For the West Jersey Pioneer.

For several days, a young and beautiful female wandered about the streets of New Orleans, calling in heart-touching tones for her child. A short time previously, her husband, to whom she was tenderly attached, died, and her only child, a beautiful boy of four or five years old, soon followed him. This double bereavement had quenched the light of reason.

Where is my child, my fair young child, oh bring him back to me;

I miss the music of his voice, so full of joy and I miss the gladsome, singing laugh, the face that

I've watched him in his merry play, and marked each childish grace. I've felt the soft clasp of his arms, his warm

DVING GERTRUDE.

All the beautiful spring time, when the fresh leaves were unfolding in the sunlight, and the delicate flowers blooming in the meadows, lay little Gertrude in her darkened room, shut up from the bloom and beauty, and wasting away with disease.

She heard the merry birds as they sang near her win low, and the sound of children's happy voices as they sported in the open air, and sometimes she sighed but she never com-

Paler and paler grew her sweet face, and her soft blue eyes seemed more beautiful than ever in their mournful sadness.

Gertrude's little brother came often into her room. Sometimes he brought handfulls of violets or bright roses wet with dew, and he would arrange them in vases where she could, see them and breathe their perfume. One day he came with a bunch of pure lilies of the valley, a flower his sister always loved:
"Henry," whispered Gertrude, "come sit here by me; I want to talk a little while. I am very sick, Henry, and I know that I cannot get well again. You will have no sister soon. O, don't cry so, I am willing to die. There is a beautiful heaven to which I am going and you must meet me' there. We've been very happy, brother, very happy on and in the shady woods where the wild roses grow? And, Henry, if this world is so beautiful, and we enjoy so much here, what do you think it will be in heaven?"

Gertrude raised her eyes and folded her little pale hands. Her lips moved. She was praying that God would bring all she loved forget me, will you. Henry?" she whispered, "and I want you to come often to my grave; plant some lilies of the valley there, and blueviolets too, and when you see them think that Gertrude has gone to the God who made these beautiful flowers, and oh, Henry, dear. Henry, if you wish to be happy and ready to die, always do right love the Saviour and obey him." She kissed him again and again.

THE BOY THAT DIDN'T CARE.

Ben Poor had a bad father, but a pion mother. She had a kard time, yet the fait ful creature kept up a good heart, and the girls reward d her for her pains. It was not so with Ben. One day the neighbors saw her in the little back bed room talking to him, with tears in her eyes, about associating with bad boys; but the moment he was out of her sight, he was with them again - he "didn t care." he said.

He played truant, and the master and the school committee faithfully pictured to him the evils of idling away his time and growing up in ignorance. "I don't care," he cried, as soon as he was out of their hearing, and did no better than before. People who knew his mother wanted to employ him, that he might earn a little for the family; but he worked cerelessly, or forgot bis errands altogether, and when kindly or sternly reproved, he turned on his heel with a "don't care." At last he was apprenticed to a cabinet-maker, and his friends hoped, as he grew older, he would mend his ways; but the cabinet maker, after giving him a fair trial, shipped him off, saying he would have nothing to do with so careless and stubborn a spirit as Ben Poor The last I have known of him, he was seen sprawling on the green grass by the road-side on a bright sun m r day, without either jacket or hat, but with a jug by his

Ben is looked upon as a hopeless case; for there is nothing so utterly hopless as a 'don't care' spirit. Think of that, boys. The "don't care" spirit defies authority, disobeys parents, disregards kindness, and hates all wholesome restraints. What ruin it works! The last report of the State Reform School of Massachusetts at Westborough, says a considerable portion of those committed "are children who defy all parental authority," and adds, "those are the most difficult cases to reform, and little can be done for their permanent good un-til they are taught to respect the authority of

Some boys seem to think it is manly not to -a very mistaken notion of mauliness. True Cain "didn't care" when he slew his brother, The people of the old world "didn't care," though they saw Noah building the ark and heard his awful warnings of approaching ruin. Judas did not care, when he sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver.

Boys, do care-do care to respect your pa rents, to mind your instructors, to be faithful to your employers, to revereuce the Sabbath. and obey the Lerd God. Do care how you spend your time, what habits you form, what company you keep. Your parents care for you, your teachers care for you, God cares for you, angels care for you; and will you not care for yourselves? Remember, that as a man soweth, so shall he reap; and he that soweth to the wind shall reap the whirlwind.

From the New York Recorder. THE DOOR WAS SHUT.

In an extensive manufactory situated in New York, there is, connected with the building used by the workmen, a door through of access saves a considerable amount of inconvenience. naturally fall under the same head as the slovenly. For these the following remarks are not intended, and they will therefore, if they have read thus far, please skip the rest. But those who really love neatness and order, though they may not have attained it fully, will be likely to appræiate our intentions, in endeavoring to assist in the removal of the very common evil, namely, that of converting our public highways into promiscuous pasturage for cattle, colts, sheep, hogs, and web-footed poultry.

The evils of this practice are interminable.

A friend informs us that he finds it next to impossible to preserve the contents of his garden from his neighbor's swine, which have become skilled in all branches of the art of squeezing through small spaces, crowding rails and boards asunder, and burrowing under fences. Another lost, not only some choice young pear trees, but several beautiful and cosily imported evergreens, devoured by the street cattle passing through the gate accidentally blown open by the wind in his absence. Why should any one own a cow, when he has nothing wherewithal to give her? Yet we have known those who had several, depending entirely on their skill to pick their own living in the streets, - which they did by variously snapping boards and entering meadows, vaulting into corn-fields, or watching with surprising keenness till some one thoughtlessly opened a gate for a few seconds, when they would rush in. Heavy and expensive fences were kept up by an acquaintance; but he was compelled, for the sake of maintaining a decentappearance in the road by his house, to "remove the deposits" daily, left by street cattle, who found his shade trees the most convenient places in the world for repose; and not unfrequently swine, after throwing up the turf into every imaginable irregucare—that it is smart to east off restraint. I larity, also sought repose in the same comforwill tell you it is a very bad sort of sn armess table shadows. These evils have become so common in most places, that they are submanliness is never rude and lawless; it submitted to as a sort of necessity,—as an essential share of the evils of this life, without an > their removal. It has been asserted that "no man has moral right to keep more stock than he can feed well on his own land." But if the cottager must have his cow kept by the public, and every thing is to be turned to profit, would it not be quite as profitable to convert the roadside into meadow, to be moved annually for wintering the cows of poor men, and save us from all the evils of street mauraud ers, and frequent five-mile journeys by their owners in search of them. We throw this out merely as a hint to those who measure everything by dollars and cents. We may also add, for the same class calculators, that the amount of time and attention consumed in opening, shutting, and watching gates-the amount lost by the plunderings of half-starved street-cattle-the enormous expense of heavy street-fences, -not to keep in the farmer's own stock, but to keen out his neighbor's-constitute altogether a most formidable tax, which if imposed by which they can go to their labor, which way government, would be regarded as insuffera

SCIENCE OF CANDLE BURNING. Before you put your candle out, look at it. It has been burning some time unsnuffed, and is gives little or no light; the wie is long, and is topped by a heavy black clot, a lump of unition at Cape Florida and is used by wreckconsumed carbon; take the candlestick in your ing vessels, Revenue Cutters, Steambouts, hand, and move it gently from side to side; Fishing smacks, &c. From Key-west the the superfluous wick burns away, and the candle is again bright. When you ask yourself why is this, you learn that flame is hollow, and it admits no oxyger, which is necessary for combustion; the wick which it to the Northward which course is continued surrounds remains unconsumed, and diminishes the light. When the flame, by motion, leaves the wick exposed at intervals to the oxygen of the atmosphere, it speedily burns away. Note the valuable deduction from this fact; the formation of a wick which constantly turns outward and reaches the exterior air, and so gives us a candle that requires no southing. There is ruch philosophy in the burning of a candle. The wick, you may think, is intended to burn and give light; but this is not exactly the fact, The wick is simply to bring the melted tallow, or oil, if in a lamp, into that finely divided state in which it is best fitted for combustion. The heat applied to "light" the candle decomposes into ts constituents the small quantity of tallow next the wick; heat and light are produced in the operation, and the heat so produced carries on the decomposition.

poor girl, her face suffused with crimson blush-cs, left the table, declaring, as she fled from the cabins. The secret of most of our failures, whether in moral improvement, in intellectual progress, or in business plans, must be ascribed to a lack of this vital power of concentration. We flit about from one object to another, dallying with a thousand plans and enterprises, but resolutely and perseveringly taking hold of none, and thus whatever of power or force we possess runs to waste. If we are sensible of faults in our characters which ought to be rectified, instead of taking hold of the evils, one by one, and bringing all our powers to bear seperately upon each, we revel in vague and general dreams of improvement, and scatter our forces over such a breadth of territory, that we actually accomplish nothing. A young man has some definite notions of the value of intellectual power, and devotes himself to its acquisition; but he skips and jumps so nimbly from one study to another, plunging from conic sections into spiritual rappings, and vaulting from traptrock to the nebular system. that after his hurry-scurry passage through the world of science, he comes out a merc smatterer, knowing very little in particular, and not much in general. Instead of a universal genius, he comes nearer to being a univarsal numbscull; whereas, had he expended the same amount of time and energy in mastering one thing at a time, his labor might have been rewarded by a well-stored and welldisciplined iniad. Similar errors do we witness every day in the business world. Who are our rich and prosperous merchants-our successful racebanics-our thriving farmers? They are mainly men who at the outset of their career, laid wise and definite plans, and have ever steadily pursued them, devoted all their business energies to the one sole current in which they ought to flow. They are not men who have been 'everything by turns, and nothing long.' They have not launched into a new tusiness, every spring, nor migrated to a new town every five years. Concentration is the word which expresses the secret of their

At the time of the said excursion, the numerous intelligent and hardy machinists, engineers, &c., had just completed a large and beautiful locomotive engine, one of the best upon the continent; it was got up with despatch, and in a manuer so highly satisfacproposed that the builders in person should make a practical test of its power and operation; nine cars were accordingly selected, to which the new engine was to be applied, and of the building. It cost about $800.

county and state. He says we did not "op- creises will be observed: pose all efforts to make it a party question."

Here is our language: we leave our readers to judge how much more it applies to the 3, Vocal Music by the children, "Yankee Sunbeam than to any other paper making a similar effort. "We cannot but regret the P. F. Reynolds; 5, Vocal Music by the chiltone and temper, displayed by too many of dren-" Keep the Declaration;" 6, Oration, our public journals, in discussing measures by J. We still adhere to this doctrine, and are perfectly willing the Sunbeam or any body else may draw any inference that can be drawn from the literal meaning of the words, without twisting them altogether out shape or natural meaning. We selected the article from the Sunbeam because, in addition to being equally pertinacious with other journals in introducing the question of railroads into the political arena, it wantonly stepped aside to attack the Air Line Road, which we had been advocating. None of our other exchanges had attacked it in the same manner, and as our article referred to the language used relative to the "Air Line" we 5. Vocal music; 6. Address by Rev. Mr. could not open our "masked battery" on any | Cornwell of Bridgeton: 7. Vocal Music; 8. the air line question, he makes all kinds of contortion and twisting to avoid the questions we asked and answer those we did not ask.

After reading several editorials on the subject we have only been able to arrive at the conclusion that his real objections to the air line, are because "certain parties" are in favor of it. No matter how good a project may be, or how beneficial to the State, if "certain parties" are in favor of it, it must be opposed by the Sunbeam, and we, "expected" by the worthy editor, to follow his in-dependent course. "Then why," asks the editor, agitate the Air line in the spirit it is now presented." We have advocated its establishment, solely on the ground of its utility to the State and to this County particularly. In what spirit would the worthy editor have us advocate it. "He is for both roads." and "advocates the Air Line" "and opposes the West Jersey Road," says the Sunbeam. How we can advocate and oppose the West Jersey road, with the same language, is a little difficult for us to comprehend. It is true we do advocate both roads and shall continue to do so, whether the projects are "dangerous to Whiggery" or "engines" for the "Democracy," at least, until we are convinced by something bearing a little show of argument, that one or both of them are not needed to develope the resources of the country. To accomplish such conviction, will require something more appalling than the scare-crow influence of "certain parties." If as the Sunbeam pretends, the Air Line was a rival to the West Jersey Road, where was that opposition, when on the 21st of January the bill for the charter of the West Jersey Road passed the lower house by a vote 57 for, to none against it. Where was "certain parties" then. Again, on the of Messrs. Blew & Corson, at Derchester, the same house by a vote 32 to 21. Harvesting, &c .- Our farmers are in the midst of harvesting and having. The crops, to our knowledge were never better or more abundant. Wheat has sustained but little damage from fly or rust. Notwithstanding there has been nearly two hundred mowing machines disposed of in our county this season, there are many whose crops are suffering for want of gathering. The scarcity of laborers has produced an increase of wages, and still the supply is so limited that many farmers have employed workmen on the Sabbath. The facility with which grass and grain are cut by mowing and reaping machines, led to the belief that help would be plenty, so far it has been otherwise. - Salem Standard.

Turkey.—The aspect of affairs promise speedy settlement without recourse to war. The government, however is preparing for a defence against Russia in good carnest .-The Porte has ordered twenty-seven vessels of war to the Black Sea, fully equipped. He has called out two hundred thousand militia for organization as regular troops. Russia.-The Emperor of Russia has addressed a note to the different European powers, that it is not his intention to do anything to disturb the peace of Europe. He wants all matters settled peacefully. Spain. - A ministerial crisis is still impending. The affairs of the government are in a very unsettled condition. Austria. - Russia accepts the mediation of Austria in the quarrel with Turkey. Switzerland.—The Austrian Ambassador is expected to return shortly, when other difficulties will be amicably settled. THE BALTIC'S NEWS.

The news is four days later than that brought by the Niagara, and is of an important character. The Czar of Russia had reiterated his demands on Turkey, with the ultimatum of the occupation of the Danubian provinces, in the event of a refusal on the part of the Porte. But no war was expected. The assurances of the Emperor of Russia were considered of a pacific nature, even in the face of the threat of Russia against the integrity of the Turkish empire. It is asserted that the occupation of the Danubian principalities would not be considered a casus helli. Is it possible that the western powers will permit the Russians to take this forward step-to gain her point-to violate the Turkish territory? We shall see. The Africa arrived out on Sunday morn-

A Revolutionary Hero.—There is now living at Haddonfield, Camden county, a revolutionary soldier named James B. Cooper, who is now upwards of ninety years of age, and who retains a clear and distinct momory delphia and Camden during that eventful period. He was under Col. Lee, but is the only surviving member of the intrepid spirits who composed that valiant party. He entered "Lee's Legion" when he was between 17 and 18 years of age, and continued with it un-til the peace of 1783. He assisted in taking Stony P't and Pawlus' Hook; was at the batof Guilford. N. C., and Eutaw Springs, S. C. He was also in the company who assisted in taking Forts, Watson, Mott and Granby, S. C., and Forts Galphin and Augusta, Ga., and was likewise in the siege of 96, in S. Carolina. His urbanity and boldness rendered him a favorite, and wor, for him the confidence of Col. Lee, and the esteem of the army. . Col. Lee selected him as a bearer of his despatches to congress, and also to the Commander-in-chief and he was entrusted to carry the flag of truce to the British General. After peace had been declared, he turned his attention to a scafaring life, and iu 1811, on the second declaration of war, he entered the navy as a sailing master. After that contest had terminated, he was presented by President Madison with a Lieutenant's commission This took place in 1822. In his 73d year he was ordered on duty in the Naval Asylum. Last year there were three others who drew their pensions at the same office with him, but this year they have not presented themselves for of nature and gone to the patriot's grave.—

Beauty, Health, and Cheapness.

AMUEL L. FITHIAN has on hand and for alle a large lot of Zinc Paints as follows viz. Pure Zinc White No. 1, 2 & 8, Brown Zinc, Black Zinc, Zinc Dryer and Demar variable.

The Zinc Paints in their improved state have now been in use for a number of years and fully tested side by side with the Best Pure White Lead and has in every instance proved to be superior to White Lead both in Color, Durability, Brauty, and Cheapness. From experiments it has been found that 100 lbs best White Zine will cover when applied in three coats on new work as much surface as 1662-8 lbs White Lead Pure, and will cover as well which makes the Zinc over 60per et cheaper than

It is equally applicable to inside or outside work or for the bottom of vessels or in any other place where paint is necessary. The reasons above given, we think should satisfy any one of the Superiority of the Zine paints but should any yet doubt, we should be pleased to have them give us a call and we think we can fully satisfy them of their superiority for Beauty, Durability, Health & Cheapness.
