The great advantage of being alone is, that you may choose your company; either your books, your friend, your God, or

If books be your subject, or what you lately read and laid up in your memory, your mental employment will be recollec-tion and judgment: Recollection, to recal to your mind the good things you have read; and judgment, to range them under their proper class; and to consider upon what occasion, or in what company, it may be proper or useful to produce them.

If you choose a friend for the companion of your solitude, let it not be merely for your own pleasure; but consider in what way you may improve, or entertain him; or what it is you would learn from him; and in what manner you may best behave towards him, the next time you come into his company.

When you desire to have the great God for the object of your contemplation, as you should always do in your religious retirements, your mind cannot be too serious, composed, and free. Now it is that the thoughts will be most apt to revolt and ramble; and the utmost efforts must be used to guard and guide them. There are two things in this case, which you should never forget:

1. Earnestly implore His help that you may think, not only steadily, but worthity

2. Consider him as present with you, and as witness to all the employment of your mind.

ISLANDS OF ICE.

Mr. Laing's voyage to Spitzbergen, &c. just published, gives the following curi-ous account of the floating masses of ice so frequently met with in the Arctic sea-

"These Iloating mountains of ice, to which Dutch navigators have given the name of ice-bergs, and which are of different magnitudes, are originally formed on and. The sun, even in those latitudes, has a considerable power in melting the snow on the mountains, which, running down into the vallies and again congealing, segments frequently break off from the enutire mass, and fall into the sea. The ice of which these floating masses are composed is of various colors. The original fresh water ice is sometimes incrusted with that formed from the sea water, and this again is covered with new ice formed of fallen snow. The different positions of the spectator relatively to the incidental rays of light, vary likewise the seeming hue of the whole. In some composed of melted snow, which is sometimes but partially the case, the refrac tion of the solar ray is most beautiful and the appearance of those floating mountains on the side opposite, presents the sun in such a blaze of light, intermingled with different glowing tints, as totally to baffile all description.

THE SEA SERPENT.

We lament, in common with the public the disappointment of the hopes that had been raised by the report of the capture of this remarkable animal. Captain Richard Rich and his party on Thursday last, terminated a cruise of nearly three weeks, in pursuit of the Serpent, by taking of a fish not very common in our waters, which from its siugular appearance in the water they had been led to believe was the Sea Serpent so often described. The intell igence of the capture of this fish, and the assurance of some of the crew, who either believed, or wished others to believe, that this was in fact the animal which has been he object of so much curiosity and specuation, occasioned a general belief that the leviathan of the deep had yielded to the skill and enterprize of our seamen.—The rumour produced a very great excitement in this town, and in proportion as curiosi ty was raised, disappointment has been severely felt. There were a few whom we will do the justice to say, that they did not believe the intelligence; and the farther justice to say, as far as we are informed, that they doubted heuitively, without taking any trouble to amine the testimony on which the proposition rested.

The fish taken by Capt. Rich, and which he brought to fown and exhibited yesterday, is of the Mackerel tribe, and s the Thunny or Horse Mackerel. not remarkable nor rarely met with. The inquiry naturally arises, can this fish, or any number of them, be the monster so often described as a Sea Serpent? We answer decidedly, no. existence of some remarkable animal in our waters last summer, particularly near Cape Ann, was proved by the most satis-factory testimony, and the appearance which he presented are not in any degree to be accounted for by supposing any number of the fish now taken. The descriptions which we have had this season of the Serpent, have been less consistent and satisfactory, and undoubtedly often exaggerated. But neither these exaggerated descriptions nor the error of persons who by mistake have been pursuing what had nothing of the remarkable and charactericic appearances of the Sex Serpent ought to lead us to suspect all former testimony.

ANOTHER CAUTION. To Foreigners arriving in the United States.

On Monday morning, Thomas Hilton, an Englishman, about fourteen days in this country, was met by a young man, apparently about 20 of years age, calling himself Thomas Moore, who inquired of him if he wanted employment, to which Hilton replied in the affirmative. Agreed to give Hilton and his wife $28 per month, for one year, and was to send them to his farm, which, he haid, was in New Jersey. After some desultory conversation, Moore in quired of Hilton, if he had breakfasted, Hilton answere he had not, but was going out to buy something for himself and family to breakfast on. There is no oc. casion for that,' replied Moore, 'you may as well breakfast with me.' So saying, he led the unsuspecting stranger through different streets, until they came into Third street, between Arch and Market, where he desired him to wait, till he went to in-quire after their breakfast. He according, ly, went to Mr. L. Taylor's boarding house, No. 47 North Third street, and inquired if he and two others could have boarding for a week or two; when he was informed by Mr. Taylor that he could be accommodated, he desired that breakfast might be got for them; and going out, promised to return shortly, which he did with the aforesaid Hilton. Moore desired to be shown into a private room, and that pen, ink and paper might be brought; this being done, he and the stranger were left alone while Mr. T's, family were preparing the brakfast. While thus alone, Moore inquired of Hilton, it he had any English notes, as he expressed it, to which Hilton replied no, but had some guineas, twenty-four he believed. They will anwer me better, said Moore, as I am about making a shipment.-Let me have what guineas you have, and I will give you in return five dollars for each. Hilton un-suspectingly gave him the guineas, and while counting them, Moore told him not to fear, as the landlord, Mr. Taylor, was his brother. Desiring Hilton to remain in the room till he should go to his father's store, which was but a few doors off, and get the money for him, which would occupy but a few moments. I BRING thee, love, a golden Chain;
I bring thee, too, a flowery Wreath;
The gold shall never wear a stain;
The flowrets long shall sweetly breath. Come, tell me which the tie shall be, To bind thy gentle heart to me?

Yes, yes, I read that ready eye,
Which furthers when the tongue is loth;
Thou lik's the form of either tie,
And hold it thy playful hands for both. And hold'st thy playful hands for both.

Ah! if there were not something wrong,

The world would see them blended oft. The chain would make the wreathe so strong
The wreathe would make the chain so sof Then might the gold, the flow rets, be Sweet fetters for my love and me!

REMARKABLE OCCURRENCE.

GENNADIUS, a physician, a man of emi nence in piety and charity, had in his youth some doubts of the reality of another life. He saw, one night in a dream, a young man of a celestial figure, who bade him follow him. The apparition led him into a magnificent city, in which his ears ial exceeded the most enchanting harmony that he had ever heard. To the inquiry from whence those ravashing sounds roceeded, his conductor answered, that they were the hymns of the blessed in heaven, and disappeared. Gennadius awoke, and the impression of the dream was dissipated by the transactions of the day. The following night, the same young man appeared, and asked whether he recollected him?—The melodious songs which I heard last night, answered Gennadius, are now brought again to my memo ry .- Did you hear them, said the apparition, dreaming or awake ?—I heard them in a dream.—True replies the young man, and our present conversation is a dream; but where is your body while I am speak ing to you?-In my chamber. But know you not that your eyes are shut, and that you cannot see?—My eyes, indeed, are shut.—How then can you see? Gennadius could make no answer.—In your dream. the eyes of your body are closed and use less; but you have others, with which you see me. Thus, after death, although the eyes of your fleshare deprived of sense and motion, you will remain alive, and capable of sight and hearing by your spiritual part. Cease then to entertain a doubt of the great truth of another life after death! By this occurrence, Gennadius aftirms that he became a sincere believer in a future

EXTRACTS FROM THE REPORT.

This school under its present system of regulations; commenced on the first Sab-bath of September, 1817.

The number of children is from 170 to 200, which has been divided into sixteen classes. Every class has a teacher who statedly attends. The whole school, with its instructions, is under the superintendance of a first, and two assistant direc-

It is a pleasure to state that the children from the first establishment of the school, have been very orderly in their behaviour; and the teachers have cheer fully and punctually attended to their respective classes. With a little variation the school has been opened at 8 o'clock in the morning, with prayer, and continued two hours : in the afternoon at one, and closed half past two. The gratification is great to see the at tention of the children—of animation and eagerness of these dear little ones in their learning.

This doubly compensates the teachers for the labour and exercion in communica ting their instructions. To the truly pious, it is matter of joy and rejoicing, to see so many children eagerly engaged in committing to memory the sacred Scriptures, hymns, and catechisms.

A detailed account cannot here he given of the improvement of the children of this Sunday School. Suffice it to state, that ercat progress has been made. One gir about 12 years of age, has committed to memory, 60 chapters, consisting of 1663 verses of scripture, 196 questions of catechism, and a great number of hymns.

Some have have competited 30, some 40, and some 50 chapters of the Bible, and the shorter and larger catechism, amounting to 303 questions.

of Proverbs, 60 hymns, and all the larger catechism.

Such results of Sunday School teach ing, are highly gratifying, and calculated to stimulate teachers to redoubled diligence in their all important labour.

> A gentleman in the neighbourhood of Burntisland, says the Glasgow Chronicle, has succeeded in domesticating a Seal, he singularities of whose instinct and disposition render it an object of great curiosity. It appears to possess all the sagacity of the dog, lives in its master's nouse, and eats from his hand. He usually takes it away with him in his fishing excursions, upon which occasion it affords no small entertainment. When thrown into the water, it will follow for miles the the track of the boat, and although thrust back by the oars, it never relinquishes its purpose; indeed, it struggles so hard to regain its seat, that one would imagine its fondness for its master had entirely overcome the natural predilection for its native element.
