From Gleason's Pictorial. THE PASSIONS. BY T. D. WILKINS.

When youth his fragile sail outspread, And launched his boat on life's bright tide, First Hope his tiny vessel led, And Love was constant at his side; They filled with joy each passing day,

While Time flew happily away. He tarried at the fairy isles That lie enshrined on ocean's breast,

Where glowing heaven ever smiles, And Nature sleeps in quiet rest; Where all around is bright and fair, And peace is reigning everywhere. The youth becomes a man, and then Ambition brings before his eyes

His glowing scroll, with golden pen, Engraven on the shining skies; He shows him where his humble name Shall shine upon the roll of fame. He led him on the tossing sea,

Where clouds arose in volumes dark, And angry storms tempestuously Bore on his swiftly-hasting bark; He saw Ambition's gulding star.

He saw bright chests of gathered gold Before his dreaming vision rise, And lands of countless wealth untold Seemed e'er appearing to his eyes. Fame, riches,—beauties' smiling charms,
Were almost falling in his arms

But ah! his hopes were blown away By every gust of Fortune's blast, And sinking 'neath the tempest's sway, His wrecked and shattered bark was east Upon a dreary shore alone, Where all his once bright joys were gone.

Then in his night of woe and pain, When all his pleasures fled away, Love came to cheer his heart again. And Hope to change his night to day; They soothed his spirit worn with strife, And gave unto the wanderer life.

THE DUTY OF PARENTS. From The German.

As well-bred children are the most worthy ornaments and the greatest joy of their parents, (for neither honors nor delights of any other kind can equal the satisfaction given by a virtuous offspring,) thus there is nothing more becoming to the father of a family than the endeavor to bring them up carefully in the fear of the Lord, and in the practice of all social virtues For the father ought to be at the same time the religious instructor and the tutor of his children; it is his duty to teach them in their youth what to practice when grown up. Besides, he must do his best to make them useful members of, and not troublesome burthens to the State-not to feed a nest of idle hornets, but rather to breed industrious bees. And to this end he must enable them, either by learning or by the useful arts, or by some respectable trade to support themselves and their families in course of time, and to promote the welfare of the commonwealth, and to stand in no man's way. Neither must he say unto himself, I have wealth enough, so that my offspring need neither to exert their brains nor their hands for their support, but may live in idleness. For besides their being nothing more pernicious to maukind in general, and to youth in particular, than vanity and sloth, your treasures, O ye fathers; are but uncertain poswill be more to their advantage to inherit im-perishable than transient blessings. From the N. J. Life Boat. ORDER vs. HURRY.

"Order is Heaven's first law." "Why do you not pay greater attention, Madam, to quietness and order in your school?"

"Because I have not time, sir. I appreciate the importance of order, but my number of schoolars is so great, and there is so much directs. for me to do that I have scarcely time to think of it. From morning till night I am in a continual hurry"

Alas! this hur y. We recollect having read among the maxims of an eminent English divine, Bishop Middleton we think, this rule: Never be in a hurry. We saw it in our youthful days, and at the time scarcely appreciated its importance; but years spent in the school-room, have taught us that the very poorest way to make progress there, is to allow oneself to fret and get in a hurry. We are in favor of vigorous labor, of carnest unceasing effort, of promptness and despatch; but not in favor of that precipitation which occasions disorder and confusion, that overwhelming pressure which is usually understood by the word hurry. "It is necessary," says an anonymous writer, "somtimes to be in haste, but never in a hurry." Experience long since taught the Ancients the evils of precipitation, and accordingly this important maxim was current among them: "Make haste slowly."

One who is in a hurry is not master of himself; he cannot drive his business, but suffers that to drive him; how can be, then, expect to control others. A teacher of this description does not govern his school, his school overns him. Hurry is actually unfavorable to dispatch.

Have you never noticed a congregation who appeared in a hurry to leave a church at the close of the services? How they crowd and hinder each other. A little less impatience, a little more regard to order, would enable them to make their exit in half the time. It is so in the school-room. The more a teacher has to do the more he needs to keep calm. quiet and sel'-possessed, and to maintain the strictest regularity and stilless in his school. in order that he may save time, and accomplish a great deal in a little while. Hurried instruction is always very imperfeet. Let the teacher never feel that just so much must be read or considered in a given time, without reference to the manner. The motto of the school-room should be: "Not how much, but how well." One paragraph clearly and distinctly read and fully comprehended, is worth more than a whole chapter slurred carelessly over with vague notions of its signification. We have seen classes reading at a gallop, when the teacher allowed many and grave errors to pass uncorrected, because he seemed to prosecutors of the pleas, except in counties think he had not time to stop and point them out, or to direct attention to the subject treated. It would be well for such frequently to read and ponder the language of the Apostle Paul: "I had rather speak five words with in an unknown tongue."

The manner of the teacher will be copied by his pupils; if he, therefore, allow himsef to become prevish and fretful, if he loses his and precipitately, he not only loses the respect of his pupils, and the control which he should ever exert over them, but also fails to train them to those habits of self-government which it is in his power to impress upon their

We therefore, urge the teacher by every consideration, by his wish to do the greatest amount of good, by his duty to do his charge and his duty to himself, to keep calm and never get in a hurry.

NOT ONE WOMAN FOR RUM.

The immum price in quantity, when added that I lingered, and we had quite a pleasant chat. Afterwards, when collecting the tickets, she detained me again an instant, and gave me some fine peaches, which she said came from her friend's orchard, in the country; and I began to think that I had not met try; and I began to think that I had not met such a charming passenger for many a day. Well, we arrived at the depot—there I attended her to a carriage, handed her up the carpet bag; and after all, what do you think she said?"

Now, we thought, of course, that the lady would say very politely, "thank you sir," smile like a gleam of sunshine, the carriage roll off, our friend John would bow an adieu, and with a sigh, turn away and forget the matter. So we stated that as our supposition.
"No," said John "she did no such thing; but just as her foot was on the step, she turned, and with a sort of a look I can't describe, observed:

"You must consider this, sir, merely a car acquaintance. You must not expect to be recognized if we chance to meet anywhere else." and John drew a long breath.

"What did you say?" we asked.
"Why, I thought that rather uncivil, at least, so I replied very quickly— "Certainly not madam. I was just going to remark that you must not feel slighted it you are unnoticed by me anywhere but on the cars-for, really, we conductors have to be careful about our acquaintance?"

"And the lady?" said we. "She looked quite silly as she drove off," replied John.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS.

"Leave no room for the weeds." "How beautiful is your little garden! it is so very full of lovely flowers,' said Mrs. Goodley to a friend.

'Yes,' replied Mrs Thoughtful; 'my husband leaves no room for the weeds. That is a good idea thought Mrs Goodley as she separated from her friend. Mothers, here is a hint for you. Your children's hearts may be compared to a garden; if not tended carefully, and filled with good seed, the weeds will spring up; therefore, take care that you drop in such seeds as you will like to see blooming in your homegarden in days and years to come—such as shall not only excite the commendation of passers-by, but such as send forth a fragrance to cheer all who come within the circle of its influence. Drop in the seed of the sunflower, that there may spring up a truthfulness which shall make your child's word as good as his oath. Let fall the seed of the lily, the vine, the honeysuckle, the mignonnette, and the rose, that in after years you may find the flowers of purity, fruitfulness, love, unaffected sweetness, and thankfulness. The care of Mr. Thoughtful's garden was often markedhow he tied up hanging branches, and water-ed the drooping plants. Mothers, you must not only sow the good seed, but you must tend your garden carefully, marking the weak part of your child's character, and support it by a caution or a word of encouragement. You must water it by your prayers, and let the sunshine of your bright smile and exam-ple fall upon it; fill it full of good seed. Leave no room for the weeds.

It may be well to state that the sunflower is the emblem of truthfulness; the lily of purity; the vine, of fruitfulness; the honevsuckle of affection; the mignonnette of unaffected sweetness; and the rose, of thankfulness:

CIRCULATION 1300

Only $1 00 per Year!

FRANKLIN FERGUSON, EDITORS. JOSEPH A. MILLER.

Notice to Agents and Advertisors.

WE ARE PREPARED TO SHOW THAT The West Jersey Pioneer Has a Circulation of at least 300 more than any other paper printed in Cumberland County. Its Circulation, (in the County,) is nearly double that of any other paper.

This notice is called for in self-defence. The BRIDGETON CHRONICLE" falsely conveying the Impression, that its Circulation is larger than that of the PIONEER.

RAPE SEED. Notwithstanding the present high and remunerating prices of all kinds of agricultural produce, we are glad to be able to call the attention of farmers to another profitable ar ticle of farm produce about being introduced. This article, Rape Seed, has been very successfully cultivated in places where land is much more valuable than here. If with a greater investment of capital for land, it is found a profitable crop, we might safely infer it could be advantageously introduced here. Fortunately we are not left to speculation in the matter. One or two crops have been already raised in the county, upon only second rate land and found to yield an excellent and profitable return. At the present high prices of grain there may be but little inducement to embark in untried experiments. At the same time it should be borne in mind that it must necessarily take some time to introduce to much extent a new Lranch of production. The cautious naturally hesitate and wait till somebody else begins and gives the result of their experience. We do not assume that this article would produce immediate and extraordinary profits, but that it would form a steady and permanent article of culture, probably causing the establishment of new branches of domestic industry, and thereby increasing the quantity of home consumers and thereby increasing the of E. Davis & Son, the following officers were value of other agricultural products. Mr. Christian Myers, living near the head of Greenwich has introduced the seed in this county, and has authorized us to say that he will furnish seed and give directions for raising it, to all those wishing information on the subject. As some may not know what the seed is used for, we will state that it can be manufactured into an excellent oil for machinery and other purposes. Oil manufactured from seed raised by Mr. Myers the past season, has been tried at the Cumberland Nail Works and given entire satisfaction. This oil possesses a superiority over other oils for machinery in its not clogging up the wheels by gumming, which is so frequent a cause of complaint with other kinds of oil now in use. This fact furnishes an assurance of a steady demand for it for that purpose, as the use of machinery for agricultural and other purposes is increasing annually in a great ratio. The cake left after the oil is extracted from the seed, furnishes an excellent and profitable food for stock when fed rightly. Mr. Myers has purchased a small water power and designs erecting a mill for manufacturing | cd. On motion $2,000 was ordered to be the oil, if sufficient encouragement is given that seed enough will be raised to warrant the undertaking. From the evidence before us we are satisfied the farmers would find it much to their interest, to engage in this new branch of business. By raising a variety of crops the land is not so impoverished as by running upon a single product. Besides this, the more varied the products of the farm the less the liability of the producer to meet with a loss from bad crops or a low price. It is very rare indeed that our seasons are such that they do not suit some one or more of our usual variety of crops, or that the price for all of them is so low as not to pay the producer a reasonable profit on a part. We hope the enterprising agriculturists of the county will give the seed a fair trial, and find it sufficiently profitable to cause a new branch of domestic industry to spring up and employ the natural privileges afforded by the waste water powers in the County. That the oil manufactured from it, is really a valuable article of daily use we have we hope demonstrated by

As an evidence of strength existing in the Company, they would call attention to the fact that, if an assessment were made of but five per ct. upon the premium notes, an amount which would scarce ly be noticed by any one paying it, the funds of the Company would at once be raised to $24,000. nd in fact a General Assortment of City Ware, which he will sell at City Prices. Proceeded to Election of Directors, when the following named persons were chosen:-Benjamin Sheppard, Greenwich; Jacob Harris, Loadstown; Dr. Jacob W. Ludlam, Deerfield; Daniel L. At a meeting of Directors, held after election

HENRY B. LUPTON, Secretary.

Executive Committee.—David P. Elmer, Isaac A. Sheppard, Jonathan Elmer, Lewis McBride.

The subject of renewal of Policies, which now are about to expire, was taken up, and it was deemed not advisable that any part of the present fund should be divided in such renewals. It was esolved, that inasmuch as those who were first insured, had incurred greater hazard than was found after the second or third year, and as a rate of premium was charged upon the first issued polipies, less than was found expedient afterward, that such new applications that might be made and new policies issued upon property heretofore in-sured, the risk to the property being the same, should be charged at the rates originally taken. and as almost every policy would at the end of the ten years, be found to have changed its form, or applicant might desire to make additions to or alterations in his insurance, it was thought best for all parties, that each policy should at its expiration be entirely closed. And as each new one issued would be free from assessment for one year from its date, and a fund already on hand would probably prevent resort to assessment for years. They believe such a course best calculated to strengthen the Company and equitably dispose of the funds to all concerned.

The Insurance to the first members has cost but bout five cents per annum on the $100 insured on all common kinds of property.

SEWING MACHINES. Sewing, like weaving and knitting, seems destined soon to pass from the list of remunerative household employments. Machinery is coming in here, with its immense advantage of rapid execution, and, in spite of prophecy to the contrary, must soon supersede the "nimble fingers," that will seem nimble no longer when compared with revolving wheels. The improved sewing machine of Wheeler, Wilson & Co., is described as performing the finest quality of stitching, such as on collars and shirt-bosoms. A girl can stitch with one machine, thirty-five dozens of shirt collars in a day. There are fifteen hundred of them now in operation in various parts of the country. They can sew straight and curved seams, the stitches do not rip out, and over one thousand stitches, it is affirmed, can be taken in a minute, by a good operator. This last statement seems rather liberal.

BOOKS & STATIONERY FOR CASH ONLY. The amount of goods in our line purchased by country merchants is usually quite small compared with their dry goods, hardware, and other bills; and this very circumstance absolutely compels jobbers in the book Susiness, who sell on time, to get larger profits in order to make up for the losses and extra expenses necessarily involved in a credit business of small amounts. It is also casy for the merchant to make arrangements to buy his book bill for eash; though it might not be so convenient for him to purchase his larger bills in this way.

These considerations have led us to adopt in our business, from this date, January, 1854, the following principles, viz: SMALL PROPITS, UNVARYING PRICES, AND TERMS ALWAYS CASH.

Being ourselves the sole publishers of of a number of the leading and most extensively-selling
