LOVE AND PATRIOTISM;

OR, THE EXTRAORDINARY ADVENTURES OF

M. DUPORTAIL, Late Major General in the Armies of the United States. interspersed with many Surprising Incidents in the Life of the late

COUNT PULASKI.

COULD I any longer doubt the extent of my misery? I instantly called for Boleslas, one of the most faithful of my domestics: I ordered him to place trusty spies about the palace of Pu-lassi, who should bring an account of every thing that passed there; and commanded that if the count returned to the capital before me, he should follow him wherever he went. Having given these instructions, and not yet despairing of still finding the family at one of their seats in the neighbourhood of the metropolis, I myself set out in the pursuit of my mistress.

I accordingly searched thro all the domains of Pulaski, and asked concerning Lodoiska, of all the passengers whom I met, but without suc-ess. After having spent eight days in fruitless inquiry, I resolved to return to Warsaw, and I was not a little astonished, on my arrival, to ind a Russian army encamped on the banks of the Vestula, almost under the very walls of that

It was night when I entered the capital: the palaces of the grandees were all illuminated; an immense multitude filled the streets; I heard songs of joy; I beheld wine flowing in rivulets in the public squares; every thing announced to the that Poland had a king. Boleslas, who expected me with impatience, informed me that Pulaski had returned alone on e, second day after my departure, and that he had not stirred from his own palace but to reseendancy of Russia became every day more manifest. During the last assembly held this fery morning, adds he, M. de P—united almost all the suffrages in his favour, and was about to be declared king, when Pulaski pronounced the Stil sets: at that instant twenty sabres were brandished in the air. The fierce palatine of whom the count had insulted in the former assembly, was the first to rush forwards, and gave him a terrible wound on the head. Zaremba, and some others, flew to the defence of their friend, but all their efforts would have been unable to have saved him, if M. de P-, had not ranged himself on their side, exclaiming at the same time, that he would sacrifice, with his own hand, the first person who dared to approach him. On this the assailants retired. In the mean time Pulaski, fainting with the loss of sessibility. Zaremba departed also, swearing to avenge his friend. Having thus become master of the deliberations, the numerous partizans of M de P— instantly proclaimed him sovereign. Pulaski, who had been carried to his palace, was soon restored to life; and the surgeon who attended him, declared that his wounds, although dangerous, were not mortal. In that state, although languishing under the most cruel torments, contrary to the advice of all his friends, he ordered himself to be lifted into a carriage, and before noon he left Warsaw, accompanied by Mazeppa and a few mal-contents.

It was scarcely possible to have announced Worse news to me. My friend was upon the throne, but my reconciliation with Pulaski ap-Peared henceforth impossible, and in all appear ace Lodoiska was lost forever. I knew her fa ther so well as to be under apprehensions lest he should proceed to extremities with his daughter I was affrighted at the present, I durst not Mok forward towards the future; and my heart was so devoured with chagrin, that I did not go out, even to felicitate the new king. One of my people, Bolesias dispatched after Pulaski, returned at the end of the fourth day he had followed him fifteen leagues from the apital; when about that distance, Zaremba, Who perceived a stranger at a little distance from the carriage, began to conceive suspicions. As they proceeded, four of his followers, who had concealed themselves behind the ruins of an old house, surprised my courier, and conducted im to Pulaski. He, with a pistol in his hand, forced him to acknowledge to whom he belongd I shall send you back to Lovzinski, said the fierce republican, on purpose to announce !

from me, that he shall not escape my just ven-geance. At these words they blind-folded my servant, who could not tell where they had carried him. At the end of four and twenty hours they returned, and tying a handkerchief once they returned, and tying a handkerchief once more about his eyes, they put him into a carriage, which having stopped at length, after a joi ney of several hours, he was ordered to descend. Scarce had he put his foot upon the ground when his guards departed at a full gallop; on which he removed the bandage, and found himself on the same spot as that on which he had been first a greated. he had been first arrested.

. This intelligence filled me with uneasiness the menaces of Pulaski terrified me much less on my own account that on Lodoiska's, who re mained in his own power: in the midst of his fury he might sacrifice her life! I resolved therefore, to expose myself to every species of danger, on purpose to discover the retreat of the

Given the prison of his only child.
On the succeeding day, after informing my sisters of my design, I left the capital: Boleslas alone accompanied me, and I passed for his brother. We wandered all over Poland, and I then perceived, that the fears of Pulaski were but too well justified by the event. Under pretence of obliging the inhabitants to take the oath of fidelity to the new king, the Russians, scatter-ed about in the provinces, desolated the country, and committed a multitude of exactions in the

After having spent three months in vain in-quiries, despairing of being able to find Lodois ka, touched with the most lively grief for the fate of my country, and weeping at one and the same time for her misfortunes and my own, I was about to return to Warsaw, to inform the new king of the excesses committed by those foreigners in his states, when an adventure that at first seemed to be very inauspicious, forced me to a very different resolution.

The Turks having declared war against Russia, the Tartars of Budziac and the Crimel made frequent incursions into Volhynia, where I then was. Four of these robbers attacked us one afternoon, as we were leaving a wood near Ostropel. I had imprudently neglected to load my pistols; but I made use of my sabre with so much address and good luck, that in a short time two of them fell covered with wounds. Boleslas encountered the third: the fourth attack. ed me with great fury; he gave me a slight ćut upon the leg, but received a terrible stroke in return that dismounted him from his horse, and felled him to the ground. Boleslas, at the same moment, perceived himself disencumbered from his enemy, who, at the noise made by his com-rade's fall, took to flight. He, whom I had just vanquished, then addressed me in very bad Po-lish, and said: "A brave man like you, ought to be generous. I beg my life of you; instead of putting me to death, succour me, relieve me, bind up my wounds and assist me to rise."

He demanded quarter with an air so noble that I did not hesitate for a moment. I accord ingly descended from my horse, and Boleslas and myself having h lped him to rise, we dressed his wound. You behave well," says the Tartar to me. "you belave well." As he spoke, we beheld a cloud o dust; and in a moment 'after; more than three hundred Tartars rushed upon us at full speed. "Be not afraid, dread nothing says he, whom I had spared; "I am cheef of this troop?' Accordingly, by means of; sign, he stops his followers, who were 'on the point of massacreing us; and speaking to them in their own language, which I was unable to comprehend; they instantly opened their ranks on pur pose to permit us to pass.

Brave man, exclaims the captain, addressing himself to me once more, had I not reason to say, that you behaved well? You left me my life, and now I save yours: it is semetimes right to save an enemy, and even a robber! Hear me, my friend in attacking you, I followed my profession, and you did your duty in conquering me let us therefore embrace.—He then adds: the day is wasting, and I would not advise you to travel in these cantons during the night. My peo-ple are about to repair each to his respective post, and I cannot answer for their indiscretion You perceive a castle on a rising ground, towards the right: it belongs to a certain Pole of the name of Dourlinski, for whom we have a right esteem, because he is very rich: Go, demand ar asylum from him; tell him that you have wound ed Titsikan, and that Titsikan pursues you. He is acquainted with my name: I have already made him pass many an uneasy night. As to the rest, you may rely on it, that while you remain with him, his castle shall be sacred; but be careful not to come forth on any account before the end of three days, and not to remain there longer than eight—Adieu!

It was with unfeigned pleasure that we took leave of Titsikan and his companions. The advice of the Tartar was a command; I therefore said to Boleslas, let us immediately make for the castle that he has now pointed out to us; I am well acquainted with this same Dourlinski by name. Pulaski has sometimes spoken to me concerning him; he perhaps is not ignorant of the place to which the count has retired, and it is not impossible but that with a little address we may be able to draw the secret from him. I shall say at all events that we are sent by Pulasi, and this recommendation will be of more serice to us than that of Titsikan: in the mean time, Boleslas, do not forget that I am your brother, and be sure not to discover me.

We soon arrived at the ditch of the castle; the servants of Dourlinski demanded who we were: I answered that we were come from Pulaski, and wished to speak to their lord, and that we had been attacked by robbers, who were still in pursuit of us. The drawbridge was accordingly let down and having entered, we were informed that at present we could not see Dourlinski, but give us audience. They then demanded our arms, which we delivered up without any diffi-culty, and Bolesias soon after took an opportuni-ty of looking at my wound, which was found to be but superficial.

In a short time a frugal repast was served up for us in the kitchen. We were afterwards conducted to a lower chamber, where two bad beds were prepared for us. The domestics then left us without any light, and immediately locked the door of the apartment.

I could not close my eyes during the whole Titsikan had given me but a slight wound, but that which my heart had received was so very deep! At day break, I became imwas so very deep! At day break, I became impatient in my prison, and wished to open the shutters, but they were nailed up. I attacked them, however, so vigorously, that the fastening gave way, and I beheld a very fine park. The window being low, I cleared it at a leap, and in a single instant found myself in the gardens of the Polish chieftain.

After having walked about for a few minutes, I sat down on a stone bench, which was placed at the foot of a tower, whose ancient architecture I had been some time considering. I remained for a few seconds enveloped in reflection, when a tile fell at my feet. I thought it had dropped from the roof of this old building; and, to avoid the effects of a similar accident, I went and placed myself at the other end of the seat. A few moments after, a second tile fell by my side. The circumstance appeared sur-prising: I arose with some degree of inquietude, and attentively examined the tower. I perceived at about twenty-five or thirty feet from the ground, a narrow opening. On this I picked up the tiles which had been thrown at me, and on the first I discovered the following words, written with a bit of plaster.

Lovzinski, is it you! Do you still live?

And on the second these: Deliver me! save Lodoiska.

It is not possible for you, my dear Faublas, o conceive how marry different sentiments occupied my mind at one and the same time: my astonishment, my joy, my grief, my embarrassment, cannot be expressed. I examined once more the prison of Lodoiska, and plotted in my own mind how I could procure her liberty. She at length threw down another tile, and I read as

"At midnight, bring me paper, ink, and pens; and to-morrow, an hour after sun rise, come and receive a letter.—Begone."

Facility of connecting the North and South Seas by a Canal.

Under this head, the Connecticut Couant has given the following curious and interesting extract from the Edinburgh Review of Molina's Account of Chili:-

"In the year 1805, a spherical chart of the sea of the Antillet, and of the coast of Terra Firma, from die Island of Trinif dad to the Gulf of Honduras, was constructed in the hydrographical department, by prder of the Spanish Government, from scientific surveys. By this chart an important discovery was made. The bay of Maddinga, an immense inlet of the sea, commencing about ten leagues to the eastward of Porto Bello, penetrates into the isthmus to within 5 leagues of the Pacific ocean. This prodigious bason which is almost closed by a chain of islands, running close to one another at the mouth, has neverbeen navigated by any European except Spaniards: and was never supposed to run back, to any considerable extent, into the country, as all old charts in which it is marked abundantly testify. A river, from the name of which the Bay is denominated, falls into the bottom of the gulf. This river is navigable, and, we know, comes very near a branch of the Chepo, a large river which falls into the gulf of Pansme. We are not yet furnished with iny satisfactory details of the 'navigable state of these rivers: but from what Alcedo tells us—from the circumstance of their navigation being prohibited by the Spanish government under pain .of death on the exfress ground, that it might discover the acility of the passage of the South Seaand from the fact of the buccaniers having actually penetrated from sea to sea in this direction we , are entitled to con: clude, that extraordinary facilities for the great enterprize are, here presented. The jay has ten fathoms of water, at the en trance, which increases to eleven in the middle, and it has six fathoms to the very ottom."-The reviewers, after proceedng to adduce some statements of Herara, the famed historian of South America, drew the following conclusion:—By this indubitable authority then, it appears, that a canal of nine leagues, through a country mostly flat, is all that is wanting to complete the navigation across the ithmus of Panama.

To this extract, the Courant adds the following remark:—" In the event of a complete and permanent independance of South-America, an event highly probablethat on the next day at ten o'clock he should it is not unreasonable to expect, that within fifty years the North, and South Seas will be connected. And what a stupendous revolution it would produce in navigation and commerce! The distance to India and China would be shortened more than 10,000 miles."

Prince Radzivil, of Poland, who sometimes unites the elegance of southern taste with the barbarous pompt of Sarmatia, once entered Warsaw in his carriage, drawn by six white bears, taken in his own Lithuanian forests, and completely broken and richly barnessed for the purpose.—Lon. paper.

Potatoes.-The following singular statement s given as fact :- Early potatoes may be produced in great quantities by re-sitting the plants, after taking off the ripe and large ones. A gentleman at Dunfries has replanted them six different times this season, without any additional manure; and instead of falling off in quantity he gets a larger crop of ripe ones at every raising, than the former ones. His plants have still on them three distinct crops, and he supposes they may still continue to vegetate and germi-nate until they are stopped by the frost. By this means he has a new crop every eight days, and has had so for six weeks past.—Man. Chron.

[COMMUNICATION.] Mr. Schultz,

While walking through the streets of Bridge. ton, we are pleased by the public spirit display. ed by a number of the Citizens in placing lamps before their doors; and if we only walked the streets during the day or on moon light evenings, we should think ourselves under infinite obligation to those persons .- but, unfortunately being under the necessity of sometimes walking when the unmannerly clouds have got between us and the moon, or when that luminary has turned her back upon us, we have been compelled to conclude that the lamps are only intended to please the eye of the traveller who passes through the town while the sun gives light.

Several nights past it has been uncommonly dark, and the lamps have done little towards dispelling the gloom. I must however except that belonging to N. L. & D. P. Stratton, which was lighted up last evening, (but from its appears ance we should conclude that oil was very scarce,) and that of Mr. H. R. Merseilles which was graced by a tallow candle. As the Hotel is a very public place, and fashionable resort, we are not astonished at the brilliancy of the light emanating from the lamp before its door. We account for the conduct of the Directors of the Bank by supposing that they wish to keep that in darkness, to prevent thieves from finding it.

Quere-Would not gentlemen do well to place labels on their lamps signifying that they were designed for ornament in the day, not to give light at night?

SUMMARY.

Christ healing the Sick .- This splendid painting expressly designed by its celebrated author Mr. West, to aid the funds of the Pennsylvania Hospital, was exhibited on Monday last, in an appropriate building, prepared for the purpose. The moderate sum of 25 cents has been established as the price of admission for each person

From Amelia Island.—It is stated by a gentle man who left Amelia Island on the 20th ult that Governor Hubbard died of a fever on the Sunday previous, after a few days illness. It was doubtful who would succeed him, as the greatest confusion prevailed on the Island, in consequence of the recent disturbances between Aury and Irwin.

Spanish Expedition .- An article dated Madrid, August 31st says, that in the months of Oct. and Nov. two squadrons with a number of transports, having on board troops, munitions of war of every kind will sail from Cadiz, for South America.—The first expedition which will sail for Peru, will consist of 5000 men.

Important arrival.—The famous East India juggler, Samme, who astonished the English by his performances, arrived at New-York, on the 5th inst. from Liverpool.

The French General Rigard and family, arrived at New-York on the same evening in the Tybre, from Antwerp. It is stated by the passengers in this vessel, that an order had been published at Brussels by the king of Holland, announcing that in future no passports would be granted to Frenchmen to leave the country.

Rivalship.—Another Royal Yacht, (says a London paper of Sept. 15th) is now building at Portsmouth, to be called the Prince Regent, which is rival in splendor, the celebrated Barge of Cleopatra.

Honor to the Brave.—The Legislature of Conpecticut have resolved, That they entertain a high sense of the virtues, gallantry, and naval kill of their fellow-citizen Com. Isaac Hull, and that a Sword and a pair of Pistols, both mounted with Gold, be presented to him, &c.

Michigan University.—We learn from the District paper that the citizens of that city have set out with spirit to establish a University. A subscription was opened and upwards of 1000 dollars subscribed the first day. The buildings have already been commenced, and the first hall itexpected to be completed the present autumn.

Mediation.—A Paris paper of August 31st has the following:—"It is said that Russia has become a mediator between the United States and the Court of Naples. The happiest results are expected."

Among the passengers in the Annisquaix at New-York from Liverpool, is the Countess Poniatowski, whose husband was a distinguished offeer under Bonaparte.

Our Squadron in the Mediterranean.—" The Americans have a fleet in the Mediterranean. It was, when the last accounts came away, cruizing off Leghorn. The commander was on board the Washington, an 86 gun ship, with a crew of 780 men. We believe, says the Catholic official paper, it would be difficult for any vessel in the world to take her. This is the first vessel of her class the Americans have. [The Independence and Franklin are of the same size, &c.] She bears the name of one of the greatest men that the sun ever shone upon. He found his country a pitiful province of Britain, and left her—Oh, glerious destiny!—an independent nation!

[Dublin Chronicle...

The President's answer respecting the Battery.—We understand (says the New-York Evening Post) that a letter from the acting secretary af war, in reply to the letter of his honor the mayor, on the subject of the buildings erecting by Gen, Scott on the Battery, was read last evening at the meeting of the common council. By this it appears the President has directed that the erection of the buildings shall cease, and that the materials shall be removed from the ground.

Emigration.—On Friday evening the 3d of Oct. is boat arrived at this port (Maysville, Ohio,) with 80 passengers from Germany, men, women and children, on their way to the Wabash to join the family of the Harmonites, now at that place. They informed a countryman of theirs in this place, that one of their company (a female not married) is sister to M. Robb, who is the principal at the Wabash settlement, and who is at Philadelphia, waiting for the arrival of more—one thousand being expected; these stated that 600 crossed the ocean when they did. It excited much curiosity, as well as sympathy, to see these strangers in a land of freedom, and a land which heaven has so singularly blest.

Frog taken out of a Rock.—There is now in Mr. Peale's Museum, a frog preserved in spirits, which was taken alive out of a compact stone quarry, at the depth of ahout six feet below the surface of the earth, and it is impossible that the saimal could have ever escaped from the cavity in which it was enclosed—it was found by two quarry-men on the farm of Mr. Nathan Sellers, Upper Darby township, five miles from Philadelphia, on the 18th, and continued to live in the Museum until about two o'clock on Tuesday, the 21st ultimo.

Extraordinary Produce.—An Oat, in a garden in Portland, Massachusetts, produced this season 57 branches, which yielded 2950 kernels, measuring five gills. A Globe Squash was also raised this season in the same state, which weighed 147 lbs.

Distressing.—A young man, but lately arrived in this place from Ireland, had his arm dreadfully lacerated on Wednesday morning last, by venturing too near a cage in which a tiger is kept for a show. The ferocious animal seized him with his claws and drew him to the bars of the cage, and with his teeth, tore nearly all the flesh off his arm, from the, shoulder to the elbow. It was with considerable difficulty that the unfortunate young man was released from his horrible situation. The arm has been amputated, and very slight hopes are entertained of his recovery. Pitts. The last French papers are entirely filled with details of the progress of the election in the department of the Seine, which is decidedly in favor of what is termed the liberal party, or revolutionists. This is likely to be the case all over the kingdom: a circumstance of infinite importance to France in her present state of affairs. The Bourbonists, and ultra-royalists are terribly alarmed at this aspect of things.

The ship Dutchess of York had arrived in England from Buenos Ayres. Sailed July 6. Reports that it was believed an armistice had been agreed upon between the Patriotic and the Royal Armies, in Upper Peru—and the preliminaries of a union to shake off the yoke of the mother country. Privateering was so profitable, that more cruisers and larger ones were fitting out. The Consequencia, of 40 guns and 500 men, of all nations, sailed June 28; and the Tupal Amemo of 16 guns and 160 men, sailed July the 3d. A quarrel had occurred among the motley crew of the former, and one man was killed and 15 wounded. The ringleaders were sent on shore. The Dutchess of York carried home a large sum for merchants. The Portuguese troops remained at Montevideo, in statu quo.
