For the West Jersey Pioneer. TO THE ALBATROS. BY ESTELLA MAURICE.

Thou art sweeping on, thou noble bird, Far, far o'er the boundless sea; Where the wild winds roar, and the billows roll, Thy flight is fearless and free. Oh what hast thou seen, in thy wandering path O'er the restless moaning sea: Hast thou not, proud bird, a tale to unfold Of the ocean, wild and free? "I have seen a noble ship sweep on O'er tle sunny sparkling wave: Aud I've seen that ship, 'neath the storm wind' Wrath, Sink down to an ocean grave. I have heard the wild despairing cry Ring out, o'er the waters dark And curses, and agonizing prayers, Rise up from the foundering bark. "The tireless flight of my spreading wings Hath been where the green sea rolled In its crested pride, with a solemn dirge O'er the gorgeous cities of old. I have seen the floating sea-weed cling To palaces rich and rare And the bright waves revel, where once have Flowers beautiful and fair. "I have dipped my wing in the poarly form, Which gleams like snow to the light; I have soared towards the deep blue sky, Till my form was lost to sight. When the storm-king rides on the rushing blast, And his pall o'er the waters flings; Through the brooding gloom, and the tempest's wrath, I mount on exulting wings. "I fear not the power of the furious gale, Nor the lightning's blinding flash, And music I hear in the hurricane's shrick And the thunder's booming crash." Speed on! speed on! thou beautiful bird, In pride and majesty: In storm or calm, may'st thou ever reign, Queen of the mighty sea,

From the Family Circle. THE MOTHER'S INFLUENCE.

er comes over us with all its tender, thrilling sweetness; though years, perchance, may have passed since we last heard its loved church-yard contains her (to us) dear clay, and the rose-tree, which affection planted above the place of her long rest, blooms all unconsciously, sending forth a sweet perfume emblematical of the influence of the quiet slumberer. The breeze waves the tall grass budding and blossoming anew, and none may know the extent of that influence until the book of the recording angel shall be opened, and there all pure and true, stands the records of those warning words, those sighs and tears, and the prayers that in the stillness of her closet ascended for her loved

My mother! sacred name-how often has it cheered the lone wanderer in foreign lands, the exile and homeless, wherever they may be—on the ocean's rolling billow, or on the missionary fields, teaching the Word of Life to the heathen, and instructing them to look forward to an immortality beyond the grave. Yes, even the strong man, armed with the assurances of the gospel, recalls to mind, with consoling tenderness, the words of a mother, in that distant home beyond the wave, where he first felt that to live for others was a holy mission. At such times that mother's counsels strengthen him, and he feels and owns her happy influence. And may we not cherish the fond belief, that a mother's influence may penetrate the dark cells of the dungeon, and that even beneath the hardened visage and rough exterior of the man of crimes, warmly beats a heart, at times, not only with conviction, but with awakened feelings of truth and virtue, as his imagination wanders back to the scenes of his early childhood, and fancy, still true, pictures that home in all its summer beauty; the cottage on the green lawn, the woodbine that so lovingly twined about the door, the happy song of birds, the soft and lulling murmur of the rivulet—all with vivid distinctness come up before his mind's eye; those hours of innocent childhood when a fond mother taught his infantile lips to whisper "My father," and with her soft hand gently laid upon that fair young brow, knelt by his side, and offered up an carnest prayer to Him who heard the prayer of faith, for her loved son, her darling boy. Oh, how the strong man trembles as these reflections pass through his mind, and the man of many ears, whose hand has committed crimes of the darkest dye, weeps! yes, tears course down those sun-browned and scarred cheeks; and not saved her son?

What an inceptive to action has the mothr-she who has immortal minds committed to her charge! It is a holy trust and a pleasing task to train the plant and watch the tender bud unfolded its petals, and to see it expanded in goodness and virtue. And how clevated must be the happiness of the mother. when, with the angels around the throne of and a good physician will restore to health Him who said. " Let little children come unto me," she receives a crown of glory, and there nicets the happy spirits of those she loved on earth and they shall point and say, Behold my mother; she led me to the fountain of holiness and blessed be her name.

THE GOVERNMENT OF LOVE.

We particularly recommend the subjoined extract to all who have at heart the good of their children, and who wish to make their homes happy. We do not know the author, but, whoever he may be, he has not only observed closely, but looked far below the surface of human nature. Self-government is the first pre-requisite in family government. If we do not govern ourselves, the task of governing our children is a hopeless one. But, nothing that we might say, can possibly reach the very heart of this matter like the following:--"We have not half confidence enough in the power of love to disarm the violent and reclaim the vicious. The fault begins in our families. We do not seek enough to bear with each othes's faults. We do not love them enough to make sacrifices in little things. We do not teach them in disinterestedness by our willingness to give up our taste for them. We indulge our sloth, and the quickest way of correcting a misconduct which shocks our nerves, or disturbs or interrupts our occupation, is resorted to. "Oh, how quickly parents lose the confidence of their children, never to be regained, who look at things more as they are, it is a by injustice, selfishness, and absence of love! part of a great plan—a link in the chain of link in the love of its parents; if the son and daughter only love, to disease in plants my be found in a crowded and now be has made up his mind to take her and love tenderly, truly enough, how much less probable it is that they should wander far, or, erring, should not be speedily reclaimed. The Farmer's Magazine for October contains an article on this subject, from which we condense the following:—

A correspondent of the Pennsylvania Farm Journal says, that the same stalk of corn will produce cars, some of eight and some of twelve rows; and that in planting from eightrowed ears, no certainty of obtaining the same number of rows to the ear exists. From Godey's Lady's Book. Dream of St. Valentine's Eve.

BY. HICKORY BROOM. To Fanny Young, the science of courting was a great mystery, the leaves of Love's dear delicious book never having been opened to her at that peculiarly pleasing page. The various phases of an introduction, of bowing in the street, looking remarkably amiable at the ringing of the bell, of accepting invitations to the opera or a concert, and of leaning lovingly upon the sleeve of a dress-coat, and listening to the "soft nonsense" coming from the interior of it, were vet to be developed to her anxious semi-juvenile faculties. She had been, at the time of her mother's death, left to the care of a maiden aunt, who had never entertained any very flattering notions of the male gendor, believing them to be objects of great dread, and totally unfit for the company of the more gentle sex. There was one young man, many years before, who was an exception to the general rule of men; but he; poor fellow! never was aware of the great qualities above his sex which he possessed in her eyes, and died before leap-year came around that she might inform him of it. Since then, mained an unmarried woman. To her care, Fanny had been left, and had imbed, to a small extent, the same peculiar anti-masculine that attended to the business of the aunt; he being a married man, there was no danger to be apprehended from his coming.

On the afternoon preceding St. Valenine's day, Fanny and her aunt were scated at their work, when Fanny remarked that Rose Rogers was going to be married."

"Rose Rogers!" exclaimed the aunt.
"And pray what is that chit going to be married for? "For a husband and a home. I exceet."

"Whom is she going to marry?"

"If this marrying is the awful picture you make of it, I surely ought."

The conversation was kept up a short time onger; the aunt having, by the force of circumstances, become an unmarried woman, endeavored to convince her nicce of the blessings to be enjoyed in a state of single-bless-edness, when Fanny bade her aunt 'good-night,," and, taking her lamp, retired to her room. The remarks of the aunt kept the mind of Fanny employed in thinking about the mysteries of marrying until she fell asleep.

" If Mr. Smooth, the collector, should come here while I am out, Fanny, tell him I will be in at half-past three this afternoon." With this injunction to Fanny, her aunt left home for the purpose of selecting a new pattern for a dress, with which she intended to surprise her niece when she returned, and which was one reason why she did not take eight years' cultivation on the farm, it has her out with her on that morning. I'm afraid, if I live with her all the time, I shall be an 'old maid;' and, from what people say of them, I should'nt like to be one of that class, though aunty is as good and clever a body as I know of, and she's one of that much maligned set. Now, I would like to have a beau, just to take me about to different places, and to gallant me up Eighth Street of an evening, when I could stop and prettily lit up with gas—and then I would'nt stars, and has never since then returned to ook in the windows-for they seem to be so have to hurry along so without stopping to look at them. And, besides that, I think there's some life in having a young man step in occasionally and tell you all that's been going on in the city through the day, and gosiping about your acquaintances. Jane Ray eys she has lots of fun when her beau comes there; he's such a lively young man, and is all the time playing tricks and plaguing her sister Annie about that dandified young man who's 'got a cold on his chest,' and is afraid it will settle in 'his hat-bwox.' And then Mary Jones's beau takes her to the concerts at the Musical Fund, and to the opera when it's here, and to panoramas and other places; and she says she ain't going to marry him, because she does not like him well enough; but he don't know that, because he never asked her to have him, and, when he does, she'll 'give him the sack,' and get some other beau, who will take her about. I wish some young man would come here some time and take me walking out: I'd like to know how it feels to be leaning on a young man's arm, and eating ice-cream with him at Parkinson's."

Fanny's thoughts were here interrupted by a ring at the bell, which she answered, and notions. The only male that ever visited found a very nice-looking young man at the the house was the middle aged gentleman door, who asked if her aunt was in. On being answered in the negative, he replied that he was verry sorry for that, for he had a message for her from his father, her collector, who was out of town, and he was himself going away from the city in an hour. He hasitated a few seconds on the step, and then asked Fanny if he could have a sheet of paper and a pen to write a note to her aunt. Fanny, having seen the father often at the house, and eu at 15 some moments as 17 16 nau ennancea guns over the grave of Webster, and with the in value from the fact of having been used by joyous peal of bells for victory was blended its poisonous influence into every part of the claimed. This is a rather delicate subject, we know; but then, we dare say, a subject bearing this head will be read by the ladies as quick as anything on which their eyes can rest. And it is for their benefit that we are now writing. There is something in the idea of courting which causes an indescribable thrill. We have just read the following account of how the ladies do up these things in Rome, and which may offer them some useful hints. A Roman lady who takes a liking to a forfriend of the young man, 'tell that young man I like him.' If the man of her choice fond of me?' she replies with the utmost

in the Trenton State Gazette, of Jan. 24: As soon as the project of a straight railroad from New York to Norfolk was found to be question of course immediately arose, whether dollars. this project would conflict with the exclusive privileges of the Camden and Amboy Railroad company, and whether that company would oppose the charter of the proposed road. Regarding, as we do, the successful execution of this project, as of immense importance to the western and southern parts of New Jersey, we sincerely hope that it will not be defeated on

The Camden and Amboy Co. have, by their grants, the sole and exclusive right to carry passengers and freight between New York and Philadelphia. The projected road does not propose to carry passengers to or from Philadelphia at all. If, therefore, the Camden and Amboy Co. are satisfied with the enjoyment of their exclusive privilege, without stretching it so as to include more than it means or was ever intended to mean; and if the proposed company intend to confine themsolves to the professed object of their read, then the spheres of the two companies are entirely separate and distinct, and will not interfere with each other. We hope that this is so-that these companies will cultivate and establish a fair and liberal understanding with each other; refrain from interfering with each other; keep themselves within their reepective spheres, and instead of opposing each other's interests, rather seek to promote them. We trust that the Camden and Amboy Company will make no opposition to this project, whether open or secret; and if they do not, it will pass, for there can be no other the will not be right nor expedient for the Camden and Amboy Company to oppose it. They cannot oppose it, unless they assume of the now dormant energies of West Jersey. We trust they will not assume such a position-so utterly inconsistent with all the claims and obligations of patriotism, and so incompatible with all the feelings and motives which should animate true hearted Jer-02 seymen, proud of their state, and devoted to

Neither do we believe it will be expedient for this company to oppose this progect. Certainly it will not be expedient for them to array themselves for slight reasons, in hostility to all the interests of West Jersey -Nor should they assume that they would suffer any injury from the construction of the projected road. In its whole length, it might bring to them quite as much business as it would divert from them. It would by reason of its extension to Norfolk, compete very successfully with the New York and Southern steamers, and thus bring over land much business that would otherwise be done, by sea. Of this the Camden and Amboy road would get its full share, for a considerable portion of it would prefer to pass through Philadelphia, on its way to or from New York. The filling up of the whole of West Jersey, with a numerous and active population, would bring much additional business to the Camden and Amboy road. These two sources of revenue would become more and more productive every year; and the Camdon and Amboy road would every year derive from them, additional profits. Spur-roads of short length might be thrown out from the

Our insane asylums are taking in new cases every week from the class of people who have been operated upon by these circles of modern whiches and wizards, and only last Friday a very worthy man of this city was led to commit suicide through these pestiferous influences. We ask attention to the facts and the verdict of the jury.

It appears that on Friday afternoon and evening, Coroner Hilton was engaged holding an inquest at the Bellevue Hospital upon the body of Matthew Langdon, late a resident of this city, whose death was occasioned by a wound on the throat, inflicted by himself, together with exhaustion arising from mental excitement produced by a constant attendance for the past ten months, upon persons claiming to have communication with spirits, and from reading publications professing to be revelations from the spirits of the departed. The wife of Langdon testified that lier husband had for the last ten months been in the habit of reading what he called "Spiritual Papers, to wit: the Spiritual Telegraph, published in this city, also the Mountain Cove Journal-I don't know where this lat'er paper is published; his mind seemed absorbed in these papers; he has been attending the spiritual circles for ten months and for three weeks twice a week." It further appeared that he had been led by extreme grief for the death of a beloved daughter to take counsel of the spirit-mongers, who took advantage of his sorrow and weakness to play off their profaue mummeries upon the poor man till his reason fled. The case was given to the jury, who ren-lered the following verdict: "That Matthew Langdon came to his death by exhaustion consequent upon mental exitement and from a wound inflicted by him self upon his throat. Wanted 1000 Bushels Clover Seed To get out with Hibb's Patent Clover Huller and Cleaner.

THE Subscribers having purchased Hibb's Pattent Clover Huller and Cleaner, are now pre pared to get out Clover Seed any where in the County of Cumberland. The Machine is superior to any ever introduced into this County. It does not break or injure the seed, taking it out and cleaning it by one operation, and owing to the peculiar combination and arrangement of part the Huller is not liable to be injured by stones nails, etc., which prove so fatal to other Machines The Dust so annoying to those operating with other Machines, is carried off in one direction by the wind from the fan, causing but little more in convenience than cleaning common grain. From the repeated and thorough trials to which this Machine has been subjected, and the satisfaction given where it has been used, the subscribers feel warranted in thus calling the attention of Clover Raisers to their Machine, fully convinced, that when seen in operation, they will be satisfied of its superiority over all other Hullers.

The Machine will be in readiness at any time after the 28th inst., and the subscribers hope to give entire satisfaction to all who favor them

Important Information for Rheumatics. Haddonfield, March 26th, 1852. Dr. Steelling-Dear Sir-Some time since I was attacked with a severe Inflammatory Rheumatism, was entirely bedridden, and could get no relief, until I made trial of your Rheumatic Liniment, which entirely cured me, after I used two bottles of it. I would observe that before using your Liniment, I had a physician, but derived no benefit from his medicines. I have also been cured of fit from his medicines. I have also been cured of a severe attack of Lumbago by the same Liniment. My wife had a severe attack of Rheumatism which entirely deprived her of the use of one of her hip joints; she used two bottles of your Liniment and was entirely cured.

I could also relate several other cases of Rheumatism, where I have recommended it, which were also cured by Steelling's Liniment. Yours truly, JOHN S. CATHCART.

and all Diseases of the Lungs, Throat, and Breast. Large bottles 371 cts. Small bottles 25 cts. Philadelphia, Nov. 2, 1851. DR .STEELING-Dear Sir:-In compliance with your request, that I should express my opinion of of your Pulmonary Syrup, I am happy to say that having very frequently used it in my family for various pulmonary complaints, for several years past, and particularly for croup amongst our children, to which they have been more or less subject, we have always found the most beneficial results from its use. Upon the appearance of this discaes we apply at once to your Pulmonary Syrup; and when the symptoms are severe, we double, and sometimes treble the dose recommended in your Gold and Silver Pencils and Pen Holders, of every printed directions, which speedily produces sickness and vomiting, after which the system becomes relaxed, perspiration ensues, the alarming symptoms are removed, and, through the blessing of Providence upon the means used, the sufferer is soon restored to health. Knowing you to be an old and experienced physician, your Pulmonary Syrup is, doubtless, the result of much labor and sperience; and as it has been a kind friend in my family, I do most cordially recommend it to the notice of all, but most particularly to mothers, who might save their children many a severe pang, by always keeping a supply of your Syrup on hand, and giving it immediately upon the first appearance. Falling of the womb, obstructed, suppressed, or ance of any of those diseases for which it is recommended.
