It is time, we sometimes hear the lukewarm and spiritless, expressing their fears, that, probably, at no distant period our rights may be wrested from us, and we become the prey of civil discord, or of foreign domination: and for examplies, cites the downfall of the ancient republics, such as Greece and Rome. But, one siege to the city on the 16th; while his excellenef the chief causes of their defection and cy gen. Morino with his division guarded the degradation, is forever banished from us: and that is, ignorance. Their ignorance of human nature, of their own rights, and of the principles of true liberty, led them to place implicit confidence in an eloquent statesman, or a victorious commander, who if they had the disposition, could easily ride into supreme power over the heads of the common people. The reverse of all this is the case with us. The sovereign power is in the hand of the people, and they are too tenacious of it to resign it calmly. And where is the power that can compel them to do it? We have no stand-Ing army to awe them to obedience. No:

CARLOS SOUBLETTE." From the Democratic Press. ST. THOMAS, 6th Aug. 1818. " From the Maine we have very little news. It seems however pretty certain that Bolivar is president; and that the Independent army is to be commanded by five Lieut. Generals, namely, Paez, Aris mendi, Bermudas, Gregor M'Gregor and Marino; the latter however it is said is unit well disposed towards the present or-der of things. Gen. Gregor M'Gregor has ascended the Oronoke with about 600 English recruits; and several vessels have arrived at Augustura from England with every thing necessary. I saw a list in the hands of one of the gentlemen, concerned in these supplies ;—it stands thus: from England, 12,000 muskets, 800 quiptals of methis detestable pratice. Gandour it seems is forsaking the human heart, and charity turning to marble. Where can a suitable epithet be found, for that civilization we profess; and so much admire! Boasting ourselves possessed of Beraturie, it and refinement, we lend a willing courte the vile aspersions of some envious person, while he draws, in hellish lines, the character of quantity of powder, 2500 muskets, and a complete and numerous train of light arcomplete and numerous train of light ar tillery has been sent to Augustura, by Brion. bear Fruit.

BY THE REV. G.L. HEMPEL

In my early years I saw my father, who was fond of Pomology, and skilled in that science, cutting a ring on several branches of trees, which already were in blossom, for the purpose of producing, by that means, larger fruit than usual. This way not his own invention, but as far as I recollect derived from a French Journal. Thirty years ago, when I was a boy, I practised this operation, in imitation of him, and there by obtained larger pears and bore the next year. By this reiterated ap-pearance I was led to the idea, that perhaps this mode of ringing the bark might be a means of compelling every unproductive branch to yield fruit. With this view inferred from the resolutions of the town I cut rings upon a considerable number of branches, which as yet showed no blossom It appears that the county jail had been and found by repeating the experiment, erected upon the public hospital loc of the the truth of my supposition indisputably It appears that the county jail had heen placed with great violence at Tanger and Oran. The following letter, dated Gibraltar, June 4, 1818, relating to the plague at Oran, has been transmitted from the Council Office to the Commissioners of the Council Office to the Commissioners of Council Office to the Commissioners of Council Office to the Commissioners of Council Office to the Council Office to the Commissioners of Council Office to the Commissioners of Council Office to the Council Office to the Commissioners of Council Office to the Council Office to the Council Office to the Commissioners of Council Office to the Council O whole province of Oran was infected; and that the mortality was considerable in made a representation upon the subject, to which they turned a deaf ear. He then notified to them that the unpleasant duty have marked a ring upon the branch as already begun to shew itself in Fez, the usual seat of Government of the Morocco dominions; and a city, from its numerous population, and the commer and assigned Tuesday, the 14th July, as the bark, which immediately lies upon the cital spirit of its inhabitants having the wood; so that no connection whatever remost extensive relations of any in the ecution of his duty. Accordingly, at the mains between the two parts of the bark. but the bare and naked wood appears white and smooth. But this back ring, which is without arms, and commenced the work. to compel the tree to bear, must be made at the right time, that is, when in all nature the buds are strongly swelling or are breaking out into blossoms. In the same year a callous is formed at the edges of the ring, on both sides, and the connection of he bark, that had been interrupted, is restored again without any detriment to the tree, or the branch operated upon, in which? the artificial wound soon grows over.

By this simple, though artificial means of forcing every fruit tree, with certainty, to bear, you obtain the following important advantages -

1. You may compel every young tree of which you do not know the sort, to show its fruit, and decide sooner, whether, beng of a good quality, it may re first state, or requires to be grafted.

2. You may thereby, with certainty, get fruit of everyigood sort, of which you wish to see the produce in the next year.

3. This method may probably serve to increase considerably the quantity in this country (England.)

The branches so operated upon are hung with fruit, while the others that are not ringed, often have nothing, or very litsink when it arrives at the sesond hopper the upon them.—This effect is easy to he placed below. The second hopper is of an explained from the theory of the motion oblong figure and larger than the first, so of the sap. Though I knew I must descend into the river, I detached myself from my balloon, which instantly rose whith greatly increased celerity. My parachute expanded itself promptly and freely, and in 4 minutes 40 seconds I found myself in the midst of the waters. I may say, that in this situation I was indebted for my life a second time to my father. The floating machine, of which he is the inventor, and which was placed in the bottom of my little boat, made it float; but, from its being entangled with cords, I was not able to adjust it. Like Icarus, I neglected the prudent counsel of my father. The fluating machine being at the bottom, raised the lower part in such a manner, that the in strument destined for my safety would have been my destruction, had I not, by a miraculous instinct, jumped into the water, though I did not know how to swim. I was so fortunate as to catch the side of my boat that was raised by the floating machine, and saved myself in that precarious situation.

"This however, did not prevent my remarking the grand coup d'wil presented by my parachute's touching the water on one side, expanding like a full sail, and conducting myself and my little boat to the opposite bank. Two boatmen, named Plassau and Droullard, were there the first that came to my relief. For seven minutes I floated on the water, and my strength was beginning to fail me."

Captain Symmes' theory of the earth, lately published at St. Louis, is not quite so novel, as is generally thought: the idea of the globe by ng hollow at the poles, was suggested many years since. In a work published in Paris, by an anonymous Writer, called "New conjectures on the Globe of the earth," the author asserts, the globe, it is not possible to doubt; but it is a composition of several be& of slime arranged upon each other, by the waters of the river, and consisting of 'the substances which they contain, and which these rivers carry off froin the rising grounds, in order to deposit them on their banks, or in the bottom of the sea, to which they run; that the globe of the earth was originally formed of a flat crust composed of these depositions: that this crust being very thin (only two thousand three hundred and eighty fathoms thick) includes a very subtle air, is supported by the weight of a double atmosphere which surrounds it; that this equilibrium having ceased at the time of he deluge, this crust was broken and scattered; that, its wrecks floated in the sea, as the clouds do in the air, and were heaped on each other, and triumphantly over the deep, and in certain parts so accumulated as to form illors have claimed the "mountain certain prominences; that our mountains certain prominences; that our mountains proceeded from this; that by this sub-traction from the crust of the earth, of the pieces by which the mountains were then formed, there remained vacuities in this crust two or or three hundred leagues in diameter; that it is by the suck from her brow the wreathe of means of these apertures, that the seas of victory and glory, and take formal both surfaces of this crust, at present, communicate with each other, that these seas enter by the poles into the cavity of part of Great Britain to retain her the globe; and turning round this cavity in mon, for parting with power and a spiral line, they come out between the are not very palatable affairs, and as tropics; that the entries of these waters so with her as with any body, and from the external surface of the earth, exertions on our part to take it and their departure from the internal to the external surface, are the causes of the their appearance, and have already flux and reflux of the sea, which are more sensible in one part than an another, according to the position and largeness of Dreadful Accidents Died, in Spring Treach accidents — Deed, in Spring-field, Vermont, on the 14th inst. Mrs. Lockwood, wife of Mr. Amos Lockwood, of that place, aged 38. Her death was the result of a melancholy accident of which the following are the most important particulars as stated to us. The deceased, in company with her husband, and a large party of her friends and acquaintance, went on a high hill or mountain, for the purpose of picking blue berries. On the east side of the mountain is a precipice of nearly 400 leet, and a part of it almost perpendicular. It is supposed that the deceased descended from the top of the hill about 100 feet, over a part which was not so steep as the precipice below. She then fell about 10 feet to a place where her son-in-law stood, who attempt ed to stop her progress, in which he succeeded for a few moments, holding her with one hand arid grasping a bush with the other, Her clothes, however, giving way she fell about 10 feet further, from whence with several interruptions, caused by projections in the side of the mountain, she fell about 96 feet where she finally stopped. The whole distance which she was precipitated was calculated at 216 feet. She was found sitting at the foot of a tree which supported her, with her clothes decently composed about her, gasping for breath and unable to speak. he survived the fatal catastrophe about two hours and thirty minutes,, hut expired on the spot before-medical aid could be obtained.

> Melancholy Occurrence. -- We learn with much regret, that a small sloop, name not remembered, capt. Preble, loaded with furniture, from Jamestown, James River, bound to this place, was capsized near Hog Island, in a sudden squall, on Wed. nesday last about 4 o'clock' in the after. noon. Mr. Beatson and two young children, passengers, were drowned, leaving his unfortunate wife, the mother of the children, to lament their bereavement. The sloop was afterwards righted and are rived here on Sunday morning with Mrs. Beatson on board, who, we learn' is in a most deplorable situation, being deprived of her protector, a, stranger in our land, and in very indigent circumstances. Mr. Beatson and family were natives of Halifax, Yorkshire, Eng. and had resided only 12 months in this country. Capt. Freble and two lads who assisted in navigating and sloop were also saved.
