For the West Jersey Pioneor. MEMORY.

Amid the scattered ruins, which the storm Hath rudely cast against the feeble sands, In torn and sea drenched robes a maiden stands Sad in her aspect, yet of beauteous form. A lyre she holdeth in her trembling hands, And ever and anon she sweeps its strings While, in a low and plaintive voice, she sings Of happy days spent in a distant land. And then her eye roams forth upon the sea-The night of storms is past, the fickle sky Smiles now beneath the bright sun's joyous eye Yet only clouds and darkness can she see! Thus on the blighted past, sad memory turns A streaming eye, a heart that ever mourns And present joys and future hopes she spurns. Bridgeton, July, 1853.

From the Scientific American. THE DIGNITY OF LABOR.

Professed philanthropy is a very cheap and common commodity. There is an exceeding ly plentiful/amount of wordy sympathy at the present pay for working people, hence great swelling articles about the "dignity of labor" advocates of industry, we at one say that there is neither dignity nor disgrace connected with try l'fe one of health, comfort, attractiveness, labor mental or physical in itself apart and usefulness, instead of one of sensuality, from the object of labor. If physical labor disease, and repulsiveness, to young people is of a dignifying nature, then the horse, ox, and steam engine possesses a greater amount of it than man. If mere mental labor is of a dignifying nature in itself, then forgers and plotting gamester's must stand on very elevated positions on the ladder of dignity. The majority of articles which we have read on the dignity of labor are calculated to deceive our working people; it is for them they are intended, and their tendency is injurious.— Idleness is an evil, and industry as its counterpart is a righteous duty, but at the same time, intense laborin, any cause, or at any business, whereby evil is done, cannot dignify farming, how proud we were the first summer, pilfering money from the house of his father. the actor, howowever assiduously he may toil at our abundant supply of early vegetables, and with what care we began preparing our harvest dinners, and with what chagrin we harvest dinners, and with what chagrin we found our dislies of beets, peas, potatoes, and having previously caught his son in a laborers; the noble man (not titled) confers and having previously caught his son in a dignity upon the labor in which he is engaged the labor cannot confer dignity upon him. Here the proceedings were in the usual form except that the children performed the duties of the cloir. The oration by J. Howard Nixon was a graceful and polished discourse. The subject American liberty compared with the liberty of other countries, was well discussed,the language beautiful, chaste, and appropriate-the sentiment elevated and intellectaul. We had hoped to have laid it before our readers but have not been able to procure a conv.

After the proceedings at the ground the procession was formed and marched to the Presbyterian session room where it was dismissed. The bearing of the children throughout the proceedings was quiet and orderly and in the highest degree creditable to themselves.

In the afternoon the temperance men had a meeting on the ground occupied by the morning celebration. The proceedings were similar to those in the morning.

Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Wm Cornwell, and William Ncholson Esc. of Philadelphia. The former was well written, but rather too long, the latter unique, bold attractive, and interesting, interspersed with a vein of humor peculiar to the speaker. The afternoon celebration did not take place in J M. Riley's yard, owing to disappointment in getting speakers; but in the evening there was a large audience there, which was addressed by Wm. Nicholson Esq. The speaker maintained the right of the state of Legislatures to pass phohibitory laws, and forcibly and humorously showed that they now exercise the power of regulating our " meat and drink." His remarks throughout were forcible comprehensive and amusing, as evidenced by a very attentive, crowded auditory. During the evening there were a few displays of fireworks but not of a satisfactory character as showed by the card of the committee in another column.

Owing to different celebrations in the vicini ty of Bridgeton, the attendance shroughout the day was smaller than usual. We are sorry to add that in proportion to the number of persons in attendance we noticed more drunkenness than usual.

By midnight the town had again relapsed into quiet and the fourth of July 1853 was ended.

For the West Jersey Pioneer. THE LOST CHILDREN.

There was great excitement throughout the whole town of Millville, on Friday evening June 17th; in consequence of two children being lost from the village at the Millville Iron works. They were Mr. Alexander Gillings children, a little boy about five and a little girl about three years of age. The little rosy cheeked fellow with his little sister, stole away from home late in the afternoon and went out into the woods in search of whortleberies, and instead of returning home they got bewildered and went directly from home. After the mother missed them, she called for them, and neither seeing or hearing uny thing of them, she became concerned about them, still, she consoled herself with the thought; that they would soon return, or that they were with their Father. But their father had not seen any thing of them. She could not find the children any where in the village, but was told that they were seen going towards the woods, late in the afternoon, and that they must certainly be lost, or they would have come home before this time. The anxious parents prevailed upon the people to turn out with lanterns and sent a messenger down to Millville to ring the large Bell. Soin as they began to ring the bell the alarm of fire; fire, fire, was given. No says one there are Children lost, fire, fire, fire, you would hear in another direction, no, there are children lost: whose children? Gillings at the Furnace, was the reply; the bell was rung for a long time, and you could almost articulate the mournful sound, Child, Lost! Child, Lost! Child, Lost! As soon as it was understood what it meant, all hands immediately started into the dark forest in quest of the lost children. The Father led the way and calling at the top of his voice for the children the men went in different directions hunting and calling, and did not find them till nearly ten o'cleek at night. The Father was the first that saw them, they had strolled between four and five miles from home, and were go ing right direct for the swamp. Now my dear readers, what were the emotions of the parents of these children, those only, may conceive, that have ever been placed in similar circumstances. When the father got in sight of his Children, his dear little girl ran to him, and said papa we have found nice whortleberries .-The father clasped her into his arms and pressed her to his bosom and then took them home to their almost heart broken mother. My dear young readers, what do you think was the joy of that poor weeping mothers heart, when her disobedient children was returned safe to her again. A large number of people went to the house at that late hour, to rejoice with her, and to see the children .-Who can describe the felings of a fond mot's ers heart at such a time? Mothers always love their children, and it is right that they should love them. O my dear young readers if you could know how much your fathers and mothers love you, and how it is just as though you were cutting right through their hearts when ever you disobey them, or get into bal company it seems to me you would try never to do wrong any more, and would be kind and obedient children.

Now my dear young friends although there was so much joy felt and expressed over these children by their parents and the people who had assembled there, do you think that it is any comparison to the joy that is in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth? O, my young friends, stop and think before you go any farther. Think, oh; think what the Bible says about it. I will tell you. It says that there is more joy in Heaven in the presence of God and the Holy Angels over on sinner that repenteth than there is over ninety and nine just persons that needeth no repentance. O think of that, and then think what God created us for, God created us that | blown up with gunpowder and ruined. we might love and serve him and do his will; and it is Gods will that you should love and obey your parents and keep out of bad company and always try to do what is right It is his will that you pray and read your Bibles and it is Gods will my dear young friends that you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and trust in him for the pardon of all your sins.

When that father took his dear little girl, out. and laid her, on her dear mothers bosom, or perhaps when he took her in his own arms he said this babe shall be our comfort yet. -A great many parents when their children are growing up, feel, and think just so. They year's discussion, litigation and quarrelling think how kind obedient and good they will be when they grow up; how useful, respected the new road, for which surveys have already and loved they will be, and they press them to their bosoms and kiss them and almost and the Central lines, and be called the New weep with joy. But alas, a great many pa- York and Western Railroad Company. It rents are sadly disappointed. The wicked words, and do wicked things until road will embrace about 235 miles within the perhaps they are thrown into prison for some State of New York, and 30 miles in New bad crime or hung on the gallows. Many a Jersey, for which a special charter has been kind mother has died of a broken heart, because her son or her daughter has disappointed her hopes; and for the same reason the gray hairs of many a father have been the same to the gray hairs of many a father have been the same to the gray to the brought with sorrow to the grave. O my House, Philadelahia, on the 8th, and read on dear young friends I hope that you will never the same day to the army at New York; immake your fathers and mothers unhappy by mediately after which, the leaden equestrian being disobedient and unkind to them. If you are kind, obedient and affectionate children to them, how happy will they be, Ah, yes, and how happy, thrice happy will you be, happy while you live in this world, and then happy, perfectly happy with all the good and Holy in Heaven. ISAAC MAYHEW.

PAIRTON, July 5th. The colobration of the 4th in this place passed off with much spirit, and very much to the satisfaction of all that participated, if we may judge from the good manner depicted on every countenance. The oration of Mr. J. A. Parvin, at the general celebration in the morning, and of Mr. S. Sockwell, before the audience gathered at the invitation of Friendship Council of United American Mechanics, were both well adapted to the occasion and were listened to by a full house with great interest. The church was tastefully Ancient and Modern Languages, Including French, decorated with avergroups and the correlated German, Italian and Spanish; BRAWING and PAINT-of food adapted to the wants of the outer man and judging from the number scated, and the close attention paid to the subject matter before them, this was not considered the least interesting or the least important part of the exercises of the day. The presence of Rev. Ethan Osborn, a representative of the army of '76, and now verging close upon the end of his 95th year; was one of the gratifying incidents of the day. The celebration throughout was one that does honor to the citizens of Fairton, and to those who so kindly lent their assistance in the exercises in the church, and those likewise by whose services gratuitous like the rest, the day was enlivened by the notes of martial music, so appropriate to the remembrances called forth by the VIDI.

The Crystal palace was somewhat injured by the heavy storm, which passed over the city of New York on Friday afternoon of last

The force of the wind drove the rain through the ventilators, and half way across Jeremiah Hann the north west gallery. The tinning of the dome was not quite completed, so that the rain came down in torrents in the centre of Holmes Pierce

For a time the water was two inches deep on the gallery floor, and ran down the steps in miniature cascades. There were a number of boxes, bales and packages of goods on the central floor, among which the water neured from the gallery floor in destructive quantities. Fortunately but few of the goods were opened otherwise the damage must have been great and irreparable.

Several lights in the building were broken during the storm. Although many workmen were engaged about the place, no one was hurt, though several were compelled to hasten into the building with a speed and in a manner somewhat ludicrous. We have heard of one or heavy set, somewhat pock marked, reddish comtwo barns having been struck by lightning plexion and light hair; had on when he went away what ludicrous.
