TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The second year of this establishment will expire on the 23d inst. To such of oiir subscribers who have been punctual in their payments, we return our sincere thanks. Tlie pressure of the times has induced us to forbear with many in debted to this office. The subscription, according to the terms, ought to be paid in advance) but many have not paid a cent, since the establishment went into operation. The amount of subscription to each person in the course of a year, is trifling; to the Printer, collectively, it is of great importance. The great espense attending a printing establishment, render it absolutely necessary, that payment in advance should be complied with: to this end, the following are the -conditions on which this paper will, after the 23d inst. be published. If paid within the year, the subscription will be Two Dollars; if suffered to go beyond that time, $\,Two\,$ Dollars and Fifty Cents will be demanded. The above regulation will be strictly adhered to.

An Oration,

DELIVERED THE 4th of JULY, AT FAIRTON, TO THE INHABITANTS OF EAIRFIELD,

By NATHANIEL OGDEN CLARK.

Published by request & those who were present.

To behold an assembly so numerous and res pectable, united in performing a duty that you owe the memories of illustrious heroes and sages united in performing a duty you owe your belov-ed country, excites in me sensations of a nature, my feeble powers of expression are incompetent to describe. If on earth there is a spectacle that God delights to witness; if fallen man can do any thing worthy of his Maker, let him this day look down upon our country. With gratitude to Thee, millions of hearts expand, that during tempests of troubles and misfortunes, thou did'st not utterly abandon our fathers' cause; that when Hope was about to resign her empire in their despond ing hearts, Thy arm was their support; that when nought was seen but frowns of tyranny, and distant fires, where freedom's chains were forging, Thou wast their Ark of safety; that when Liberty, pierced by the envenomed shafts of Oppres sion, lay bleeding on the field of battle, a balm was found to heal her wounds; that in the end she triumphed over the enemies of her existence. and assumed a crown which still she wears, and on-which, as yet, Time's destroying hand has not been able to make the least impression of his

My Countrymen-If this day the efforts of a youth, of one who has but lately entered the threshold of Science, are unequal to those which on similar occasions have received your approbation, may I not hope for indulgence. Surround ed by those whose abilities so far exceed my own; whose services for the public merit the warmest thanks a generous heart can offer a benefactor, I feel the weakness of my claim to the honor of addressing you; I feel my insufficiency to do that justice to our worthy ancestoi and yourselves, which might have been derived from those whose tongues before have plead for freedom, who long have laboured in her garden, walked among her blooming flowers; and long have eaten at the table of her precious fruits But, if in me there is a faint spark of eloquence let it glow while I dwell on departed excellence let if glow, while I relate the virtues and the suf ferings of those who thought

"A day, an hour of virtuous liberty, "Worth a whole eternity, in bondage."-

In your imaginations .. My Countrymen" tread back with me the paths of time; not to that period, when a Saviour for a dying world embraced tlie cross, not to that period, when the great Au thor and Undertaker of man's redemption could exclaim, his work was finished; but to an era next to it-in glory: an era, that redeemed us not from the bondage of sin, but that relieved us from the burthen of slavery. Let us go back to the day, when first upon these shores, where Paganism long had trodden in awful darkness, a Christian name was heard; to that day when True Religion, having in vain sought a resting-place in Europe having embarked on the Atlantic, and thrown herself upon the mercy of its billows, first cast an eye upon our country. There, what a scene is presented to our view. We behold the first emigrants to these United States, printing their footsteps on a barren beach; a spot where solemn silence until that hour, perhaps had slumbered from creation, save when awakened by the howling tempest, or by the voice of thunder. Here they found no friend to bid them welcome-they found no place of shelter;-bare creation, was their only dwelling-heaven was their only roof; no hospitable door opened to receive the strangers—no table spread for them a rich repast.— Left by those who conveyed them thither, he who knows all things, only knows their fate;-from them no tidings ever came:-where they remained, no monument was ever seen. Great Disposer, of events! man must obey thy will;—the newborn infant of America, having no guardian angel sent from thee, to watch its safety, by an un-known hand was strangled in its cradle.—This was justice, though severe. But let no tongue repine; let not a feeble worm reproach the God that gave it life, whether 'twas done in anger or in mercy: even

"The cloud-capt towers, the gorgeous palaces, "The solemn temples, the great globe itself,

" Yea, all which it inherits must dissolve,

"And like the baseless fabric of a vision, "Leave not a wreck behind."

Thus fruitless were the first attempts to esta blish a settlement: twenty-two years clapsed be-tore a second emigration: two companies then laid the foundation, upon which is built the super structure of our nation's greatness;-having arrived they found that the paths which led to security, were paved with obstacles, which nothing but the perseverance of those who were inspired with freedom, who thirsted after the honor of becoming the restorers of liberty to the world, could possibly have been able to surmount. Death, the great Creditor of the human race, awfully displayed his power. Wars and famine, and disease, tumbled them into the grave, the great prison of mankind. But gradually, their efforts removed their dangers and their sufferings; slow yet sure, they rose, and in ascent, looked with pride still higher;—they thought upon the dis-tant day, when splendid cities, with their glittering spires, should deck the western world; upon the day, when where stood a humble hut, should stand a throne or capitol. No longer the virtuous sons of Europe who patiently had drawn Oppression's car, could bear his yoke, they heard of lands, where man was equal to his fellow-man; they heard of lands, where was no haughty eye to glance disdain upon the honest poor: taking the final admonition of their parents' tombs, whose humble, silent dwelling was no more to be approached by filial footsteps, they bade adject their native country. Each western breeze wafted a crowded freight of patriots;—each ship, conscious of the treasures which she bore, wav'd roudly o'er their heads her flowing streamers;the heavens assumed a smiling aspect—the ocean-waves rejoiced around them;—bands of brothers vaited their approach, hastened to lead them to their dwellings.

"My countrymen"—Was one addressing you make to the subject whose talents could due justice to the subject, doubtless you long would listen with admiration. But, was I to dwell upon the early years of our country, upon her growth, and the unexampled happiness and prosperity of her virtuous inhabitants, 'tis feared that I should tresp iss upon your patience; that I should too long hinder you from assembling round this table, where you are about to engage in the delightful employment of rewarding departed merit; that I should too long hinder you from paying that dear tribute of affec-tion to a Washington, Warten, and Montgomery, your bosoms burn to bestow them.—Wherefore, leaving the remembrance of our earlier ancestors again to repose, let us linger a few moments upon the Revolution. But Justice first retire-Stand not where could be heard, that which from thy eye inust call the heart-sprung tear; let no past deed of cruelty, that England perpetrated against our unoffending state, again dis urb thy peace; thy bleeding heart she ever dared to wound afresh; to thy remonstrances she never lent an ear. Weep not for that which is beyond thy reach, but cherish in thy breast a hope, that nature's rights hereafter will more strictly be observed; that thou and Justice, wilt behold thy-self esteemed as sacred as indeed thou art, and may that power who on thy pure and heavenly robe dares lay the finger of oppression, meet with the fate his cruelty deserves.

The youthful colonies, nursed by an indulgent arent's care, bid fair for greatness;—to revenge Old England's wrongs they drew the sword, not to be sheathed but in the bosom of her adversary-to discern their wants, she kept a vigil's eye, and with a liberal hand bestowed her bounties. But Love at length was changed to Envy;with jealousy she saw our fathers possessing that liberty and happiness, which her own subjects had lost;—she also strove to wrest from them the charter of their native freedom. Yes! she dared to rob them of those sacred rights, which Heaven in mercy gave to man—she dared to lay the axe unto that tree which tedious toil had cultivated; which was intended to remain 'till time alone should lop its branches; till time, unaided by another's hand, should bend its tower ing top, and lay it prostrate at his feet. How did our fathers plead that she should spare it—How they appealed to justice—how did they warn her of the consequence. Deluded tyranny he framed the sword that slew him; he dug the grave in which he was immured. But before he fell, Earth drank the precious blood of freemen—she fed up-on those bodies which had contained souls that spurned oppression; that feared not death; despised receiving from a master's hand the bread of slavery. From the door of congress Fame blew her trump; the sound of Independence echoed hrough the world-shook England's throne. The tyrant raged; rebellion rang throughout his empire—His subjects saw his phrenzy; they saw their country's pride enter the floating hearses which conveyed them to their sepulchres Oppressor of our fathers! what now disturbs thee?! What has deprived "thy sovereignty of reason?" lias conscience ceased to slumber? Is it a picture of the works of death thy reign has wrought, that renders thee the present sport of misery! If so, let others read a lesson of instruc tion, and avoid the rocks on which thy reason wrecked. Man should bend his knee only to him who made him—He alone is his legitimate Monarch. A kingdom is but mockery of Heavenin the eye of God, what is monthly! The king and the cottager, the prince and beggar, are objects of his equal care.

Soldiers of the Revolution! accept our sentiments of gratitude; ye valiant bands! Ye who preserved the 'golden chair of freedom! may your spirits this day commune with ours. Like ye, we've felt the rod of her who rules the seas; in violation of the laws of God, of nature, and of nations, she has plundered the unoffending merchant even of all his hopes; size has drugged the free-born sailor from the decks he loved to tread; she has forever snatched the father from his helpless children; the scanty wages which had fed them would no more relieve their wants; fleeting liappiness for sook the humble roof, where cheerfulness before had smiled: - they had a father,

Alas, nor wife nor children more could lie be. hold, "Nor friends, nor sacred home."

At length the sleeping sword of war awakedflew from its scabbard—sought the heart of those who broke its slumbers—our infant navy sent the pride of England's fleet upon an errand from whence they never can return.* Over her guilty head Destiny now brandishes his spear-the mighty fabric of her constitution is crumbling into ruin. But from that empire whose royalty is threatened with destruction, let us turn to that whose Chief Magistrate, attended by no flat'ring

This day sitting under our own trees, we will drink rich draughts of social pleasure; we will feed upon those fruits, our fathers provided for us, which we have preserved in all the excellence that we received them. Nothing forebodes misfortune-No fiery comet's glare bids us again prepare for war. The concave sends its richest blessings; the convex crowns itself with plenty. Unfeel ing monster!, Could British gold tempt you to such barbarous deeds! Can British justice saction such inhuman warfare! Let us forget the past; enjoy the present, our imaginations revel ling in scenes of future glory. Divided we shall fall, but united we can stand the successive shocks

To yon, "My fair Countrywomen" the last and most beautiful work of creation; a link in the peat chain of being; not between man and a creature irrational, but between man and an angel; not below, but above him in natural endowments; a few words I beg leave to offer. Our fathers fought for wives anrl' daughters; 'twas love of them that nerv'd their arms; 'twas love of diem that led them from their homes into the field of danger. Be then virtuous; be what you are; be what you have been: and when storms of political danger gather over us, you shall be sheltered from their fury:—then may he who falls for you be envied in his death, and Let him who conquers be received with "welcomes" such as his protecting arms in justice may require. And although you hear no hostile cannon's thunder: though you share not in the soldier's toil, to you with him, belongs the victory. Smile but on him who loves his country; shun him who would betray it. My Countrymen—Whether another anniversa ry will find us enjoying the blessings of peace. or engaged in war, must be left to futurity to de termine. But may that Providence who holds in his hands all powers and principalities, who look? with a partial eye upon the humble simplicity of a republic, rather than the splendors of a mo narchy; who has preserved us through dangers and difficulties, still be our defence. To Thy guardian care we desire to commit the great object of our love, praying that she may ever wear the mantle of prosper ty. But if struggles must arise, that Thou wilt be her shield and buckler; that thou wilt clothe with Thy armour, and march with her to battle And if in the progress of time her dissolution must take place, may it be unattended with such scenes of human woes, as have dressed Europe in mourning; as have rendered carnage and calamities the sport of princes the common spectacles of mankind. But may she reclining her aged head upon the pillow of death sink sweetly into that repose from which she is more to be awakened. May she from being glide gently into non-existence, shrouded with honor; leaving a name, whose radiancy reflected from the catalogues of the nations of the earth, shall engross the attention of an admiring world.

Balloon - The inhabitants of this town were gratified on Friday evening last, by the ascendin of a Balloon, under the direction of Mr S. O. Tazewell, Watch-Maker, of this place The novelty of the circumstance attracted a large number of spectators. The evening was well adapted to the purpose, being dark, with very little wind. Its appearance in the air, as far as it could be seen, war indeed splendid. We un derstand it mas found on Saturday morning, in Deerfield; having went the distance of 6 miles.

SUMMARY-

Capture of Amelia Island .- It is stated in the Savannah Republican, that the Patriots under Gen. Gregor M'Gregor, took possession of Ame_ lia Island on the 30th of June, without a single gun being fired at them from the fort. 'The latest accounts saythat they are preparing to march district or township in which the offence shall to St. Augustine. This is a post of some strength; have been committed; and shall be one half for to St. Augustine. This is a post of some strength; but they do not apprehend much mes stance. Se veral hundreds have joined the Patriot standard since it has been planted in East Florida.

Fall of Pernambuca.-This place was re-taken on the 19th of May by the Portuguese, without bloodshed. The counter revolution was effected by the Portuguese merchant sailors, 1100 strong; who stormed the forts, headed by their respec-

FOREIGN NEWS .- The following articles of intelligence have been received by the ship Mir nerva, at New-York, 39 days from Live pool.

A small fleet of Tunisian and Algerine vessels had arrived in the British Channel and captured several vessels, among which was the Hamburgh ship Ocean, from Charleston for 3-lamburgh; she was re-captured by a British Bloop of War, and had arrived in the Downs. It appears that the designs of these cruisers were confined to. Hamburgh and Bremen vessels.

The London Globe of the 22d of May states, as a report from the Continental letters and papers, "that Portugal will be ceded to Spain, and that the Court of Brazil will receive an indemnity in South America.

ELIZABETH-TOWN, July 8. Fourth of July

Was a proud day throughout the United States. It was pleasant to anticipate nine millions of people assembled to commemorate the era of their emancipation from British thraldom, which has given us thirty-nine years of prosperous peace, while a great proportion of the old world has engaged in the turmoil of war and devastation.

It was celebrated in this town in its usual style by firing of cannon, ringing of bells, military parade, procession, and a very appropriate oration by William Halsted, jun esquire.

After the duties of the day were performed at the church, the Society of Cincinnati returned to he City Tavern, where they dined, transacted their usual business, and adjourned to meet at Trenton the Fourth of July next.

The following are the appointments made for the ensuing year:

Gen. Bloomfield, President. Gen. Cumming, Vice-President. Gol. E. Beatty, Treasurer. Geo. C. Barber, esq. Secretary.

Delegates to the General Society of the Cincin-di-Gen. Bloomfield, Gen. Beatty, and Col. Og-
