From Gleason's Pictorial. A CHILD'S PRAYER. BY HORITIO ALGER, JR.

Thou who dwellest far above me, Heavenly Father, cherish, love me, Still surround me with thy care! I am small, and weak, and lowly; Thou art great, and wise, and holy: Let me in thy goodness share. I am weak: O, Father, guide me, Let thy Spirit walk beside me, Keep me in the path of right,-That, when this short life is ending, I, on angel wings ascending, May be seated in thy sight. From the blue sky bending o'er me, Heavenly Father I implore thee, Listen to my prayer to-night; Let me feel that thou dost hear me, Feel thy holy presence near me,

In the darkness as the light.

From the London Athaneum. THE SOUL'S PASSING. It is ended! all is over! Lo, the weeping mourners come-Mother, father, friend and lov To the death encumbered room; Lips are pressed to the blesed Lips that evermore are dumb. Take her faded hand in thin-Hand that no more answereth kindly: See the eyes were wont to shine, Uttering love, now starting blindly: Tender hearted, speech departed-Speech that echoed so divinely. Runs no more the circling river, Warming, blightning every part; There it slumbereth cold forever-No more merry leap and start. No more flushing cheeks to blushing-In its silent home the heart! Hope not answers to your praying! Cold responsiveless lies she there. Death, that ever will be slaving Something gentle, something fair, Came with numbers soft as slumbers-She is with eim otherwhere! Mother! yes, you scarce would chide her Had you seen the form he bore, Heard the words he spoke beside her, Tender as the look he wore, Whily he proved her how he loved her More than mother-ten times more!

"OUR FLAG IS THERE." Mr Bryant, in a letter from Athens describing the difficulties of Dr. King, the American Missionary; with the Government says:-"One Sunday a crowd of Greeks, led by a priest of their church, assembled in his house and garden to hear one of his discourses. His subject was the duty of religious toleration. At the close, the priest asked a question concerning some things advanced in the discussion, to which Dr. King gave a prudent answer. The priest then demanded an explanation of certain positions laid down in another discourse, which Dr. King declined giving at that time, observing that he would agree to appoint almost any other day for the discussion. The multitude immediately joined the priest in demanding that the discussion should go on at that moment, with such fury and noise that his friends thought his life in

It happened at that time that the American Consul was absent from Athens and the functions of the office were delegated to Dr. King. An American flag, a day or two previous, had been received by Dr. King from Washington. In the midst of the tumult, at the very moment when the multitude seemed ready to tear him to pieces, he bethought himself of the flag, and hastily unrolling it, let it stream

This department of flowers, and fruits also, should be exclusively in the hands of woman, as being well adapted to her health, tastes, and capacities. We need flowers a thousand times more plenteous than we now have them. The young men in Broadway who now monopolize the sale, must give way to women, and let these women give us boquets, (nosegays was the word used by our grandmothers, and we like the phrase,) nosegays "as is nosegays,"-a rosebud with a slip of geranium-a tuft of violets with a dozen spears of grass or clover, to be sold for a penny; or, let us have the ar bor vite, and the amaranth, mixed with the heliotrope, to signify "I am your devoted and

Will no woman start in this enterprise? We are too poor, or we should at once seize upon the opportunity, and then search for elderly, worn, wearied, neglected women, amid poverty and gloom, and bring them out to the cheerful light, and help them to be glad, and make glad by the sale of these beautiful children of our good Father.

A whole world of beauty and cheerfulness might in this way be opened to our people The merchant would go cheerily to his store with a penny's-worth of beauty in his button-The clerk would dust his counter with a sprig in his crayat, and a sweet oder in his heart. The matron would bind roses amid her chaste locks, and the maiden wreathe her brow with lilies, and take a new life of pure virginity into her young soul. The child would sport amid flowers, and grow into new beauty. Indeed a new Post Office would be would send the language of love, not on musolets and pinks. Will no one start in this beautiful work? If not, we pray and beseech our readers to petition that a shower of gold may fall upon our head, which shall enable us to plant a garden, and to sit under our own vine and fig tree, with none to make us afraid.

JOSEPH A. MILLER. DEAD LETTERS.

It is an interesting study to review the history of our Post office department from its rise, to its present efficient position.

Notwithstanding the annual increase of sparsely settled country over which the mail has to be carried, causing a vastly greater amount of expenditures required for its support, the experiment of a reduced rate of postage may be considered as successful. Although small appropriations have been needed since the postage was reduced, to supply the deficiency in the revenue, we cannot resist the conclusion that a still lower tax on each letter will ultimately be found amply sufficient to defray the expenses of the department. Rates of transportation, through the competition of rival lines, are yearly getting lower, and it is but reasonable to suppose that the Post office department must experience its share of the benefits resulting from such reduction.

By a different arrangement of the law relating to dead letters something might be saved to the department. From the attention and talent devoted to the improvement of that branch of the public service, we marvel somewhat that a more common sense disposal of dead letters has not before this entered into the imaginations of some of the reformers of that department. Under the present law letters at all the post offices in the United States, after having been advertised and still unclaimed, are required to be sent to the general office at Washington to be opened at stated periods by extra clerks selected for the purpose. Those containing valuable information or property, are then forwarded to the authors, and all others destroyed. This method in addition to being objectionable in principle, is certainly productive of much needless expense to the department, in the employment of additional clerks to comply with its requisitions and in the increased amount of mail matter to be carried to the central office.

There is no propriety whatever, in sending a letter designed for a citizen of Philadelphia, to Washington City.

The clerks of the post office there, have no claims to pry into other peoples affairs naturally superior to the claims of clerks in other offices. Why then should they be sent there? It would be quite as easy and much more correct to send them back to the original office of entry, there to be advertised in a seperate list, or else opened and returned to their authors upon the payment of the reduced rate of postage. There are three classes of letters that find their way to the dead letter office. First, business letters that are not taken out because their contents have been anticipated by some other source, or from a conviction that the contents are not particularly edifying. Second those directed to persons who have left or do not live in the neighborhood where sent. Third, those whose directions are not sufficiently explicit, to enable the officers to determine where they ought to go. The first class are most probably principally unpaid letters. The second and third classes comprise both paid and unpaid. Those unpaid it is presumed with but little exception are now a dead loss to the department. Now instead of sending these letters to Washington, we propose for each postmaster to return them to the office from whence they started, with an endorsement that they were refused or misdirected as the case might be. There they should be advertised as returned letters. The more prominent advantages resulting from this system, would be, first, the saving to the government the expense of several extra clerks. Secondly, many authors would prefer paying postage back on their own letters to their contents being known to the postmasters of their own town, and thus a portion of revenue now lost to the post office be secured to it. Thirdly, letters wrongly directed would be returned to their authors, who could then certainly know that they did not reach the person for whom designed, and thus many a heart burning and anxious feeling be saved to them, by the explanation, thus given why their epistles remained unanswered. All those containing money or other valuables would be somer, and at less expense returned to their owners. It after this, letters still remained in the office unclaimed, it would be time enough for the post master to break the seal and demand postage of the author.

This method of procedure would we think secure to the department much of its just dues which are now lost and would beside have a tendency to curtail the amount of anonymous writing which so frequently disturbs the peace of individual members of the community. The number of letters annually collected at the national capital under the present system is immense, and their final disposal an expensive item to the government. The importance of the post office to the social and needful intercourse of the country, becomes every year more apparent as its usefulness extends over a wider area to connect the different portions of society together. Every plan which has a tendency to reduce the rates of postage to its lowest ultimate point, should be examined carefully and strictly to hasten that period. We invoke from the press of the country & consideration of the subject.

Our remarks lave been hastily and imperfeetly thrown together. If they but serve to call the attention of abler pens to the subject, the leading object designed by them will be

It will be seen that the Society have determined to hold their first exhibition this fall, and have made a liberal arrangement of premiums for so young a Society. The next thing is to prepare for it. The Society has been unavoidably cramped for time, consequently those intending to compete must make the most of what remains up to the period of exhibition. There are large and flourishing societies in Burlington and Salem, but with these it is not expected their young sister will ronage, to dispel the idea somewhat entensive attempt to vie at the coming exhibition; there is however still time enough, material and industry too, to make a creditable and useful how, that will give prestige to future efforts. Assistance was immediately despatched to the sufferers, and everything that could be afforded was brought into requisition, and a train was sept from Bordentown to bring the passengers on to this city. We could not learn the names of any of the killed or wounded, but were told that the unfortunate persons were in the train which left New York for this city.

The wounded and killed were either left on the spot and taken care of by the citizens in the place, or sent back to New York,-Edward Marchamp, one of the conductors. was quite badly hurt, and remained at Hightstown. Several of the passengers in the train from Philadelphia were slightly injured, but none fatally. The train arrived in this city about half-past eleven o'clock, with the passengers on board. So many different stories are told about it, that it is impossible to give detailed correct account of the accident. This is the most serious accident that lias ever happened upon the road, and notwithstanding all the precautionary regulations adopted for the safety of passengers, the loss

are also said to be doing well. It is said that ex Gov. Gaines, of Oregon was a andidate for constable at the late election and was feated. How are the mighty fallen.

Cape Island .- The advantages connected with this popular place of resort, have increased very rapidly within the past three years, althou; h the and never were they more desirable than at the present season. Whatever is needed in the way of comfort can be had without difficulty, while the bathing facilities are of the most liberal and secure character. The hotels are kept in perfect order, and our worthy friends of the "Atlantic" have won for their excellent house a wide spread reputation. In fact, the arrangements and accommodations are well calculated to please, and cannot fail to give general satisfaction. No better evidence of this is wanted than the thousands of persons who stop there. The following extract of a letter to a friend gives a little insight into the enjoyments at the Island:

" McMackin's New Atlantic Hotel."

Beauty, Health, and Cheapness. a large lot of Zinc Paints as follows viz. Pure Zine White No. 1, 2 & 3, Brown Zine, Black Zine, tested side by side with the Best Pure White Lead and has in every instance proved to be superior to White Lead both in Color, Durability, Beauty, and Cheapness. From experiments it has been found that 100 lbs best White Zine will cover when applied in three coats on new work as much surface as 166 2-3 lbs White Lead Pure, and will cover as well which makes the Zinc over 60per et cheaper than

FOR THE LADIES:

NFLUENCED by the prevailing law of Fashion, the subscriber continues as heretofore, to preout new fashions at the opening of the various Seasons. Taste demands that these fashions shall possess new combinations and exhibit aspiration after new forms and embodiments of the useful and beautiful. The increase of his business affords the most gratifying evidence of the kind apprecia-tion in which his previous efforts have been held. tion in which his provious efforts have been held. His present offering is a Dress Garren for Spring or Summer, in the first style of elegance and distinction—heing composed of rich and durable materials. While his principal fashion will undoubtedly be acceptable to the general taste, yet in order to gratify all, the subscriber has prepared a variety of styles, so that every one, old and young, plain or gay, can select that most becoming for themselves. The Paris style of Gaiter will commend itself for its dress appearance, it being de-cidedly the Gaiter for the promenade. The subscriber therefore can confidently invite the attention of his friends and the public, to his establishment, giving them the assurance that he s fully enabled to offer articles of his own many facture, at lower prices and of better quality, than are usually met with.
