From the German of Johann Martin Miller. THE CONTENTED MAN.

Why need I strive or sigh for wealth? It is enough for me That Heaven bath sent me strength and health A spirit glad and free; Grateful these blessings to receive, I sing my hymn at morn and eve.

On some, what floods of riches flow! House, herds, and gold have they-Yet life's best yoys they never know, But fret their hours away; The more they have, they seek increase-Complaints and cravings never cease.

A vale of tears this world they call; To me it seems so fair, It countless pleasures hath for all, And none denied a share The little birds, on new-fledged wing,

And insects revel in the spring. For love of us, hills, woods, and plains In beauteous hues are clad,

And birds sing far and near, sweet strains, Caught up by echoes glad.
"Rise," sings the lark," "your tasks to ply;" The nightingale sings "lullaby." And when the golden sun goes forth,

And all like gold appears, When bloom o'erspreads the glowing earth, And fields are ripening ears-I think these glories that I see, My kind Creator made for me.

Then loud I thank the Lord above. And say, in joyful mood; His love, indeed, is father's love, He wills to all men good. Then let me ever grateful live, Enjoying all he deigns to give.

Answer to the Enigma of last week: " Honour our parents,

SEQUEAR.

From the Christian Observer. MY HOME-WHERE IS IT?

Our world-how false, and yet how fair Here the sun-shine and the rain, the smile and tear, follow each other, like wave upon wave. Here sin, suffering, ruin, death and decay, meet us at every step; yet there are still some bright spots, some besutiful cases, eth up, then withereth away; so that, though these favored spots once knew us, yet how con they know us no more forever.

Such is our home, "a name ever dear to me." How oft my memory carries me back o the old white house, where father, mother, sisters and brother, once dwelt in fond embrace; and where the society of near and dear relations mingled into bliss; when all was joy, peace and comfort. How seldom then, the waves of trouble rolled over our peaceful reasts; how few discordant notes disturbed that sweet family harmony. I remember well how often we gathered around the social hearth, to listen to our father's kind advice, and exult under the sweet smile of our affecof Christ. Those morning and evening prayers offered by a father, then by a widowed mother; when all the children were borne on the arms of a mother's faith, to the throne of grace! What lasting impressions those prayers made upon the young hearts, and how our hearts now leap for joy, that God had blessed us with Christian parents; when under this heavenly influence, we soon learned the way "our fathers trod." How attractive were then our family, all united, bound for the same HOME, "a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

I remember, too, all those fond associations which clustered around my home. With what a quick step I glided along the banks of the stream which flowed around my father's house; and on its crystal surface, how we sailcd, singing the merry song; how I climbed those romantic cliffs, with boyish pride, to let my eyes feast on nature's leveliness. My lonely haunts, my rovings through the wild woods, my oft welcome home by a mother's smile, " how sweet their memory still!" And how can I forget that mother, as she so long, even now, watches so carefully, lest her children swerve from the path of duty and holiness; how frequently she checked me lest I fall into sin; how strict, and yet how heavenly and salutary her rules. Ah! it is at home, sions are made; and where the early impressions are made; and around it, they cling and twine with the longest and fondest attachment. In this atmosphere, holy and pure, the young heart drinks in those influences which afterwards form the man, like the flower as it sips the early dew, then shows its fruits, in a rich foliage and lovely bloom. Home impressions, and a mother's influence, give tone and character to the man, and send their influence through all life. After all, the mother is the moulding wehitect of the man. Is there, then, a heart so cold, so dead, so nhuman, as never to have felt a mother's influence? Who can let her counsels go unheaded? Who can spurn her kind advice? Who can cause a tear to fall down her furrowed cheek? Ah! the very name of mother, strikes the tenderest chord of the heart, and causes it to vibrate to the sweetest melody that carth can afford; and it shall continue to fill my soul with rapture and delight, all along the rugged path of life. When tempted to swerve from the path of duty, my MOTHER'S words, counsels and reproofs, stand before me, like the Angel with a drawn sword before Balaam, a I cannot pass.

But now, where is that home, that favored spot, that happy circle, that little romantic pasture, where so frequently we sported with youthful joy? Where those rooms where loved once dwelt? Alas! we hear strange footsteps, strange voices there. Where is our beloved father, who so long and so efficiently, labored for his Master, and who to the last, stood " with a spirit unconquered," true to his faith, his principles and his God? Where is he?-Ah! the cold frosts of eternity have cut down one, and another, and yet another, and still another, of those lilies that bloomed around that social hearth. A fresh wound inflicted upon the remaining three, tells us too plainly of the cruel inroads of death. But they having died in the faith,—we weep as those having hope—a glorious hope of meeting again at the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem, "where the wicked cease from troubling and the mean are the wicked." troubling, and the weary are at rest." Where then, "O Grave, is thy victory, and where thy sting, O Death?" For thou hast transplanted our choice flowers to a fairer world on high. Part of the family, "have crossed the flood, and part are crossing now, and we are to the margin come, and soon expect to die.

"Dear Saviour, be our constant guide, Then when the word is given, Bid Jordan's narrow stream divide,

And land us safe in heaven." Where now that home? Behold from youder roof of the old white house, whose curling smoke surmounts the mist, there listen at in tervals, to "the voice of Psalms-the simple song of praise," It is the voice of an afflicted mother; cast down, yet not forsaken; afflicted, yet kissing the rod that has so often wounded her bosom. She sits at the old east window, from which may be seen that lovely home of the dead, where lie the mortal remains of her absent ones. But as a proble heir to glory, she rests in hope, and in the fond anticipation of the resurrection morn-when the grave shall give up its dead, and we all, in fond embrace, shall meet, never more to part, a redeemed family above. Let us then willingly surrender up that Old White House, let it fall down to ruins, for over its wreck, our immortal spirits shall lift their glorious forms to wing their way to that new home, sweet home, that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. There is our home; there our treasurers are, and there let our hearts be. "After a teable effort here, then beneath a brighter sun, in a richer soil," we shall te-joice together, and "sing and shout for evermore, the Star, the Star of Bethlehem."— Then we shall wander out among the green pastures, and by the silent waters of righteousness, and pluck together the twelve manner of fruits, which hang in rich clusters on the banks of the river of life, "where are joys and pleasures for evermore." Blessed hope! Glorious expectation, that is our Father's house we all shall meet again, where no farewell tear will ever be shed." There light or shade succeed no more by turns, There reigns the eternal sun, with an unclouded

There all is calm as night, yet all immortal day; And truth forever shines, and love forever burns.'

DRILLING WHEAT.

Edward Stabler, in his admirable essay on ter examining its results on some 800 or 1000 acres, besides large experience on his own land, he finds that there is not a single instance where it has not proved the most profitable first, in the saving of seed, and second-ly, in the increased product of the grain per cre. He thinks five pecks of seed drilled are equal to two bushels sown broadcast. He has known the increase, in one case, by a has known the increase, it amount careful comparison of the modes, to amount to nine bushels per acre in favor of drilling. He relates an interesting incident:—A render offered a drill for the increase in a crop of fifty acres of wheat-to be determined by sowing a few strips broadcast for comparison; but before harvest the farmer preferred paying the hundred dollars - the price of the drill with interest. On carefully ascertaining the increase he found it to be one hundred and fifty-three bushels.

Mr. Snyder, of Rhinebeck, fine white Shanghais; and Dr. Law-rence, of Catonsville, Md., valliant games, and many other gentlemen very many excellent fowls, too numerous entirely for us to mention. The above comprise the animals which have come under the special observation of the Committee, but they may be indulged in the general remark that although veterans in the study of poultry and farm stock, they have never before witnessed so fine a display as this occasion presents. We admire the liberality of Mr. Barnum in thus opening to the City of New York, and through it to the American people, in the establishment of a National Society, the opportunity of an exhibition highly creditable to all who have shared in it. It will, we hope, continue to be a truly National Exhibition, and we trust that it will be crowned with entire success, and, as a mater of course, become installed among the useul institutions of our land.

From the New York Organ. TRUE POLITENESS.

True gentility and politoness carry on their face their own recommendation. Every body is pleased when treated politely, and most young people who care anything about social intercourse would much rather be esteemed as gentlemanly or ladylike than otherwise. And the time has been, perhaps is yet when young people took a good deal of pains to make themselves acquainted with the rules of politeness, and hardly anything would bring a deeper blush to the check than to be caught in some blunder or oversight in a leaded in a dwelling of paori feet with the land of pains.

The only gross and unbearable rudenesses of people in social intercourse, that we think worthy of notice, result from the lack of kind, amiable, patient, forbearing and obliging dispositions. It is impossible to make a gentleman of anybody who is deficient in these qualities. But with these, the roughest back-woodsman glides into the attractive, delightful gentleman, whom we all admire and de-

From Arthur's Home Gazette. THE ARABS.

The generosity of the Arab race, (says Bayard Taylor, in one of his lectures,) though little known, would put to blush many a more civilized nation. The following tale, which was told by the Arabs, strikingly exemplifis this noble trait in their character. There were three Arabs, called Abdallah. Mustapha, and Hassan, more distinguished for their generosity than any others of their tribe. One day, three Arabs were disputing three, but not being able to decide, they agreed to disguise themselves as poor persons, and solicit their charity. as to which was the most generous of the

The first went to Abdallah, as he was just setting off for a journey. He told his tale of distress, when Abdullah dismounted, and gave the Arab his clothing, provisions which he had provided for the journey, and the camel, but told the Arab to be careful of the sword, as it was a present from Mahomet's son. The second went to Mustapha's tent, but he was asleep; when the servant, not liking to Mr. McCormick, we award him a premium of awake his master, and knowing Mustapha's generosity, gave the Arab four hundred pieces of gold. When Mustapha awoke, and the servant told him who had been there, he exclaimed-"Why did you not awake me? I would have given him much more." The third went to Hassan, who, being infirm and almost blind, was leaning on two slaves, and making his way to a neighboring mosque. The Arab told his tale of poverty, when Hassan said-

The relative The Arabs, when insulted, are revengefu and unrelecting in their hate; but the greatest vices of the Arabs are lying and cheating Haight for his liberality in allowing the ga- In proportion as they are successful they deem it an honor, but if detected they are punished. The Pacha of Egypt relates a story of this trait, by saying that the devil, when he came on earth, brought nine bags of lies. One he scattered in France, and then crossed over to Egypt; but as soon as he had landed, the Arabs stole the other eight.

There is an herb, used by the Arabs, more powerful and intoxicating in its effects than opium; but, while one part of the system will be under the control of this drug, the other part will be in a sound state of mind. and wonder at the absurd notions of the other. It forms a state of mind between the animal and intellectual. While Mr. Taylor was with the Arabs, he tried the effects of this drug, and thus relates his experience. He said it seemed as if he was transported to the top of a pyramid in the Nubian desert, and it was made of plugs of Virginia tobacco. He again was travelling through an arch made of rainbows, but so quick the time seemed that he thought he was fifteen years going through. On a Kentuckian, who was with him, the effect was different. He sat watching Mr. Taylor for some time, till at length he jumped np, and exclaimed:-

By Jupiter, I'm a locomotive!" and commenced pacing the room very rapidly, and moving his hands at his side like the crank of an engine. This drug causes a thirst in the throat, and the Kentuckian took up a pitcher of water, when he suddenly placed it down, saying, "I won't fill up the boiler while I'm letting off steam."

The Arabs are given greatly to exaggeration, and Mr. Taylor says that the habit got comewhat fastened to him, but he left it when he left the country. A Musselman, that had been to Alexandria, and had seen one of our ships of war, asked Mr. Taylor how many ships we had. Wishing to keep the good name of the country up, among the Arabs, he replied—

"We have one hundred line-of-battle ships et alone the smaller vessols." The Musselman turned to a companion and

WATER POWERS.

The general and successful employment of water as a motive power to propel machinery, has given to the New England States a proud preeminence in the fields of productive industry, enabling them to compete fearlessly with the long established and powerful companies of Europe, and almost rivalling them in the extent and value of their manufactures. To supply the deficiency of a naturally sterile soil in sustaining a population, the gushing rivulets have been arrested on the hill sides. and the rivers turned from their courses, to be made the obedient instruments of a restless and busy people in the strife for independent competency or honest wealth. The history of their success, is replete with lessons of practical utility, teaching us, that neither the severity of climate, the unproductiveness of soil, or the oft threatened devastations of Alpine torrents, can bar the prosperous march of energetic and persevering men. Neither is theirs the only history, that leads us to conclude that the local advantages of a place, are of less moment in determining its prosperity, than the character of the people inhabiting it. Without an enterprising population, some of the fairest portions of the globe have become but waste places, whilst the rocks and mountains under the benignant influence of industry and genius, have been made to bloom as the rose of Sharon and to reward abundantly the hand of the industrious. The possession of great natural advantages, does not necessathan a century have commanded the admiration of the civilized world, by the stern and ungielding manalution with which oboy have met and overcome natural obstacles, and developed in their best pessible form such characteristics as their country might possess. Here is the example we would have our countrymen to imitate. Our natural resources are equal to theirs. Our soil, under the enlightened revelations of chemistry, is perhaps more capable of sustaining a large population than theirs. Whilst our position, between two of the foremost cities in the union, whose population is increasing continually in an astonishing ratio, and much of whose commerce must pass over our borders, and capable of connecting by natural and when allowed to be developed, by artificial means, with all the great commercial arteries of the union and the world, is perhaps unsurpassed by that of any country on the habitable globe. And yet with these advantages, while the towns and villages of New England are alive with the active bustle and busy hum of determinate go-ahead-ativeness, most of our own villages exhibit only the quiet inactivity of declining age. One after another our water powers are left idle and the property allowed to go down to premature decay. These reflections have been awakened for the fiftieth time, by viewing a valuable water power near Cedarville now lying entirely idle and profitless. If mill streams in the middle of other States can be made to yield a handsome profit to their owners, why cannot this? The stream is capable of driving quite a powerful machinery, and is situated but about a mile from navigation. The neighborhood for pleasantness and the morality of its inhabitants is not surpasscd by any village in the State. The town is well supplied with Schools and Churches of different denominations. So that the same We have before stated our belief that but few of the water powers in this county were taxed to their full extent, we think so yet. For a 7 o'clock. long series of years one of the very best water powers in West Jersey, that at Millville, within forty miles of Philadelphia, by which it is connected with navigation has been lying almost useless until now when its develope-

Wood & Co. was blown down and the frame so broken as to be of but little value. A portion of the Mount Vernon House at Cape Island was also blown down and injured. Whilst the storm was raging at its height the new Schooner laying at the foot of Broad street, broke her moorings and swung round against a sloop lying at the steamboat wharf. It was only after much exertion that she was finally secured again.

The Flour Question. We do not profess to be familiar with the intricacies of the flour well calculated to deceive, was offered in our trade, says the Boston Journal, but judging the week, has just arrived, and brings us the town, on Thursday last. The public will do which is known to be stored at the West, and storm in that neighborhood, which has been from the immense stock of flour and wheat following sad account of the doings of the in Canada, the surplus of a crop unusually hindly forwarded to us by Hudson Burr, Esq. abundant, we venture to predict that prices will come down with the opening of navigation in the spring. The export demand in the meantime, cannot be very large so long as the very small margin of profit to the exporter. The railroads are constantly pouring in suptract for building a steamboat, to be com- plies - some eight or ten thousand barrels per week being received in this city by the Western, Fitchburg, and Boston and Maine roads, and the Portland Advertiser says:

"Flour is still pouring into Portland from Montreal. By the piles on Atlantic wharf, yard a vessel is now on the stocks approach and in the storehouses; it would seem that These and other facts which might be adduced, tend to show that there is flour enough quite a large show for one seasons business in in the country, and that the markets will be our town. The building was crowded to witness an opera performance.-Two of the galleries, mostly filled with ladies suddenly fell with an awful crash precipitating the occupants into the parquette. At the time of sending this despatch, four persons have been taken out dead, eight others are dangerously wounded, and about fifty slightly injured. The scene was terrific. The theatre was filled with the screams of the wounded and the groans of the dying.

Burlington County.-A gentleman Philadelphia, who has lately taken up his residence in the town of Columbus, Burling ton county, writes to the Germantown Tele graph, as follows:

This is a rich neighborhood—equal. I think, as an agricultural country and community, to the best part of Chester and Delaware counties. The Newbolds, who rank among the first farmers in this county, are within three or four miles of my residence. I saw forty head of the largest and handsomest fat cattle, on one of their farms, last fall, that I | who perished in the storm. ever saw in my life. Many farmers here raise from six to ten thousand pounds of pork, and and dressed weighed 377 and 342 pounds, from $100 to $500 worth of poultry. I never from the farthest one south to the farthest one saw so many capons as they have here—they hundred and one pounds. Prof. Henry, of Washington, says that it has been proved that about five tons of coal will evolve as much power during its combustion as is equal to the continued labor of an able bodied man for twenty years, at the rate of eight hours per day, or to the average pow-

The Camden and Atlantic Railroad Company are pushing their work forward at a rapid rate. They have now only about fifteen miles of track to lay, and contemplate having it finished by the 1st of May. They are about erecting a fine ferry house at the Vine street wharf and will have a new and commodious ferry boat on their route by the first of March.

This beats the Burlington county-house hogs considerably, their average being only 4468-5. There are at Mullica Hill several pigs; as their owners call them, which they intend keeping over to another season, which now weigh 800 or 900 pounds.

Large Calves .- Messrs. Sickler & Rusling sent to the Philadelphia market, on Wednesday last, three calves, the united weight of which was fifteen hundred pounds. Two of them were raised by Mr. Elisha Bassett, Jr., of Mannington, and sold to the above firm for $70. They were but five months old. The third was raised by George Hawthorne, of Friesburg, in this co. They were pronounced the best that have been in that market for a year. Beat them who can?

The Maine Legislature and the Nebraska Bill.—Senator Douglass Hung in Effigy in Boston, Feb. 28. bank. Agreed to, 11 to 8. Mr. Hoxsey moved to amend the 3d section so as to give bill holders a right of recovery from bank stockholders, without waiting to exhaust the assets of a bank or the individual responsibility of Directors.

Mr. Allen opposed this amendment, and said the object was to render the bill so strict that banks could not operate under it. In his section of the state they had found the do not contain much of interest. The British special banks to answer all their necessities.
In cities the general banks might be sufficient for business there was largely done by checks. But in the country more easy circulation was needed. He judged banks to be safer where individuals were responsible, than those based on state securities; for states may repudiate. but individuals when solvent are always liable. What, he asked, has become of the outstanding bills after the two years given free banks for liquidation? Who knows when banks are liquidating, so as to return the bills? Moreover, the securities are all deposited with the State Treasurer, giving him the opportu- Queen, were the same as those sent to other nity, if dishonest, of absconding with them. He reviewed the history of free banking in this state showing how few were legitimately employed, and what opportunities were offered for financial speculations.

Hr. Hoxsey stated the object of his smendment to be that bill holders might not be obliged to wait for years, while receivers were settling the affairs of a bank, for they would sell their bills at a loss. He defended the general banking system, and said, if the Wild party very anxious. Nothing had transpired Cat Banks had done no good, they had done too harm, but had paid a tax to the school fund. The people can't lose a dollar by the free banks, but within the last three years, of gout was also suspected. three special banks had failed. State securities were secured by the right to tax the property of the people for their redemption, but individual responsibility in times of depression was likely to be worthless, and might be fraudulently avoided.

The amendment was adopted, 11 to 6.—
The bill was then postponed for the present on motion of Mr. Allen. Mr. Burk, to charter Woodbury and Swedesboro' Railroad. HOUSE.

Petitions, &c .- By Mr. Hardenburg, from oystermen and other citizens of Hudson, in favor of Jersey shore Improvement Company. Mr. Havens, in favor of Air-line Railroad but as they could not get that, they wished it presented in favor of the Raritan and Delaware Bay Railroad.

Mr. Lafetra called up his resolution relative to an article in the N. Y. Tribune, offered yesterday. Whereas, A certain print, known as the

New York Tribune, has been laid on the desk of the members of this House, containing certain marked articles of a lib llions and defrauditory character, and imputing to them, in their legislative capacity, motives of a corrupt and servile nature; therefore,

Be it Resolved, That we view the r cent article as a want mattack, and insult up on the intelligence of this Rouse, and our citizens iff general, and that we hurl back with indig nant pride and utter contempt, to ruthless presumptions and ungrounded attack, as the railings of a disordered brain, and beneath the dignity of an intelligent journalist.

Mr. Clawson moved to lay the resolution on the table. Lost—14 to 35. Mr. Holmes said as some of the members think they may fall short of wrapping paper, he would withdraw his amendment to prohibit the door-keeper from harboring or distributing any more copies of that paper in this

Mr. Hancox insisted upon having the offensive article read, as he had not seen it and wanted to know what it was.

The speaker said the paper was not officially before the House. Mr. Hancox had never dodged a vote, but under the circumstances he would ask to be excused. Mr. Rafferty wanted every one to face ulation of 5,000. Now it has over 60,000! the music-that gentlemen had had time to
