For the West Jersey Pioneer. The Dying Girl to her Mother. BY ESTELLA MAURICE.

Mother, dear mother, come near me now, Lay thy cool hand on my throbbing brow, And sing me the song of my childhood again,

Lull me to rest with that gentle strain. You have sung it oft, at the close of day, As I knelt at that solemn hour to pray: There's a soothing power in that well known strain Then sing me that old home song again. O! I dearly love that low, simple air,

It recalls my childhood, when all was fair, Ere I tasted life's anguish, its woes and fears, Or my eyes were dimmed by griet's bitter tears. Let me lay my head on thy faithful breast. I am passing away to a dreamless rest, And I fain would sink to slumber once more, As I did in the happy days of yore.

Dear mother, I'm going home at last; The pain and the terror of death are past; I have wrestled long, but each earthly tie Is broken now-I can calmly die.

YouMbury me where the whispering breeze Steals mournfully through the tall green trees, Where the willows sweep in the murmuring stream As it ripples along in the sun's bright gleam. You'll lay me my mother, where flowers bloom, Where pale roses scatter their rich perfume,

Let the violet meek, and the lilly fair, And the pure white snowdrop blossom there And you'll come dear mother, when twilight's veil Is stealing softly o'er hill and vale, When the evening sky is bright and fair,

You will come to my grave and kneel in prayer. Alas! I am giving thy fond heart pain, But restrain thy tears, they are all in vain;

Rather rejoice that so young I go. To share the delights which mortals ne'er know. I am leaving a world of grief and care. I am going to one where all is fair;

Where our God, the Saviour of sinners dwells. And the chorus of angels forever swells. Dear mother, I'm passing fast away, Sing me once more that holy lay, As I walk through the deep and solemn gloom Which veils the path to the voiceless tomb.

O mother, the angels are hovering near, Their songs of celestial joy I hear; The gatherin gloom with splender is bright, I am going home to the land of light! Shiloh, April, 1853.

MORAL.

From Arthurs Home Gazette. THE PIONEER.

BY MRS. SOPHRONIA GURRIER.

It was on a Sabbath morning in early summer, many years ago, a bright Sabbath morning, and Nature had donned her fairest garments, as if in honour of the day, and her many voices seemed tuned anew to the praise of the great Creator.

The sky had assumed its dress of deepest blue, gemmed here and there with a pearly cloud; the earth, yet unscorched by the hot summer sun, seemed, as the light capricious breeze swept over the tall grass of the prairie which stretched far away beyond the horizon, like a rippling emerald sea, interspersed with islets of beauty and sweetness; and nearer, the ancient forest lifted its tall head, with the song of the wild bird welling out from among the closely woven branches, and blonding with that song its low, soft whisperings. A little stream was gutly purling along its reedy banks, insects of various kind were filling the air with their incessant hum, and the myriad prairie fowls kept up a continual whirring.

All in nature was beauty and gladness and song on that bright Sabbath morning-and man in that little settlement in the far West, had not quite forgotten this was the day of rest, though few preparations appeared to have been made for the worship of the Eternal.

To the eye of the child, who had been accustomed to the handsome church of a flourishing village, with its pillared walls, its carpoted floors and richly cushioned pews, the rosewood pulpit and its covering of crimson velvet, the crowd of well-dressed people, the sweet music of the deeptoned organ, and the trained voices of the choir - how strange seemed the place of worship to which she was

It was a log school kouse, yet unfinished, for the only flooring was the green earth, and the roof was but half laid, the windows if it was designed they ever should be glazed, were yet but apertures in the walls shere was nothing which served for a door to the building, and the seats were rudely split-logs lying across the whole width of the room.

The silence had not been, however, of many micutes' duratien, when that young lady raised the face which was not turned before to the assembly, and glanced about her. That face once looked upon, could not easily be forgotten; but it was not its touching, exquisite beauty which most interested the boholder; not the lustre of those deep blue, gentle eyes, not the chiselling of that full, broad brow, the dimpled rosy cheek and that beautiful mouth. nor the soft brown bair which fell in wavy ouls low over the shoulders—not all of these which made that fair being remembered; but

PROFANITY.

It is unfortunately, too true, that profanity continues to be practised, even by those young men who would claim a standing in respectable society. There is something exceeding ly vulgar and ungentlemanly in it, which hould be sufficient condemnation of the practice. That it is thought so is evident from the fact that no gentleman, even swears in the company of respectable females, and if such a restraint can be submitted to so easily, we know of no reason why the practice cannot be restrained altogether. There are associations of all kinds in which men submit o self-discipline and self-denial. Only at once determine to abstain from vice, and it is easy to do so. There can be no good exouse offered for profane swearing, except that of inability to refrain from it. It is now more than forty years ago that Mr. L-called at the house of Dr. B.one very cold morning, on his way to H—.

"Sir," said the Doctor, "the weather is very frosty, will you not take 'something to drink," before you start?"

In that early day, ardent spirits were deemed indispensable to warmth in winter. When commencing a journey, and at every stopping place along the road, the traveller always used intoxicating drinks to keep him warm.

"No," said Mr. L., "I never touch anything of that kind, and I will cell you the reason, my wife is the cause of it. A CASE OF DELIRIUM TREMENS. - A good story is told about a chap that was made to believe he had the delirium tremens. He had periodical drinking frolics, when he made himself beastly drunk, and remained so for weeks together, when he would come out sober, and keep as straight as a string for a long time. His friends determined to break this up if possible. They told him he was in imminent danger of delirium tremens. He did not believe them but, he promised to reform.

One night they found him in bed very drunk. They caught a huge rat, and fastening themselves up with it in his room, let it run as soon as he began to get sober onough to know what he was about. They then roused him, and persuaded him to get up and dress. Scarcely had he commenced before his ratship scampered over the floor. He hated rats intensely. Sober in a moment, and intent only upon killing the oreature, he was in hot pursuit with a boot jack, breathing out threatenings and slaughter. While this chase was at its height, his friends used every argument to persuade him that the rat was a mere phantom of the brain - illusion of the inevitable spirit of wine—in short, one of the terrible hallucinations of delirium tremens. But he paid little heed to all this, until aud-denly he missed the rat, one of his friends having dexterously let it casespe from the

THE PHILOSOPHY OF FUN.

There is more health in fun than all the other "mendicamentums" ever invented. A community that seldom indulges in holidays and laughter soon become emaciated, estines, and yet there is nothing that the Americans so seldom indulge in. This accounts for our sallow checks, love of suicide and lantern jawed babics. Instead of recreation, we hardly afford ourselves opportunity for cating and sleeping. "The almighty dollar" so haunts us, that we almost begrudge ourselves a decent sized snooze, for fear we may loose one and ninepence worth of time by the operation. The consequence is, that by the time we are forty, we are "done and busted" in looks, health and temperament. Our stomachs, from inattention, strike for higher wages, and refuse to work on any-thing harder than bran bread and navy crack-

THE ATELIER RATIROAD.

It is to us extremely gratifying to perceive the press of New Jersey so so universally, ad rocating the claims of the "Air Line Road" o popular favor.

By having the subject canvassed, and ex mined by the people of the State, so as to be fully understood, we feel a full confidence. that the representatives elected to the next egislature, will have a more liberal regard for the wants of Southern Jersey, than their prodecessors of the last session.

We propose to examine occasionally, some of the more prominent objections urged against its construction.

The friends of the Camden and Amboy road among other arguments, claim for themselves under their charter the exclusive right to carry passengers across the State of New Jersey, to and from Philadelphia and New York. And it was warmly contended that to charter another road across the State would conflict with the rights guarantied to them.

Our citizens are proverbially law-loving and law abiding, and we should certainly deprecate advocating opposition to constitutional law. At the same time, we hold it to be both proper and right, to examine the character of the laws enacted by our legislative bodies, and if found inconsistent with the rights of the people to ask for their modification or repeal, or at least that they should be kept within the bounds prescribed by the constitution.

Now if the charter of the monopoly as c'aimed by them grants a right so exclusive, that no future legislature can authorize the construction of another road across, whenever demanded by the public interests it is clearly unconstitutional, and therefore not binding upon the citizens of the State. We hold it to be an established truth in the theory of government, that our different legislatures are equal in authority, and that no one can exercise a power devied to the others, and consequently one session cannot limit or prohibit the acts of another. If the Legislature of '31 or 82 possessed the right to charter a road across New Jersey, the Legislature of '53 possesed the same authority, and to neither body was authorized the right to prohilit other legislatures from chartering whatever roads were needed! We accord to each body the right to grant or refuse a charter at their option, but beyond this their authority in the matter cannot extend. If therefore the "Air Line Road" had been asked for from New York to Philadelphia, there could have existed no legal impediment to its baving been granted. But it was not so demanded but to a place totally different and at the lower terminus fifty miles distant from it. So that all the arguments based upon the supposition of a violation of the faith of the State, when urged in opposition to the Air Line Road are utterly ground-

An agent has no right to exceed the powers granted in his commission; and whatever acts go beyond this are not, neither ought they to be, binding on the principal.

To assume the contrary would be to sap the moral basis of society, and incite to the commission of crime.

So far then as the refusal to recognize the faith of the State as pledged to the support of such pretensions of the monopoly, being morally or politically wrong, it becomes a duty which we owe to ourselves and our posterity promptly to disavow such a construction.

We are glad see that the old shed nearly opposite Firemens Hall, and so long the re sort of street loungers, has been torn down and succeeded by the neatly furnished Millinery establishment of Mrs. C. H. Dare.

The Stockholders and contributors of the Bridgeton Library Company are requested to meet at Dr. Wm. S. Bowen's office, on Friday evening the 22d inst at 8 o'clock.

If those having families of children would pay more attention to something of the kind. and thus furnish attraction at their own firesides, where amusement and instruction might be blended, we should be spared the contemplation of much of the profanity and vulgarity which nightly disgrace our street

The town of Greenwich though numerically about one fourth of our own population, has a valuable Library, of nearly a thousand volumes, whilst our own citizens are hardly conscious of the existence of such an institution proper persons may find the means of a free among them.

We hope the matter will hereafter claim the attention it so urgently demands.

Since the conviction of Spring, for the Southwark tragedy, attention has been directed to the murder of Rink, last winter, and to that of a farmer by the name of Hope, near Philadelphia. Some small circumstances point to him as the probable author of both these outrages.

We learn that the Abassom Bailroad Co. are prosecuting their work with great vigor. They have purchased the Cooper Ferrying Establishment at the Point, for $40,000, and New Entrapers.—The building at the sorrer of Commerce and Cohensey streets, an ample door and appliances there for the secommodation of the boats. They are sanlong and tavorably known as a Millinery es-tablishment, han been elegantly fitted up by Franklin Dare, for a Drug and Confectionary an hour and a half.

PRINCIPON FEMALE INSTITUTE. The eventful as well as often distressful days of examination have passed and no doubt wound is in her right side, and is four and a all who were students and engaged in those balf inches in depth, Miss Weaver is only peculiar criticisms usual on such occasions drinking; and Miss Weaver dropped a six and feel themselves relieved of a heavy weight of feel themselves relieved of a heavy weight of a quarter cont poles, which was picked up by anxiety as well as responsibility. The desire Mrs. O'Conner. The former demanded her for success pervades every human breast and property, and the latter refused to surrender is generally observable in the countenance as well as actions of such as possess this desire. Thoughts of those scenes through which all must press give rise to flickerings of imagina- dirk knife. When taken to the Mayor's oftion and tend often to disturb the quietude of both mind and body, but when once the dreaded time has flittled by, all again is sunshine, and the shades of gloomy forebodings have been swallowed up, and succeeded by thoughts of success and consequent happiness. Thus it is in all the varied scenes of life, "change, change is stamped upon all terrestial things " Doubtless some who are natrons of the Institute are also weekly readers of the 'independent Pioneer' and would be pleased to have a plain truthful statement of the success of those who have been instructed therein. We understand that nearly all who were examined and sustained themselves so very creditably, are those whose advantages for acquiring an education were exceedingly the brakes, which was promptly done. As limited until their recent entrance to the Pennington Female Institute.

Praise is rightly bestowed wherever it is deserved and we do cheerfully say that we male companion sprung from the car, as did have never wituessed an examination of students that afforded us so much real satisfiction as the one we refer to. Every exercise was conducted so admirably that it is spoken of as exhibiting the superior qualifications of those who gave and those who received instruction. We were particularly pleased with the proficiency made in every branch of study pursued and are satisfied that both the time and money have been profitable investments to every young Lady in the Institute. Classes were examined in Common and Higher Arithmetic, Algebra, and Geogaphy with exercises upon outline Maps,) Eng. Grammar, (Etymological and Syntactical) Astronomy, Philosophy, French, German &c., &c. Accompanying these exercises was that of excellent performances upon the Piano Forte which all know gives to any exercise an increased degree of liveliness. We notieed that all the questions were promptly answered and in such a tone of voice that all could hear distinctly, which is not the case always with young Ladies. There was not we believe one failure during the entire examination which we regard as remarkable after having been informed that the pupils had been instructed that they must sustain themselves or fail upon an impartial, fair and honest examination, rather than that No 1 should have No 1 questions. No 2, No 2 questions, solutions &c , &c., as has been the case in some institutions of learning. We never saw a room more beautifully decorated with Oil and other paintings &c.. than was the room in which the examinations took place. The paintings exceeded any thing Mr. Samuel B. Derrickson and a number of the Daguerrean Art is yet in its infancy, my efforts

They attracted the attention and elicited the praise and admiration of all, and exhibited the artistic skill of those whose productions they were.

From what we have seen and know we have no hesitation in recommending the Pennington Female Institute as worthy the patronage of all who have daughters to educate. We understand it to be the intention of those interested in its affairs to make it increasingly worthy the patronage of all

The Great Chestnut Tree .- On one side of Mount Etna there is a famous chestnut tree, which is said to be one hundred and ninety six feet in circumference, just above the surface of the ground. Its enormous trank is separated into five divisions, which gives it the appearance of several trees growing together. In a circular space formed by these huge branches a hut has been erected plied with Libraries, made accessible to all for the accommodation of those who collect of their citizens. As a consequence, most of | the chestnuts.

Wrought Iron Car Wheels .- In order to remove the danger of the breakage of car wheels, and the disasters incident on such breakage, several of the railroad companies of the East are now trying the experiment of using wrought iron wheels. The problem to wrought or cast iron wheels are the best; whether the wear of the one kind exceeds o not the expense of renewing the cracked and broken of the other. If the wrought iron wheels are brought into use the change will, it is said, have a serious influence in the iron business in our country, as the English wrought wheels can be procured at a third less expense than the American.

The steamer Prometheus, of the Nicaragua route, that put into Charleston last week, short of coal, also arrived at New York on Suuday, with corresponding accounts from San Francisco, and later news from San Juan.

A portion of the most important news items by these packets had been previously telegraphed from New Orleans and Charleston, and has already appeared in our paper. The Golden Gate brought to the Isthmus
