feet, containing 12 polished marble pillars, of the lonic order, copied from the Temple of Minerva Polias, at Priene; these pillars are placed at a distance of 8 feet from the sides of the room, and support a vaulted pannelled ceiling across it shortest diameter. The desks and counters, range throughmeter. The desks and counters, range involgn-out the intercolumniation, forming a capacious area in the centre and along their sides, for the transaction of business. The president's and cashier's rooms, on the north, together with the aults and private stair-ways on adjacent to the sides of the banking-room, and can only be approached by doors of communication from this room The stockholders', directors' and committee rooms, are situated on the southern front of the building, having passages of communication with each other and with the banking room. It is to be remarked that in the plan all the rooms are bounded by parallel walls, care git angles from the fronts and flanks; that these rooms are lighted exclusively from the flanks of the building, which are at a distance of 33 feet from the boundary lines of the lot, af and air in every direction."---Am D. The advantage On the coast of South America. The advantage of keeping a small force in that quarter had been seen by the cuise of the Ontario, which protected a great portion of private property, subjected to capture and vexatious delays, from the reculific warfare now prosecuted between the colonies and mother country. Some charges have been made in the papers against the favours and facilities afforded United States shift of war to the Royalists, injurious to the Patriott Much Telicacy and adress are necessary to steer safely through these billows of opposition—but it can be done. There is little sympaty in this country, for the Royalists, and very little disposition to show them any fayors.

EASTFORT, May 8.
On Tuesday, the 27th ult. about 6 A. New York, May 24. Horrid Murder... It appears, that about three weeks since, three Cotterells, father and two sons, arrived at Baltimore in the ship Ceres, from Liverpool; a man named James Adams was also a passenger, and brought with him a large sum n guineas, and a draft on a house in Baltimore intending to buy a farm. The three Cotterells were apprehended at Baltimore on the 20th inst. on suspicion of having murdered Adams. From an examination, there was no doubt of their guilt, and they were committed for trial. The of Adams was found in the woods near body of Adams was found in the woods near Cumberland, in Maryland. The following are extracts from "Brydone's Tour through Sicily and Malta, giving an account of a very singular law of the knights of Malta on Duelling-and also an account of a remarkable Burying Place, in that Island.

DUELLING .- Perhaps Malta is the only country in the world where duelling is permitted by law. As their whole establishment is originally founded on the wild and romantic principles of chivalry. they have ever found it too inconsistent with its principles to destroy duelling; but they have laid it under such restrictions as greatly to lessen its danger. These are curious enough. The duellists are obliged to decide their quarrels in one particular street in the city; and if they presume to fight any where else, they are liable to the rigour of the law. But what is nut less singular, and much more in their favour, they are obliged, under the most severe ers, &c. &c. with their families, mostly penalties, tu put up their swords? when natives of the "northern hive." All their penalties, tu put up their swords? when ordered so to do by a woman, a priest, or a knight. Under these limitations, in the midst of a great city, one would imagine it almost impossible that a duel could ever end in blood; however, this is not the case. A cross is always painted on the wall opposite the spot where a knight is killed, in commemoration of his fall. We counted about twenty of these crosses.

About three months ago, two knights had a dispute at a billiard table. One of them, after giving a deal of abusive lan-guage, added a blow, but to the astonish-ment of all Malta, (in whose annals there is not a single instance) after so great a provocation, he absolutely refused to fight his antagonist. The challenge was re-peated, and he had time to reflect on the consequences, but still he refused to enter the list. He was condemned to make amende honourable in the great church of St. John, for forty-five days successively, then to be confined in a dangeon, without light, for five years, after which he is to remain a prisoner in the castle for life.— The unfortunate young man who received the blow is likewise in disgrace, as he has not had an opportunity of wining it out in the blood of his adversary. This has been looked upon as a very singular affair, and is still one of the principal topics of conversation. The first part of the sentence has already been executed, and the poor wretch is now in his dungeon. Nor is it thought that any abatement will be made in what remains.

This morning we went to see a celebrated convent of Capuchins, about a mile without the city; it contains nothing very | n emory of Madame de N. and himself.... B. Mir.

remarkable but the burial place, which in-Jeed is a great curiosity. This is a vast ubterraneous apartment, divided into bed 15 a great curiosity. This is a vast subterraneous apartment, divided; into clarge commodious galleries, the walls on each side of which are hollowed into a variety of niches, as if intended for a great very collection of statues. These niches, in-flex, between the hours of 12 and 5 of clock collection of statues. These niches, in-flext, between the hours of 12 and 5 of clock stead of statues, are all filled with death in the atternoon of said day, at the house bodies, set upright upon their legs, and of James Sherron in Salem. fixed by the back to the inside of the niche: their number is about three hundred: they are all dressed in the clothes they usually wore, and from a most respectable and venerable society. The skin and muscles, by a certain preparation, become as dry and hard as a piece of stock-fish, and al-though many of them have been here upwards of two hundred and fifty years, yet none are reduced to skeletons; the muscles, indeed, in some, appear to be a good deal more shrunk than in others; probably because those persons had been more ex tenuated at the time of heir death.

Here the people of Palerino pay daily visits to their deceased friends, and recal with pleasure and regret the scenes of their past life: here they familiarize themselves with their future state, and chuse the company they would wish to keep in the other world.—It is a common thing to make choice of their niche, and to try if their body fits it, that no alteration may be necessary after they are dead; and someimes, by way of a voluntary pendice, they accustom themselves to stand for hours in these niches.

Revolutionary Soldiers of Connecticut. Among the applicants for pensions was Lt. M. who obtained his title by his valor. His declaration was made out in due form. and certified by the judge, who knew him well, and could safely attest his merits and his services. The needed veteran possessed an infirmity, which rendered him unable to write his name, and, in signing the necessary decuments, he could only make his mark. At the storming of Fort Montgomery by the British, he was in the act of touching off a cannon, loaded to the muzzle with every kind of missile, when a shot carried away his arm, and the match dropped upon the ground; he immediately seized it with his left hand, and fired the piece, at the very point, and the very instant the British were entering the fort, which swept down a whole phalanx of the foe. For this heroic action he was honored with a commission; but in his old age he could not write his name with his

Another of these venerable men, tremling with age, applied for the pecessary papers to obtain a pension. The Judge inquired where he had served. "Why, first, (said he) in the old French war."-Ah, says the judge, you cannot obtain a pension for services at that period. Did you serve in the Revolutionary army?-O yes, I served all the war. I was at the battle of Bunker's Hill -afterwards at Long Island, and the capture of the Hessians at Trenton-I was at the attack of Germantown, and the battle of Monmouth—and finally, at the capture and iege of Yorktown, in Virginia; and," added the old man, his eyes rekindling with the fire of 1776, " I was the first American sentinel placed at the quarters of Lord Cornwallis, after he was an American prisoner." Emigration .- A caravan, consisting of eleven covered wagons, drawn by two, three or four horses each, two coachees, a number of outriding norses, and about 120 persons, composing the expedition under captains Blackman and Allen, for the state of Illinois, crossed the Powles Hook ferry on Friday, on its way to the west. Those two gentlemen having been for a number of years engaged as ship masters n the China trade, and made handsome fortunes, have now turned their attention to the fertile plains of the Illinois, and have commenced the forming of a settlement there on their extensive purchase.-The present caravan forms the first division. In the autumn the second division marches-and in the spring following the the third division, which is to complete the establishment, will advance. In the company which passed here yes-terday, there were farmers, carpenters, transact the business of said institution. equipments were in fire order, and the emigrants in fine spirits. The French Minister.

Mr. de Neuville, the French Minister, is spoken of in terms of the highest commendation.

In the course of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. de Neuville's health being drunk, he returned thanks in an elegant and affecting speech, in which he said (as nearly as can be recollected) "That, if even it were permitted him to speak in his native language, it would be impossible to find words adequate to the occasion; much less, in a language which he so imperfectly spoke, could he hope to convey the strong emotions of gratitude and sensibility with which Madame de N. and himself were penetrated at this last mark of friendship and esteem. Thise years ago, said he, I arrived in this country, the minister of France. Ten years before, I reached these happy shores a wandering exile. In both situations, whether as an exile or as a minister, in prosperity and adversity, I have never ceased to receive the sympathy and friendship of the America people. In this land, the asylum of the oppress people. In this land, the asystim of the oppressed and the home of the exiler this land, where the hand of charity is extended to the poor and unfortunate of every clime; this land cannot but be under the peculiar care of clivine Providence. And if any country ever deserved to be free and happy, it was surely this. He hoped, he wished he a ght soon return among us. place to Pittsburg. This property is situated on the power-ful and well known waters of Shade Creek and highly calculated to remunerate the Farmer, by its productiveness of grain, of grass, &c. &c. and the great price and constant demand for every thing he can raise. There is now a Furnace in full ope ration, and a Forge on the premises, and number of other settlements.

The population of the County is from 15000 to 16000. This land is as well watered and timbered, as any district in the State: the timber is oak, hickory, walnut, cheshut, sugar maple, poplar, & white ash, and as there is little or no underwood, it can be cleared with great facility, and at little expense. The district particularly abounds with Stone Coal, and a good proportion of Lime Stone, and the land is very rich and productive. The average yield of oats, &c. is from 50 to 60 bushels per acre; and as an additional proof of the strength and fertility of the soil, the timber grows very lofty and luxuriant, and the Calengaesis or the rich was shall be represented and the coal of the sale of townships 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14, in range 15, west.—9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14, in range 16, west.—12 and 13, in range 17, west.
