"IN UNION THERE IS STRENGTH."

BY THE BARD OF ROSE GLEN.

Across the mighty ocean The white-winged vessel sails; Disturbed by no commotion She braves the fiercest gales. Affrighted by no danger

The sailor treads her deck, Long o'er the seas a ranger, He fears not she will wreck. For many though her timbers, Massive and of great length-

Yet he this truth remembers,

" In union there is strength." Then neath the Temperance banner United let us strive, And in a cheering manner The holy cause will thrive.

New Haven, Conn., Dec, 16, 1853. WOMAN.

No star in yonder sky that shines, Can light like woman's eye impart; The earth holds not in all its mines. Her voice is like the music sweet, Poured out from airy harp alone; Like that when storms more loudly heat, It yields a clearer, richer tone.

And woman's love's a hely light, That brighter, brighter burns for ave: Years cannot dim its radiance bright; Nor even falsehood quench its ra7; But like the Star of Bethleliem Of old, to Isrnel's shepherds given; It marshals with its steady flame The erring soul of man to Heaven.

MCORAG.

ONLY A FEW FAULTS.

" He has only a few faults!" How many fair young girls are deceived, or deceive themselves, by this specious reasoning! He only smokes a little, chews a little, and drinks a little, but never passes the bounds of sobriety. He is rather fond of amusement—what man of spirit is not? True, he is seldom at home; but the idea of a man sitting forever by the chimney corner-ridiculous! He is fond of dress, but then he is so handsome.

All these little straws that point the way the wind blows are regarded as trivial things -only a few faults. After marrying, the chewing and drinking become confirmed habits, the foolish wife sings a sadder strain. Then her children want for shoes, but her husband never for segars or drink. Her own clothes are patched and mended, not so the broken windows and his wretched habits.-The few faults, like grains of mustard seed, have grown and increased an hundred fold. Due bills come in, the rent is unpaid, and friends forsake the drunkard's family.

Then comes the miserable expediency of moving iuto a smaller house, minus all conveniences. Where the rain pours into the garret and the rats tramp all night; where the children get cold, grow sick, and die with fever; and the heart-broken woman sits up till morning to stitch her ill-paid work, turning ever and anon with a stifled sigh, to gaze through tears upon the stiffened corpse.

Sometimes she starts. The fitful wind drumming upon the blinds-was it his step? And soon she is childless, and sick, and dying—and she broathes her last, while he who had once 'only a few faults,' sings and shouts in a drunken brawl at the rum cellar.

This true picture has been a thousand times painted, and its duplicates hang up in the sad chambers of how many thousand hearts? And yet the thoughtless girl, blinded by passion, heedless of consequences, reiterates that he has "only a few faults," and gives herself up to corruption more noisome than the grave and to a fate the horrors of which no pen can

What a pleasure it is to listen to a lesson, perfectly committed, and clearly and foreibly I fear many of us who are very particular and thorough in most other respects, are not sufficiently careful with regard to the subject of enunciation. One of the most successful teachers with whom we are acquaint ed, a man of large and varied experience, re-cently said: "The pupils of the Boston Schools are trained to a beauty and distinctness of enunciation of which those who have never visited these schools can have very little conception. Taking occasion to commend the thorough proficiency manifested by the purils, several members of the Board of Education present, while coinciding with the justness of the remark, stated that they found one of their female schools which had been examined a few days previous, far in advance of this, as well as all their other schools. Wishing to ascertain wherein its excellence consisted one of our friends a few days after, visited the school in question; and was peculiarly struck with the remarkable attention to small matters, and the rigid thoroughness which characterized the instructions. In a reading exercise to which he listened, a single paragraph was read and re-read; and the class were not allowed to proceed; till the scholar who had first began the paragraph was able to read it without the perceptible sandow of a fault. This was sound instruction: It is a method too which carries with it the elements of interest and pleasure to the scholar. When a child has mastered his alphabet and is just beginning to read, if he is suffered to proceed no faster than every word passed over, is thoroughly learned, both in regard to its orthography and its signification; and if the same course be pursued in each successive branch and stage of his instruction; his intellectual progress cannot but be delightful. It will be like the triumphant march of the great and victorious general, who leaves no unconquered fortress behind him to harrass his rear. but meets every obstacle, and overcomes every foe, till having swept, slowly perhaps, but majestically across the enemy's country it is conquered, once for all.

AGRICULTURE.

SUPER-PHOSPHATE OF LIME.

Rev. William Clift, who very ably "does" the Agricultural for the Norwich Examiner. gives the following lucid account of the way to make this much talked of, much quarrelled about, and very efficient manure. Mr. Clift's recipe is that of a practical man, and can be

Bones are to be had so cheap in all this rerion, that we would recommend every skillful farmer to make his own super-phosphate of lime, and improve it, especially if he live near a railroad, or near water communication with the city. It may be true if one has to purchase all the raw material for the manufacture, that it is cheaper to buy it ready made. But if one lives near a village, and can get bones for picking them up, for a few cents a bushel, he will be certain to make a good use of his money, if he make it himself. Nature put the constituents of bones together in a very reliable manner, and if these are digested in sulphuric acid and water, we shall be certain of super-phosphate of lime. We have made it for three years, and expect to continue to do so, so long as we continue to cultivate a garden. The process is hardly so complicated as the making of good yeast bread and any one who can learn that mystery, can manufacture this fertilizer.

You will need from the agricultural store a carboy of sulphuric acid, holding say two hundred pounds, which if you stipulate to return catalogue, pure war one you are to embracing all. # From the Scientific American.

A correspondent in Ohio asks our opinion especting a change in the position of the poles of our planet during some period of its history -such as at the general Deluge. We will endeavor to present some peculiar information in support of such a change, as deduced from sacred history and scientific discovery.

The "Nebular Hypothesis" assumes that the materials of which our planet is composed were once in a state of gas of nebulæ; thus agreeing with the history of our earth as given by Moses, that there was a time when our planet was not as it now is, and as it is forcibly expressed by St. Paul, "the World's were mansion, for man, before he was introduced well as revelation, only the majority of geologists, seem to entertain the opinion that our planet was countless ages in preparation for man's reception, not six solar days, as stated may admit of a construction, which can ex-plain much that is contended for by geologists. Our planet may have been in a state of desolation, when the command went forth "Let there be light," and the six days works of creation, no doubt describes, what was done, to fill the earth with order, plenty, and beauty as it was before the flood. Our planet may have undergone many changes, and it may have been the abode of strange creatures, pre-vious to its present sacred history, and some great convulsion or convulsions, may have destroyed all life, order and beauty in it and it may have so remained for a number of ages, previous to the period, when the Mosaic account of our planet commences.

The crust of our earth presents many evidences of great and sudden convulsions, and two periods of such actions are recorded by Moses; one when the seas were gathered together into their mighty basins, and the other at the Deluge, when "the fountains of the great deep were broken up;" thus showing that scripture and geology are agreed in some mysteries of geology.

Many peculiar changes, must have taken place on our planet before the Deluge. Sacred history describes a condition of things very different from that which now exists. Thomas the freemen and legal voters of the United ries whilst they have "time and opportunity," event, he asserts that the axis of our planet an ample fund for the purposes of Education.

The people of Job-as a man-certainly knew nothing personally about the freezing of the sea. In Gen.

8th chap. and 22d verse it says, "While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter shall not cease." This is a promise that certain things were to continue to exist in the future, and the plain inference is, they did not so exist in the past. our planet, that we experience the vicissitudes of the seasons. In reference to this and the language of Scripture which we have quoted, the astronomer Hind, who has discovered so many of the asteroids, says—"the inclination of the poles of our earth amounts at present will not however, be always on the decrease, for before it can have altered 1°30', the cause which produces this diminution must act in crease the obliquity. But this change of obliquity can never become sufficiently great to produce any sensible variation of climate on the earth's surface. This perturbation of obliquity will never become very great or very small, and explains how effectually the great Creator has ordained the means of carrying out his promise to Noah, though the way it was to be accomplished remained a hidden secret until the discoveries of modern science

From the N. J. State Gazette. THE EXCURSION TO EASTON.

A gentleman who was present on the excursion to Easton, on Friday last, has given us some interesting details connected with the Upon the arrival of the train at Phillips burgh, the Eastonians on the opposite side expressed their gratification in thunder tones from the mouth of a piece of ordnance, man-ned by some expert hands. The procession was then formed, the Easton Committee tak-ing the lead, followed by the Governor and aids, the New Jersey Senators, members of the House of Assembly, and the Philadelphia Committee and strangers bringing up the rear.

The procession halted at the bridge, and

A. H. Reeder, Esq., received the party on behalf of the Eastonians in a very neat speech, which was responded to by a Philadelphian. The procession was then escorted by a splendid military company through the principal streets. All the bells, from that of a lose company to those of all the churches, were ringing in honor of the guests. From every window was displayed the feminine beauty of the town, who greeted the advancing procession with cheers and smiles. When the procession arrived at the Masone Hall, and two stalwart doorkeepers were liscovered at the door, demanding from every person who approached a ticket of admission the ranks were thinned off with astonishing rapidity—the outsiders retreating to the opposite side of the way.

The sight in the Hall was of a most imposing and inviting character. Mr. Reeder here announced that the train

Senator Mulford turned out to be the successful candidate and proceeded calmly and keenly to give the Philadelphians "jessie," and declared that New Jersey was entitled to the first honor on this occasion. Most of the Philadelphians | be true:had retired, and comparatively a small audi-

the Philadelphians to take stock, but they failed to get a single man to pay down a single dollar. They talked about subscribing conditionally—but the conditions were such as could never be complied with. They next went to Easton and by every possible entreaty endeavored to get the stock taken, and at last succeeded in getting 700 dollars. It had been since ascertained that the gentleman who took that was a native Jerseyman! (Roars of laughter and rounds of applause followed this announcement.) The whole road, then, said the Judge was built by Jerseymen.

This well timed speech terminated the meeting and all hands went into the special train to Cooper & Hewitt's furnaces. Here was not only a magnificent display of iron ore, pig metal, coal. &c., but an array of champagne which would have put even the West Jersey Railroad in the shade. The furnaces were tapped immediately after the champagne. The blasts were a grand display of the power and ingenuity of man over the elements. We shall probably speak of these furnaces at another time.

We returned to Easton and spent the night. Such a ball! Such an array of beauty! Our limits forbid that we should at present venture a description. This and other matters must be deferred for the present.

POWER OF THE INDIVIDUAL MAN.

It is one of the great facts of our age that the chosen agency for the accomplishment of all important reforms is Associated Effort. Let any one suggest a reform of any kind as desirable, and the next step is to form a society to carry on the movement, and every man who sympathises with the progress of things,

We do not write to disparage associated effort in any good cause. We agree that "in union is strength," and all that kind of thing -but we wish our readers to remark that there is an evil into which we are in some danger of responded to this toast, and gave the City of Philadelphia. The Mayor of Philadelphia, Charles Gilpin, responded, and concluded by giving another toast complimentary to Easton. Thus far the affair, in the presence of the "wisdom of New Jersey," sounded very much like Easton and Philadelphia and Philadelphia and Easton. A gentleman rose to ladelphia and Easton. A gentleman rose to subside into very quiet and passive things; reply to the last toast, and being evidently waiting to be made part of an association aware of the important omission, began by whenever anything important is to be saying that New Jersey had a history. Instead of relying on our New Jersey did in the Revolution, and when personal resolution, and the truth and goodhe concluded, Mr. A. H. Reeder, the chair- ness of our cause, we lean on the co-operating force with which we are associated.

It is time to restore the individual to a sense of his importance, and the sacredness of his obligations as a complete moral agent. And it is worth considering, that in all past time the interests of progress have been indebted much more to the individual than to associated effort. It is not to associated geographical inquiry that we owe the discovery of this continent, but to the individual Columbus. It was not to the united efforts of phiest incidents of the gallantry of his native losophers, but to the individual investigations of Galileo, Newton, Kepler, Brahe, Franklin, in Sussex, took up arms and marched to the Harvey, Jenner and others, that we are indefence of Eastonians against an attack from debted for the secrets of Nature. It is not to the Indians. He concluded by giving the the church as an association, but to its Wickperpetual Union of Pennsylvania and New liffs, its Luthers, its Wesleys and other heroic individuals that we trace the eras of religious progress. And thus it will ever be. The individual, nerved by a sense of his high and eternal personal obligations to himself, his fellow men and his God, must ever be, as he West Jersey Railroad Company. In order has ever been, the great originator of noble to restore quiet he said he would wait until ideas and purposes, and sad will be the loss all hands took a drink. #### SAVINGS BANKS

We know not how it is, that these exceedingly useful little institutions are not more extensively patronized. Notwithstanding all the charges of utilitarianism, against the Americans it cannot be denied that the tendency of the age is inclining towards extravagance. Franklin's maxims of economy seem lost sight of by the rising generation, and except with a few, have long since passed into oblivion.

The oft repeated lesson of the past that extravagance in youth leads to poverty and want in age, fails to bring with it an antidote to recklessness and waste. In the New England States, proverbially the most shrewd in their dealings of any of our countrymen, money saving appliances are quite common. "Train up a child in the way he should go" is the advice of inspiration, and applies as much to monetary as to other pursuits of life. The proper use and value of money, is not sufficiently taught to children, nor the philosophy of expenditure and income, made sufficiently a part of the system of education. We would not wish to encourage a miserly, sordid or avaricious spirit in the minds of youth, but to illustrate to them that it is only from the judicious use of money, that its full benefits can be realized and enjoyed. The establishment of Savings Banks, where sums in any small amount might be received and placed at interest for the benefit of the depositor, would tend powerfully, if generally practiced, towards effecting a salutary reform in the careless and wasteful habits of the youth now

It is a general practice to spend almost every penny than can be got hold of, for somehundred children of an age to attend the pub. lic schools. If the parents of these children, might save and place at interest a small sum voluntarily to do, till it becomes a fixed habit, they would give their children practical lessons in business affairs, that would most proand enable them to pass through life, useful its benefits might be extended to country as well as town children. If the children in Bridgeton over five years of age would denosit a six-pence a week, and what parent could not enable his child to do that, there would be a weekly saving by the children of over Sixty Dollars, amounting to more than three thousand dollars a year. A sum when placed together quite respectable in amount. No restriction to that weekly amount need be made, and it is probable as the habit became fixed in the childs mind and as he obtained ability to earn more, his voluntary savings would be a great deal larger. And what would be of still greater importance than the saving of money, correct habits of economy would be formed. In the benefits of such an institution old and young might equally share.

We have spoken more particularly of the advantages of children, because if fairly entered into by them, its advantages to others would be so apparent as to induce their support. As a means of checking extravagance and inducing forethought, it would probably be the most reliable system that can be readily devised. We would have the principle taught to the children, to save from choice, which would most probably be the case, if they were habituated to it from an early age.

Most of our working men and mechanics. would find such an institution invaluable to them as an auxiliary to provide against future misfortune or want, and the habit of living within their income, which it must necessarily create, would be a guaranty of the successful management of their business. It is what a man saves that brings him future pecuniary independence:

In affording an opportunity to their children to make a weekly deposit, it would be most advisable for parents to make their children use some exertion to procure it by their own earnings. Being so procured it would impart a feeling of independence and satisfaction and more of a self reliance, than if given to them without any exertion of their own to earn it. From the small matter of a sixpence a week, lasting advantages would accrue to the rising generation, powerful in their after developement and healthful in their character to the entire community. We hope to see the effort made, feeling confident that its success would be gratifying to all its supporters.

OUR EL will please accept our thanks for favors conferred.

THE OFFER OF THE JOINT COMPANIES.

The reply of the Joint Companies, to the committee appointed to enquire upon what the state, there has been reported during the terms they would part with their exclusive past year 5651 deaths, of which 2173 were privileges; must we think, be received with under 5 years of age, 298 between 5 and 10, duction of Slavery therein, is made the subegret and disappointment by all those who 320 between 10 and 20, 462 between 20 and sincerely wish the prosperity of the State. 30, 552 between 30 and 40, 321 between 40 condemnation by the Northern Press. Hence a committee of the legislature was appointed to enquire, not what the Company would take for the works, but upon what terms the Company would part with their exclusive privilege. The answer of the Company is significant. They offer to the State the works of the Joint Companies, for thirty millions of dollars, an offer which Commodore Stockton knew the Constitution prevented the State from accepting. The answer further proposes that in case the State refuses to accept the offer, the Joint Companies will be obliged to ask for an extension of their exclusive privilege for twenty years longer already commenced in West Jersey. What will the people of West Jersey say to this? Because the grant of exclusive privilege was odious to a large number of citizens, the legislative authority of the State, asked the Joint Companies upon what terms they will part with it, and are answered by a proposition to extend it twenty years longer, or else the improvements already commenced in West Jersey will not be completed. We not believe that the interests of West Jersey require any such censureable submission of the sovreignty of the State. All that was granted by the legislature and we wait now to see whether the pledge of support promised will be faithfully carried out. This proposition to extend the monopoly privilege twenty years longer, is objectionable in every feature, without one redeeming quality to commend it to the favor of the peo. ple of New Jersey. The principle of creating a monopoly by law is in itself anti-republican. The original grant is sincerely believed by many to be unconstitutional and therefore void. For fifteen years the people have allowed it by sufferance. For the remaining fifteen years, it has already become somewhat doubtful whether the construction given to it by the company will be acquiesced in by the people. And yet upon the face of this strongly expressed doubt, the company gravely ask for an extension of these obnoxious features for twenty years longer. The proposition is absurd and for the credit of the State should be unanimously rejected. The assumption thing affording but little gratification. There one charter of the company will be perpetual. are in Bridgeton between eleven and twelve is too flimsy and absurd a pretence to require a serious answer. The State is not bound to buy at the expiration of the charter unless would afford to them an opportunity to have she chooses so to do. And if she did choose a small weekly income, out of which they so to do there is ample time in the remaining

By having one or pass into other hands. Whenever the monopomore of these institutions in every large town by privilege expires, the road can be managed by the company with profit to themselves in the face of all the competition that can be offered. Having had thirty years start they would possess an advantage over all new companics. But even if a necessity should arise for the further extension of privilege, it does not belong to a legislature to determine fifteen years in advance what that extension shall be.

Assuming that the progress of the country in the next fifteen years, shall equal that of the past fifteen, and upon what conceivable data can the legislature of this year shoulder the responsibility of legislating for that period. Such acts looking to a remote period of time, usually lead to difficulty and are therefore highly improper. NEBRASKA TERRITORY.

The bill of Senator Douglass of Illinois, now before Congress to organize a Territorial government in Nebraska, allowing the introject of much comment and almost universal papers taking strong ground against the measure. In regarding the subject of slavery as a social evil, there seems to be but little difference of sentiment North or South. Being so conceded, it is difficult to conceive what there has been within the year 12,107 births object can be accomplished by the adoption of of which 6,070 were males, 5,551 females and that clause in the Nebraska Bill. plete asssortments in the country of BOOKS & STATIONERY

FOR CASH ONLY. The amount of goods in our line purchased by country merchants is usually quite small compared with their dry goods, hardware, and other bills; and this very circumstance absolutely compols jobbers in the book Susiness, who sell on time, to get larger profits in order to make up for the losses and extra expanses processarily invested in es and extra expenses necessarily involved in a credit business of small amounts. It is also easy for the merchant to make arrangements to buy his book bill for cash; though it might not be so con-venient for him to purchase his larger bills in this way.

These considerations have led us to adopt in our ousiness, from this date, January, 1854, the following principles, viz: SMALL PROFITS, UNVARYING PRICES, AND TERMS ALWAYS CASH.

-Swain, to charter Cape May Turnpike. Reports-To charter Atlantic City; to charter chancery of United Americans The bill to charter the Raritan and Delaware Bay Railroad, which passed a few days since, was reconsidered. Bills Noticed—By Mr. Hoxsey, to fund the revenues derived from the Joint Companies for the purpose of purchasing the works of the railroad and canal at the expiration of their respective charters.

The Governor informed the Senate that he had approved joint resolutions relative to officers and soldiers of the war of 1812.

Mr. Mulford, from special committee to whom was referred the answer of the joint companies reported that this legislature should take measures to provide the means for taking the works of the joint companies when the state shall elect so to do and reported a supplement to the charters of the Camden tan Canal.

This bill is prefaced with a long preamble setting forth what the company asked for in their answer, -the bill provides that the charter of Camden and Amboy Railread be extended so that it shall expire the same time as that of the Delaware and Raritan Canal which is declared to be in 1889 The sum of $75,000 is to be annually appropriated from the revenues derived from the companies as a sinking fund to be invested by the trustees of the school fund in good securities, or the bonds of the companies at par to be de voted to the purchase of the works. The companies are authorized out of their joint funds to reduce the curves and straighten their roads and to alter their routes so far as is necessary to do so, and such alterations shall be completed in five years. Mr. Davis moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill to suppress tippling houses and beer shops was lost-agreed to.

Mr. F. S. Mills presented a remonstrance signed by 39 persons against the charter and stated that he had been informed that two thirds of the propery holders were against the application.

Mr. Franklin said that a large part of the persons in the remoustrance were not residents of Woodbury. He declared that a large majority of the citizens were in favor of this charter, and proceeded at length to show its necessity on account of the vicinity of Woodbury to Philadelphia, rendering the place liable to disorders.

On motion of Mr. Rafferty the bill was postponed till Thursday next. SENATE.

Mr. Cobb moved that the Committee on Corporations be directed to report the Sussex Bank bill.

The motion of Mr. Cobb, was not agreed to. The bill to provide for a geological survey was taken up.

Mr. Cobb said the survey made in 1835 has always appeared to be inefficient, and not meeting the expectations of the people. That survey originated from a very imperfect act. He read the law authorizing it and said the House would observe by this act that there was no general or particular plan marked out, and a mere superficial survey was the consequence. By this bill a particular survey is required of each particular district, so that all should have a fair proportion of the expense placed upon them. The first sum was $1,000 -that now proposed is $4,000, although it is not expected that this amount will cover the whole expense.

Mr. F. S. Mills said a geological and mincrulogical survey was much needed. All our speakers and lecturers had told us of the immense wealth of our mineral resources, and all that was wanted was to have them developed. Other states had reaped great advantages from a perfect survey. He liked the character of the bill and thought it would accomplish the object, and give the people, the owners of the soil, a knowledge of the value of their lands. Mr. Barrett related the experience of a friend in his neighborhood, who had procured a chemist to analyze the soil of a farm and inform him what materials were best adapted to improve that soil, and then he planted the highest price in the Philadelphia market other securities, deposited in his office. this last season.

The great advantage this survey will produce is acknowledged of the soil of the state, and what is best adapted to its peculiar qualities. We all want to have the best grounds and fruits, and plenty of them. He was in favor of the bill. Mr. Cobb would state a fact to show the benefit to be expected from this survey,-There was a quantity of land in Middlesex, which a few years since was not worth more than $25 an acre, that was now bringing $1,-000 an acre, and this great increase was owing to the circumstances of accidently finding ton, on the application of the Bank Commisa fertilizing material called Kaolin upon it, a fertilizing material called Kaolin upon it, sioners, on the ground that the bank had not and using that material. There was a great transacted a bona fide banking business at the quantity of land similar to this in Essex co... now considered almost worthless, which this survey might discover contained Kaolin, and this render these lands valuable.

There was in Essex, a range of hills containing copper, and it might be discovered that they contained other metals—there was land or France.

and Amboy Railroad and Delaware and Rari- the use of these fertilizing materials to lands that had been thought of no value. He had learned enough by that survey to know that we ought to learn more. We are only on the threshold of the investigation of our resources, and we must enter upon it now if we wish to develope the wealth of the soil of the state.

This bill, so particular in its details, with the plan of the survey so well defined, was admirably adapted to give us increased knowledge.
Mr. F. S. Mills moved to take up the supplement to the charter of the Protestant Foster Home Society of Newark, which had been vetoed by the Governor, and passed by the Senate over the veto-agreed to.

Mr. Barrett inquired whether this was benevolent institution or sustained by a tax. Mr. Ripley said it was supported by the donations and labors of some of the first ladies of Newark, and it was now so full that it was difficult to get a child there.

Mr. Rafferty said the gentleman could an swer the question without making a speech. Mr. Ripley, well the member wanted information, and I was giving it. They had bought a house and a few acres of land, and run in debt, when they got up a subscription to pay it off, and they wanted to do more good than they were able to do now. Mr. Barrett was satisfied, it was a benevolent institution.
