The violet tint is bright, que more, . The grass is green again, The Thrush is warbling in my car, A Spring day's richest strain; The Winter's ruju swept away The earth is born anew, And vernal charms we loved before. Those charms again we view But ah! the heart where winter reigns, Where chilling frosts have fell, No butsting Spring may sunshine bring Its sadness to dispel; No vernal charms are spreading there, No violet blooms again, And never in that blasted home The Thrush will swell his strain.

> Bridgeton, May 29, 1853. From the New-York Organ, TAKE ME HOME.

Oh! take me home to die! For I cannot breath your air; I dream for ave of our wildwood cot. And the green trees waving there. On my father's brow a shade, d my mother's dark eyes

When a tone is gone from the household band, Chaunting the Vesper hymn. Oh! bear me home to die! I would sleep beneath the shade Of the rustling leaves that seem'd like friends.

When I beneath them played. Oh! bear me to them now, Let me hear the West wind moan, Through the leafy aisles of the forest green,

With sad prophetic tone. I would hear the waters fall, From our own moss-covered rock; Your streams flow clear o'er their pebbly beds But they my sad heart mock. Oh! bear me home to die, For I would meet again, The cheering light of eyes I love. Let not my prayers be vain!

For my weary heart strings break, And the sands of life run low; Oh! let me look upon the trees. Once more, before I go!

HEART-TRIFLERS. There are few judividuals in the world. or at least few in civilized society, who have not two phases of existence, so to speak - one an inner and the other an outer-one connected with the commerce, the pusiness and the ain-bition of the world—the other with its social life, its domestis relations, its passions, its emotions, and gentle susceptibilities. Many persons who, in the eyes of the thoughtless mulritude at large, are among the most fortunate and most envied of mankind, are nevertheless entitled to pity and sympathy rather than to envy because they are unfortunate in the affairs of the heart, or in other words, are unhappy at home. Who can conceive of a more writched state of existence than that of the deceived and betrayed of cither sex, who have ing lavished all their affections upon some particular phject, and united their destinies with that object, under a belief of sympathy, reciprocity and unatual regard, find too late that they have been whorshipping a false idol, that some mercenary or other selfish motive was the real inducement, and that sadness noglect and disappointment must be their lo for the rest of their days. We can imagine thing else which would be interesting or pronothing more criminal than perfidy, falsehood fitable to their brother farmers. I suppose and treachery under these circumstances;— Life is thus robbed of its most exquisite hopes, Life is thus robbed of its most exquisite hopes, the disposition is embittered, the mind turns upon itself in the very agony of despair, and disease and premature death are often the consequences. What earthly honor, what successful fortunes can How guilty is the mocker of the heart under those who these circumstances! With what agony must the discovery be at first realized by the deceived? But there is another species of triflers, male as well as feinale, who are often the causes of infinite anxiety. We allude to the heart-less, the conceited and the cold, who, with no fe ling of susceptibility themselves, delight in sporting with the affectious and wrecking the happiness of others. How much misery has been caused by these triflers! We could point out more than one touching case. Nay, we believe that many a heart has been broken, many a gentle spirit has been crushed, many a life has been embittered by this cruel policy. The cold and the worldly may laugh at all such doctrines, while the selfish and the those who have studied the inner man as well as the outer, who have penetrated the barrier of worldliness which conceals the workings of grass." the human breast, who have in some thoughtful hour won the confidence, and thus revived the recollections of the susceptible and the deceived, will be able to tell another story .-There is no lot more bitter than that of broken hopes, misplaced affections, or violated sensibilities. TENDENCIES TO GOOD AND TO EVIL. Much, or most, of the good which we enjoy comes to us through our own exertions. Our whole constitution is framed on this idea of our own working to secure needed and de sired good. The Supreme Disposer has dealt with us in the inner world of our souls, as in the outer world of nature. He has not made creation a garden of ever-produced and undecaying fruitage, but rough with weeds and woods. Hela: written the hard soil and the rude forest all over with the same sentence that is recorded in the Bible," In the sweat of thy face shalt thou cat bread." So a like decree, stamped in the constitution of the soul commands us to carn spiritual good by our own labor. We are made not good' but to become good. Various tendencies to good and e il struggle together in the human breast. -There is a wilderness to be subdued and made fruit'ul, tempests of passisn to be calmed, luxurience of worldliness and sensuality to be lopped off. There must be tendencies to evil. else there would be no virtue, no merit in being good. .. Thus only could our spiritual powbe brought forth, and our highest glory consummated. He only is great and good who has overcome evils and foes. Is not man a nobler being for having had the material world to subdue and cultivate? And may he not be a nobler being also for the inward roughness of his own nature, for the very wildness of his passions, for the very hardness of that soil where his sirtues are sown? It is generally known there is a large tract of land known by the name of the Bear swamp, occupying a central position in the Township, comprising hundreds of acres, furnished with a thier and sich bottom, strong enough to fertilize the poorest soils when mingled with it, and render them productive as has been proved by experiments. Much of this bottom is covered with large timber with various kinds of undergrowth with streams of water running through it, venting themselves by outlets into Delaware bay. o

There exists a popular error, we believe, that to stir the earth during a drought tends to increase its ill effects, but such is not the fact, as we know from actual experiment.

In a severe drought which we experienced several years ago, we defermed to test the theory; and selecting a field of corn which had at the time commenced to suffer, after it had had the usual dressing; we caused a lighplow, succeeded a day or two after by a coru harrow, to be passed through several rows; and the result was that the plants in these rows become at once thrifty, and pushed far ahead of the rest of the field; the leaves assumed a lively green, whilst on both sides the plants ooked sickly and curled; we noticed too that every morning, at sunrise, the centre or heart of each plant, contained a drop of dew. -Should the occasion present itself, we would advise a similar experient by all who wish

Grave Yards and Cities.

There is something hallowing in the con foniplation of a grave yard. It points continually to the doors of the human family. It links the past with the present and calls up a thousand fond recollections of the loved and unforgotten, who now calmly repose in their last earthly home. A stroll among its silent but eloquent memorials, softens the obdurate, humbles the proud, moderates the desires of the ambitious, tames the reckless, subduces the wicked, arrests the gay, and shows to the thoughtless and giddy the vanity of carthly pursuits. Its lessons appeal to the heart, with a force too powerful to resist, too cogent

Who, would break these holy influences, or seek to sever this tie, which binds us to. the dead. Monuments of art-splendid exhibitions of genius, that have challenged the admiration of mankind, have been thrown down and puthlessly destroyed by the hand of savage barbarism, with the most absolute indifference. But the tombs of the departed, among allages and with all nations, have been allowed to repose in quiet, except when the curiosity of the antiquarian, or the ferocity of the savage, wrought to an uncontrollable height of fury, have violated its sanctified solitude. It has been reserved to the intelligence, and civilization, of the progressive American of the nineteenth century, to exhume the ashes of friends, and tear from their resting places, the bones of departed relatives. Even when the overcrowded population of cities, is calling for room, for the operations of its restless and active spirits, it is very questionable whether the substitution, of crowded walls of brick and mortar, for the quiet green of the church yard can add any thing to the city's health. If the ground is but once occupied by the dead we imagine that no necessity, or precaution for health can demand their being occupied in any other way. Let them stand, with their mellowing recollections of the past, as breathing places, for the present and future generations of the city. The too common fault of our cities, is the tendency to crowd the population so closely together, as to be inimical to health, and thus furnish tenants for the grave yard.

Besides, it might be advantageous for business men, sometimes to have the grave vard before them, while studying upon the chances of business. These remarks have been called forth by the request of a friend, to publish the following extract from the State Gazette:-

"The New Brunswick News says that the Consistory of the First Dutch Church in that city has recently leased to Common Council a portion of its grave-yard, for the purpose of creeting thereon two fire-engine houses. The News considers this to be desecration. It concludes an article on this subject thus "Graves have been opened, and bodies which have been buried, some a hundred years, transported to another 'resting place.' "Serious and passionate objections have been often urged against the removal of bodies from a grave, even when a Church was to be enforged or creeted. But it has been reserved for a church in New Brunswick to lease its grave-yard to a soulless corporation, whereor to erect engine houses.'

It seems to be settled now that both the living and the dead must give way to public improvement. The necessities of cities demand the vacation of ancient burial grounds Old graves should be honored, but health and convenience both dictate that repositories of the dead should be without the limits of a city,"

To which he adds the suggestion, that as our town is rapidly increasing in population, and likely through railroad and other influ ences to increase still faster, and as the grave vards adjoining the Baptist and Methodist Churches are getting full, that the inhabitants of the town purchase the entire square, at the west end of the town adjoining the Presbyterian grave yard, and fit it up as a

We would urge upon our citizens the importance of making an immediate move in the matter. There is no location in the neighborhood so suitable for such a purpose; and we suppose the old Church can be kept in repair at small expense, so as to be suitable for funeral occasions, provided arrangements ean be made with its owners to that effect. Our readers are interested in that matter and we hope will let us hear from them on the

NOTICE

The citizens of Bridgeton and its vicinity ro respectfully invited to attend a meeting to be held in the Presbyterian Session House on Saturday Evening next (June 3th) at I beore 8 o'clock.

The design of the meeting is to expedite he completion of the West Jerrey Academy, dready commenced in this place. No collection will be made on this occasion, but the Rev. Dr. CHESTER of Philadelphia will address the citizens on the importance and value of such Classical Seminaries to the communities in which they are located.

By a notice in another column, it will b such that arrangements have been made, for Mr. Gough to lecture in Bridgeton on Thursday and Saturday evenings of next week. at Millville on Friday, and at Salem on Wednesday and Sunday evenings. The fame of the lecturer, is so wide spread as to need no comment from us. But few of our citizens have heard him; we expect therefore they will readily embrace the opportunity, to listen to a style of oratory, peculiar and fascinating to an extent, but seldom possessed by any man.

While there is so much deception, practised open country people by city dealers, particularly in the matter of watches and jewelry it is a great desideratum to have a place in the city to deal, where some sceurity can be felt against deception. We take pleasure in recommending our readers on visiting the city to call on Voute & Groff whose store is No 58 Market St. Philadelphia, and who are known to many of our citizens, as correct straight he would concur with us. That they went forward business men. To which may be for the Maine Law stronger than did the added a knowledge of, and experience in their Ed. of the Bridgeton Chronicle. And this is business, such as to enable them to accommodate all who may favor them with a call. See their advertisement in another column.

We have been favored with a basket of Strawberries from our friend Israel Miller of Hopewell. As he comes into market twice a week our citizens can have an opportunity of supplying themselves with this delicious fruit, together with other fruits and vegetables, suited to the season.

Go early in the morning to scenre a chance. As Mr. Miller has engaged in the marketing business and raises himself what he offers for sale, our citizens by buying of him, can be certain of securing the articles they want fresh from the country.

We have been favored with a copy of the Woodstown Register, a new weekly just started in Woodstown, by J. R. Schenk.

From the specimen furnished us, we judge the citizens of the place may calculate on having a pleasant, spicy sheet of their own, for the low price of one Dollar, provided enoughof them will see that the tin is properly and deed of charity on his part, he infers that we regularly forked over.

If brother Schenk will only convince his readers, that his paper possesses a claim on them superior to city papers he will doubtless succeed in his enterprise.

Sudden Death .- On Monday about 11 in of the vessel, was observed to bleed at the as much as he had recently met with similar a short distance from this place, was the scene mouth and nose. He had performed his share of work until within a fow minutes and made no other combreast. His name was John Proctor. He he speaks, for some ten or eleven months was from Philadelphia, and had no family.

First of the Season .- Just as we were going to press, we received from our Esteemed friend Mrs. Elizabeth Merseilles, a fine let of delicious ripe cherries, of a large size and excellent flavor, from her own garden, which by the way is one of the handsomest in town.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS .- It very frequently happens, that the first impressions formed are the most lasting; and this applies not only to the first sight of persons, but also to the first appearance of a town or village. Connected with this feeling, is an innate desire to hear our own place well spoken of. For a town to merit that remark the buildings must be creeted by competent and skilful hands. The knowledge and experience possessed by Jorden, Godfrey and Goff, point to them as just the persons calculated to adorn a city or build Louse. Try them.

MR. R. A. CUTTER is engaged in giving lessons, day and evening, in the art of ornamental drawing with the pen. Those wishing to Editor would desire to make his paper more We like the proposition. We have a city add this finishing, accomplishment to their for the living, let us have one for the dead, other acquirements have now an opportunity that shall be properly cared for, and while of doing so at reasonable prices, by calling in serving for that purpose also be an ornament at the Professors rooms, in the Harmony Academy.

Muses Korroza:-Will you permit me to paper. I find an article published in the ols & Co. Bridgeton Chronicle, May 21st rolating to myself, where I have been grounly misrepresented by the Editor of that paper. He says that "We have been sometimes led to suppose that men in their great real to do good would even resort to threats and compulsory | Nichols & Co. means, if they possessed the power to compel others to adopt their views and sentiments." Then he says. "As a sample of this feeling. we copy the following letters the writer of lumber to Pithian Whitekar & Co. which receives our paper gratuitally."

es me to inform you that he wished his paper discontinued for the present, some of our people go for the Maine Law stronger than yourself perhaps.' Now this "epistle" seems to excite the feelings, and raise the ire of the worthy Editor to a high degree, so that he commences immediately to represent our disposition to "resort to threats and compulsory means, to compel others to adopt our views and sentiments." But the greatest marvel to us is, how and where the worthy gentleman learned our "views and sentiments," relating to the question which he touches; as we have not as yet ever expressed them on the subject involved, viz. the "Maine Law." We are grossly misrepresented by the Gentleman, for we did not express our opinion relating to the "Maine Law"; we only ex- for Newport with lamber. pressed our opinion in reference to "feelings of some of our people," in which we expected our opinion still, and we believe that we have sufficient reasons to persist in our belief. But the worthy Editor considers this to be "resort to threats and compulsory means, to compel him to adopt our views and sentiments," and to "drive him into the advocacy of measures" in which he deems it imprudent to take any active part through his pa per. Now we positively deny the above charges, and consider our character assailed by such accusations. And moreover it makes no difference to us whether the gentleman 'adopts our views and sentiments," or not, as they are expressed in the private "Epistle" which we addressed to "MR. HARRIS."-As our opinion there expressed did not relate to the Maine Law, but to the feelings of vo bave an equal right as an 66 American citizen." with Mr. Harris to our own " private

But he publishes, to the wide world that the "writer of the letter receives our paper gratuitously." therefore in view of this noble are morally bound to him not to express our opinion, at least to him; that is that other people do not agree with him in their opinions n reference to the " Maine Law" question. And more especially at the time when he meets with the disaster of having one of his o'clock, a colored man, employed on board the the nerves of our worthy Editor had become sloop Thomas Davis, while sitting in the cab- come what braced against such afflictions, in day last, the residence of Mr. Jeremiah Turk, borhood. But we suppose that those indi- old, met an untimely end. The family (with A post mortem examination by Dr. Moore, viduals did not let the Editor know but what the exception of the father, who was absent every body else concurred with him in his at the time,) who were all down stairs, were opinions, and so saved themselves a lashing from his able pen. Now the gentleman reminds of the boy who purchased a candy for a penny and then man home crying because the sliop-keeper did not return the penny with the candy. It is plaint than feeling on oppression in the true that we have received the paper of which past. But it was on the Editors own terms. who came into the neighborhood where we resided, and offered to send us his paper on certain considerations, which were very easy indeed. We afterwards accepted the offer, considering it (the offer) quite a compliment.

And we believe that both of us have fulfilled our contract up to the present time. But he now commences to publish from north to south that we receive his paper "GRATU-ITOUSLY."

He further tells us that the columns of his paper have been "open to free discussion." Well who denies but what they have? or who ever intimated such a thing as his paper not being open to "free discussion.". We do not doubt the Editors sincerity, in the least, when he makes such assertions as this, that we ever heard. for we believe with him that the columns of esting. Terrible and Fatal Accident :- On Saturof a most melancholy accident, by which his only son, Samuel E. Turk, about 18 years startled by the report of an explosion up stairs; on going up to ascertain the cause, they found him lying dead. The circumstances seemed to indicate that he was in the act of picking the flint or tube, and in so doing fire had been communicated to the powder, causing the discharge, and the whole load to enter the heart, killing him instantly. It is supposed from appearances, that he had unthoughtedly placed the muzzle of the pistol directly against his breast. Justice Sparks was called on to veiw the body, but deeming it unnecessary did not summon a jury.

Philadelphia, Nov. 2, 1851. Dn. Steeling—Pear Sir.—In compliance with your request, that I should express my opinion of of your Pulinonary Surup, I am happy to say, that having very frequently used it in my family for various pulmonary complaints, for several years past, and particularly for croup amongst our children to which they have been more or less satisfat. dren, to which they have been morner less subject, we have always found the most beneficial results from its use. Upon the appearance of this dis-eaes we apply at once to your Pulmonary Syrup; and when the symptoms are severe, we double, and sometimes treble the dose recommended in your printed directions, which speedily produces sickness and vomiting after which the system becomes relaxed, perspiration enhaes, the aldining of the toms are removed, and, through the blessing of toms are removed, and, through the blessing of Providence upon the means used, the sufferer is soon restored to health. Knowing you to be an old and experienced physician, your Pulmonary Syrup is, doubtless, tho result of much fashor and experience; and as it has been a kind friend in my family, I do most cordially recommend it to the notice of all, but most particularly to mothers, who might save their children many a weekless pans, by migne save their children many & levere pang, by always keeping, a supply of your symptom hand, and giving it immediately upon the first appearance of my of those diseases for which it is recompended.
