From the New Jersey Standard. O'ER THE SPIRIT OF MY DREAM.

O'or the spirit of my dream, A wondrous change has come; The world has lost the cheering light,

That made my spirit's home. Too dreary seems it for the earth, It seemed a year ago: For the light of love burned brightly then

Now flickers sad and low. The laugh I gave rang joyous then, From a bosom void of care; Grief clouded not my happy brow,

Nor left a wrinkle there But a change is o'er my happy dream, I cannot smile again; .For joy nor hope can visit him,

Who loves, and loves in vain. Barnegat, Sept. 5, 1853.

GENTILITY.

BY TIMOTHY TEWKSBURY. Genteel it is to have soft hands, Genteel it is to lie abed, But not genteel to earn your bread; Genteel it is to eringe and bow, But not genteel to sow and plough; Genteel it is to play the beau. But not genteel to reap or mow; Genteel it is to keep a gig, But not genteel to hoe and dig: Genteel in trade it is to fail, But not genteel to swing a flail: Genteel it is to play the fool, But not genteel to keep a school: Genteel it is to cheat your tailor, But not genteel to be a sailor; Genteel it is to fight a duel, But not genteel to cut your fuel; Genteel it is to eat rich cake, But not genteel to cook or bake; Centrel it is to have the blues. Genteel it is to roll in wealth, Centeel it is to cut a friend. Genteel it is to make a show, But not genteel poor folks to know: Genteel it is to run away,

But not genteel to wear thick shoes; But not genteel to have good health; But not genteel your clothes to mend; But not genteel at home to stay; Genteel it is to smirk and smile, But not genteel to shun all guile: Geenteel it is to be a knave, But not genteel your cash to save; Genteel it is to make a bet. But not genteel to pay a debt; Genteel it is to play at dice, ... But not genteel to take advice; Genteel it is to curse and swear. But not genteel plain clothes to wear; Genteel it is to know a lord, But not genteel to pay your board; Genteel it is to skip and hop, But not genteel to tend a shop; Genteel it is to waste your life, But not genteel to love your wife.

I cannot tell what I may do, Or what sad scenes may yet pass through; I may perchance turn deaf, and blind, The pity of all human kind: I may perhaps be doomed to beg, Or hop about upon one leg; Or even I may come to steal, But may I never be genteel! Come joy or sorrow weal or woe, Oh may I never get that low.

MORAE

From the New York Organ. 'I MIGHT HAVE BEEN.'

A couple were walking slowly up Broad way, last evening, engaged in grave and carnest converse. One of them was in the prime of manhood, with a free, firm step, full round tones, and as any one could discover at a glance, an unbroken spirit.

The other was somewhat older in years. and a great deal older in heart-any one could tell that, too. Ah, an old heart is a wearier weight than the burden Pilgrim bore in the immortal dream of the ".Tinker,"

The old law which defined and enforced "right," was most wise, quite necessary and very excellent in its day and generation. The influence of previous importations & of those now going on must be extensively felt in the production of fine wool in the United States, and the manufacture of excellent woolen fabrics.

The vast extent of grazing lands we possess in the Northern and Middle States, makes the production of wool one of the most important objects of industry. The Southern States, except on a few of the mountains, are not suited for this business. The entire coast is flat and sandy, frem Virginia to Texas, and from the shore to the mountain region for the width of one to two hundred miles. For the West Jersey Pioneer. THE COUNTRY-GIRL.

BY IDA BELL.

Laughing May had once more made its appearance. Happy groups welcomed its approach, and merry voices announced its accustomed festivities. All looked for the day not only as a holiday but as a happy day. cares of the busy world were buried in pleasure; trouble was lost, in forgetfulness, and sad hearts were made light and joyous from contact with innocent mirth.

All seemed to be happy, but none could be found more so than young Harry Vinter, the Virginia affords some pusturage; which enter-prising citizens are engaged in devoting to the siding in the most fashionable street of the city of T-..... He had left home ,in company with others of his acquaintance, intent upon linois, which has a level lay of the land, was sport if any could be found. He tried to introduce a conversation, but his tongue seemed to cleave to the roof of his mouth. Time wore slowly away, and soon Harry found time to pen a few lines to his cousin Ella. He commenced with "My Dear Friend," and concluded with " Yours Forever;" still it did not suit him-it was 'nt to the point; however, he sent it and begged her to answer immediately. He waited and waited for an answer, but no answer came.

"I don't see what is the matter with cousin Ella; she certainly knows how to write. Perhaps she don't know how to compose," said Harry to himself as he was pondering over the momentuous subject.

July had nearly passed away and Harry felt tired of the city; and, moreover, his health was quite poorly ;-so he very naturalconcluded that a trip in the country would do him good. Having got everything in readiness he started for his cousin's. He assured his father he would be back in a few days. -The cars sped away with lightning speed, and soon brought him to his stopping place; here, in order to get to his cousin's, he was obliged to take a back, this he did and was safely landed at Mr. William Halliss, Esq. He was surprised at the house; he had pictured to himself a low, one-story cabin, sixteen by eighteen feet; but now he was before a large three-story brick house. "I wonder how much rent he pays for that," said Harry to himself. But there was no time for cogitations; he stepped up in the portico and was just going to knock when he discovered a bell, so he gave that a twang and waited rather impatiently for an answer. -Presently, however a servant came to the As time waits for no one, so it flew quickly door, and having made known his desires he

> From the Bordentown Register: FEAR OF GIVING OFFENCE.

There are many good and just things that are left unperformed or unsaid, for fear of offending some person, and it matters not what position in life a man may occupy, there are times and circumstances in which his real sentiments, will not be fully and frankly expréssed, even as he would desire to express them or when his acts fall far short of being an index of his mind, in consequence of the presence of those, before whom he does not feel at liberty to speak or act as he otherwise would. The merchant will withhold his horeest convictions lest he offend a customer. The mechanic is restrained from expressing himself lest a patron, or an employer should be displeased. The Lawyer fears to offend his client, the client his Lawyer-the manufacturer the dealer, the dealer the manufact? urer-The Preacher the congregation, the congregation the minister-the host the visitor, the guest the host. Thus, whether in pursuit of business or pleasure, at home or abroad there is a restraint placed upon the actions and the undisguised expression of sentiment among men, which is distinctly visible, and must have a marked effect upon society. Now this fear of offending is proper and praiseworthy, so long as the sacred principles of truth are not infringed upon, or the performance of known duty unscrupuously ne-glected. It is a barricade between those differing in opinion, protecting the feelings of each. There are times when no one wishes to have his feelings wounded, or his temper put to the severe test, of having his peculiar tenots, dogmas, eccentricities, or peculiarities thrown up to him from any source; and there are times when no one should wound the feelings of another.

But when this fear of giving offence is carried to its full limit, it becomes not only odious, but absolutely condemnable. The abuse s particularly apparent at the present day, in the relation of debtor and creditor. Debtors now-a-days, (perhaps we should have said our Debtors, for they may be more sensitive upon this point than others) some of our Debtors then, seem to be extremely fearful of offending us by offering the trifling amounts for which they are indebted. They doubtless imagine that it would be an insult to our dig-nity to do that which would appear as though they supposed us in need of so paltry an afence would be taken under the circumstances, for if a man chooses to do his duty-and it is no doubt every man's duty to pay his subscription—we would be the last one to do aught to deter him from the noble act.

But it may be said we have taken a very round-a bout course to arrive at the point at which we aimed, and that the course we have taken indicates the very fear of offending of which we have been speaking. We acknowledge it freely, and well we may, when it has ecome so fashionable for debtors when a bill is presented to fly into a passion—in order to bave a pretext for refusing a settlement-and you stand before him almost doubting the validity of your claim of at least not satisfied that you are entirely safe in his presence. Fiel for such men. The law knows them not. Reason, Justice, and conscience refuse to acknowledge them as such. Their own act declare hem to be otherwise.

THE TWO ARMIES.

It has been the custom of the world to maintain huge armies for the purpose of rapine and slaughter, under the name of mainaining the national honor or the national rights. The United States is the only great nation of the world that has dared to have sufficient good sense to refuse to oppress and impoverish the people for the purpose of supporting a mercenary soldiery. It is found here that order is better maintained by just laws and virtuous liberty than by balls or bayonets. Yet of late years there has been growing up a military spirit which bids fair to render a large army popular. We hear a great deal of "National Rights," "National Houor," "National Progress," "National Aggrandizement," &c., but very little of national duty, national honesty, and rational economy and good sense. It will require the efforts of the good and wise men of the counan immense army, and we trust that the ef-

This army numbers about 10.000 men, and they cost the country last These men live in old forts in different parts of the country, and their principal work consists in eating three meals a day, and occasionly touching their caps to their officers.-This army is modelled after those of Europe.

THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA .- At the present time the attention of the civilized world is fixed upon the movements of Russia with a degree of interest but seldom so generally felt in the affairs of any European nation. It is not the least remarkable, among the many curious phases and changes in the political world, that so strong a sympathy is felt by so many of the Christian nations at the fate of a people who for a long series of years have been considered their most bitter and inveterate foes; and who at one period threatened entire extermination to the christian religion. The ostensible, and probably the real causes of the hostile attitude of Russia and her satellites towards Turkey, is perfeetly familiar to the world; and it is a feature in no ways complimentary to Russia that, with this knowledge, the verdict of mankind should be so generally and heartily against

A few homeless, friendless exiles from the tyranny of their own country seek refuge with the foes of their country's creed, and claim that hospitality never demanded of her in vain. Seizing this as a favorable pretext with others more puerile, for carrying forward his schemes of aggrandizement, the Russian despot threatens destruction and extermination to the Porte.

Seeing the absurdity of his demands, and fearing the destruction of the much talked of equilibrium of European power, France and England united, and for awhile appeared earnest in their endeavors to prevent that balance from being destroyed. Present appearances indicate that Russian diplomacy and intrigue will eventually overcome their assumed hostility, and leave the Porte to contend, single-handed, with a power which they had given assurances to assist in resisting.

The position in which these countries have thus placed themselves, is deserving the contempt of the world. Selfishness being the leading motive in offering assistance, instead of a principle of right or a feeling of sympathy with the oppressed, it was, perhaps, nothing more than natural that whenever that feeling of selfishness could be reached in some other way, to appear as beneficial to themselves, that their hostility should be disarmed. or at least sink into lukewarmness.

The United States happily stand aloof from the causes which agitate and threaten the peace of Europe. With a system of government founded upon principles the reverse of those which distinguish the states of Europe, it was quite natural that they should sympathize with the oppressed wherever found. Having no balance of power to maintain, they can look without jealousy at the turnings and overturnings of the petty desnots of the old world, regarding it as of but little consequence which despot holds the sway over the ignorant and servile masses that people the Continent. American sympathy and opposition to Russian encroachment is based upon a far holier feeling. A desire for the advancement and happiness of the human race, and a just conception of the right of nations to afford a shelter-of which they are the great exemplars-to the persecuted and homeless victims of oppression.

In the exercise of this right the United States, like Turkey, have called upon themselves the ire of the despots, so that even France and England have joined with Russia and her dependencies in a protest to our government against the conduct of an American officer, for performing the dictates of a common humanity, and carrying out a recognized principle of this government.

In this state of affairs, in which Russia plays so conspicuous a part in bearing testimony against the humanity of this country, the craftiness and skilful policy of the Czar is manifested by his sending a fleet to co-operate with the American squadron in the effort to open the ports of Japan to the trade of civilization. If the policy heretofore adopted by Russia be any index of the policy to be pursued after the ports of Japan shall have the whole farce; the boat left as suddenly and been opened, it is something of a question whether the United States can, consistently with their national honor and integrity, unite till our citizens get one of their own and dewith her, or even accept assistance from her termine to sustain it against the efforts of in the accomplishment of the professed objects of the expedition. Accustomed heretofore to make a tool for her own aggrandizement of every country that entered into any alliance with her, we cannot anticipate, upon the present occasion, any departure from the usual line of Russian policy. It is very certain that the American people would hardly relish the With another season we hope to see a boat of position of a tool for the spread of despotic the right kind on the creek; and we feel conpower or principles. There are many reasons fident that the citizens of this section will not why Japan would be an important auxillary to the designs of Russia. To them it would be the key to China, and open the door for the subjugation of Asia. It has long been would pass through life happy and respected, prophecied that at no very distant day the if you would bask in the sunshine of beauty objects and aims of Russia are so palpably tending to her own injury. If now living, alry is gone," and that of stock-jobbers, "sophisters, and economists succeeded."

That the design of Russia in seeking to oin our squadren in opening the ports of Jaonn, arises from no feeling in common with this country, is apparent from her joining mong the foremost in the protest to our government. A foothold once fairly obtained upon that island, a pretext would not long be wanting for some cause of disturbance with the government—the result of which is clearly shadowed forth in the past history of Russia. To the inhabitants of Japan an exchange of tyrants could make but little difference. In act such exchange would probably be their gain, and be readily submitted to if accompanied with some little show of favor in allowing their ancient ceremonics and usages. We repeat, therefore, that our government cannot be too guarded in her intercourse with Russia. Power and aggrandizement lie at the

There is, it is true, enough unimproved and undeveloped land in the State at the present time. Still, when market facilities are fully obtained, we do not believe that there is much of the lower section but what can be profitably employed. This is more than we can say for either of the great states of Pennsylvania and New York. We shall probably speak the truth when we say that there are in those states thousands of acres that, with all the market facilities that civilization affords, could not be made of any earthly value, unless some new discovery should be made to call for azd impart a value to their flinty productions. Besides the acres entirely barren, we have seen lots of land in those states whose exuberant productions consisted of stunted pines, which when fullgrown are about large enough to switch off musketoes. Jersey poor! Pshaw; let us dig along knee deep in sand rather than starve to death among the "Keystone" and "Empire" rocks and stones. In the former we should have some little chance for existence, in the latter, none. Still, while it has become so fashionable for other states to shut their eyes to their own sterility and indebtedness, and cry down Jersey, it would be well for the farmers to take the matter in hand, and show, annually, that Jersey defamers have altogeth er mistaken their calling. That they can do it in a mauner entirely creditable, every counfew samples of uncommon growth in the vegetable or animal world we hear of in the neighborhood, we chronicle. We should be samples of the value of stock in the county. One of our subscribers, from the neighborhood of Shiloh, informs us that he sold a calf of the common stock, four months old, for twenty dollars. It was a heifer's calf, and had no more than a common chance. At the sale of Mr. Well's property, at Buckshutem, on Tuesday, a hog brought thirty-six dollars and fifty cents. We regret that in both these instances we are not acquainted with the veight of the animals. Does this look like a sterile country?

STEAMBOAT .- We noted some time since the surprise occasioned among our citizens by the unexpected and unheralded appearance of a steamboat upon the Cohansey. We joined with our citizens in applauding the bold determination of the captain to run regularly between this place and Philadelphia, in defiance of all the opposition that could be brought to bear upon him, at least for the remainder of the season.

Well, time wore on, and with it came an opposition bitter and relentless, and, if we are rightly informed, carried to a disgraceful extent by some of the rival lines to the city .-For a time the boat bore up under all its malignity, and was fast winning the good opinion of the community. Only one thing-a little more speed, and that was promised by the commencement of another season - was asked for by the citizens to make the line satisfactory. Then came a small accident that caused the omission of one or two trips. She was repaired and again commenced her regular trips, changing them from three to two a week. A difficulty with the hands arose, and they were changed and exchanged to the detriment of the boat if not to the annoyance of the captain Last Monday came the finale to Church. mysteriously as she came. We are again without a steamboat, and probably shall be rival companies and individuals. This last miserable attempt to run a boat here only confirms the opinion before expressed that a boat can be run here from the city and, if properly managed, be made to pay. The route is a long one, and we want something better than an old worn out hulk to make the trips.

The articles exhibited were of a rich and decidedly beautiful character, consisting of some of the finest specimens of farm produce and needle-work of anything we have ever examined at such exhibitions. Although the articles were not as numerous, owing, of course, to the fact of its being the first exhibition of the Society, yet they were admired by every one present, as articles of a superior and extraordinary class. The farming utensils were beyond all question, in a practical sense, equal if not superior, to any ever placed on exhibition-their qualities have been tested, and proved to be tical to the farmer. Various articles displayed, finished in the highest style of workmanship, and in a durable manner.

The vegetable department was richly filled with every variety of the choicest specimens the most beautiful sweet potatoes, mercers, egg plants, pumpkins, squashes, beets, onions, cabbages, &c., ever raised in Cataden or Gloucester counties.

The departments assigned to the display of ladies' work, &c., exhibited some very choice specimens of needle-work, paintings and other fancy work. The Democratic State Convention assembled at Trenton on the 22nd ult. Every county in the State was represented. David Naar, Esq., was appointed President, assisted by a vice president from each county.

Upon taking the chair the President made a few brief remarks. A committee of one from each county was appointed to report resolutions expressive of the sentiment of the convention.

After the adoption of regulations for the government of the convention, the nominations from the different counties were called for. Salem, Cumberland and Mercer nominated Wm. C. Alexander.

On the 6th ballot Rodman M. Price was declared the choice of the convention.

A committee of five was appointed to wait upon Mr. Price, inform him of his nomination and invite his attendance at the conven-

The committee on resolutions reported the following which were unanimously adopted. Resolved, That we entirely concur with the Democracy of the Union in the principles set forth in the inaugural address of President Pierce, and believe that by administering the government in accordance therewith, the heat interests of the neonle will be prethe best interests of the people will be promoted, and their happiness permanently se-

Resolved, That the foreign policy avowed by the National administration, challenges our highest admiration; that the day has come when the person and rights of every Ameriera citizen, whether native born or adopted, are to be respected by all the nations on the earth; that no European colonization can hereafter be tolerated upon the Western Continent; and that the Queen of the Antilles can pass from the hands of Spain, at the fitting time, only to be added to our own galaxy of

Resolved, That the Democracy of New Jersey appeal with confidence to their past legislation for evidence of their attachment to the wants of the people and the cause of freedom; that the same intelligent regard to human rights, which caused imprisonment for debt to be abolished in the State, and the adoption of the new constitution, has led to the passage of laws for abolishing the freehold qualification for jurors, and State and County offices; to the passage of a liberal exemption law; to lesson special legislation by providing general laws for banking, manufacturing, and all other business purposes, when the same was practicable; for improving the system of general education in the State; for regulating the hours of labor, and protecting the young employed in factories; for protecting the rights of married women to their property; and by all those reforms called for by the wants of an improved and enlightened age, the party has redeemed their pledges to the people, and shown themselves the true friends of the cause of enlightened and progressive freedom.

Resolved, That this convention cordially responds to the patriotic sentiment of the President of the United States, Franklin Pierce; "No East, no West, no North, no South, under the Constitution, but a sacred maintenance of the common bond, a true devotion to the common brotherhood.'

Resolved, That we believe a railroad connecting the commerce of the Atlantic with that of the Pacific, involving as it does, not only the interests of our own country, but of the whole commercial world, to be the most important public work ever projected by man; and that it is well deserving and should receive at the hands of the government every consideration and constitutional and that its magnitude demands.

Resolved. That by wise and peaceful Councils, by a clear and determined course of action upon all those questions which now exist, or hereafter may arise between ourselves and the nations of Europe, the glory of the nation will be made more resplendent, the area of freedom be enlarged, the prosperity of the country advanced, and the condition of mankind throughout the world be improved.

Resolved, That the education of the mas ses forms the broadest foundation for virtue & freedom, and that the Democratic party is pledged to favor and maintain a common

Resolved, That such changes should be made in the entire system of legal and equitable jurisprudence of this State as will render in thickness and we only take fourteen feet from the administration of justice more simple, speedy and economical—and also that the apmuch dreaded by the farmers. The committee to wait upon the nomince, here entered accompanied by Mr. Price, who after being presented to the President was introduced to the convention. Mr. Price, was warmly greeted by the assembled Democracy. He said he had come to thank the conven tion for the high honor conferred upon him. He felt that it was a distinction which he had not merited by any political services to the party. He accepted the honor, however moderate prices. Under Clothing, a full assortdoubtful he might be of his ability to serve the people in the responsible position for and a large lot of umbrellas. All for sale by which they had nominated him. He firmly believed that all needed, and important reforms must come from the Democratic party of New Jersey. He gave a brief synopsis of his views of our State affairs in this convention declared ty to make such suggestions on this and other subjects, as the wants of the people seemed to demand. Intelligence, he said, was claracteristic of Jerseymen, and nothing should be done on his part to limit the free exercise of the human mind.

He said it will be our pleasure to take such action in reference to the temperance cause as the wants of the people may demand. If I should be elected, it will be my pleasure to make such suggestions in reference to reforms in our poor laws, road laws, &c., as experience may have suggested. After again thanking the convention for the honor done him, Mr. P. retired. The following resolution was adopted just previous to adjournment.

Resolved, That when we adjourn, it be to meet at the polls in November there to present an unbroken phalanx to the enemy.

After the usual complimentary resolution to the officers, the convention adjourned.

It is chiefly devoted to the advancement of the interests of Mechanics, Inventors, Manufacturers, and Farmers, by the diffusion of useful knowledge upon these im-portant branches. It is edited by men practically skilled in the arts and sciences, and is widely regarded as a sound and able journal. Nearly all the VALUABLE PATENTS which issue weekly from the Patent Office are Illustrated with Engra-VINGS, and the CLAIMS of all the PATENTS are published in its columns; thus making the paper a per-fect Scientific and Mechanical Encyclopedia for future as well as present reference. The SCIENTIEIC AME-RICAN is very extensively circulated—its circulation in the last Volume exceeding 18,000 copies per week. It is in form for binding; each volume contains Several Hundred Engravings and over Four Hundred Pages of Reading Matter, with an Index. The practical receipts alone are worth to any family much more than the subscription price.

The Publishers offer the following valuable prizes for the largest list of subscribers sent in by the 1st of January next:-$100 will be given for the largest list; $75 for the second; $50 for the third; $45 for the fourth; $40 for the 5th; $35 for the 9th: $15 for the 10th: $10 for the 11th; and $5 for the 12th. The cash will be paid to the order of the successful competitor, immediately after Jan.
