From the New Jersey Standard PERSONAL INFLUENCE.

BY A HAMILTONIAN.

Personal influence may be said to be the mighty lever upon which hangs the destiny of society, and the well-being of mankind. Every intelligent being possesses a certain amount of influence. Every man who lives and moves in society, and holds intercouse with his fellow man, is destined to exert an inflence either for good or evil, which will live long after he shall have passed away from the shores of time.

The history of influence in its bearings upon the world, may be learned from the pages of the past and the observations of the present. And from these sources we may rightly groves and by the still waters and green pasjudge of its results in the future.

We cannot measure in height, nor depth, length nor breadth successfully, without paying particular attention to its powerful working upon the human mind. And to gain some idea of its controlling power over human nature, it may be well to commence the lesson at the early stage of life.

The influence exceeds upon children by fathers and mothers, and the examples which they set before them as a standard by which they are to be guided, will follow those children tong after life has left them.

We find that the child and the papil are led to imbibe the principles of, those, who daily instruct them, and to whom they look as their

We might also inquire of the profane swear er how it happened that he was thus led into the wicked practice of taking the name of his Creator in vain; and when, where, and how he acquired this habit; and he will inform us that he was influenced by those with whom he associated in former life, to engage in this angodly practice.

And so, on the other hand, we see that nen are actuated to practice deeds of virtue and morality from the effects of a good influence. It is this power which we exert upon our neighbors, and our neighbors upon us, that leads each to partake of the principle of the other.

Without our personal influence, we should e devoid of that sceret controlling power by which we are enabled to move the minds of those with whom we associate in life. Personal influence! Where does it commence, and where does it end?

It begins with the earliest dawn of life, and ends not till lost in the night of death. For bousands have long since gone to their graves whose influence will continue to be felt in ages yet to come. It may be compared in its novements upon the mind, to the little rivuet that gushes forth from the flinty rock, the river, and thence to the broad ocean .-For, as the pebble thrown into the silvery stream, will cause the ripple to flow on until t has reached the shore, so will influence continue to flow on and widen in its course until it has reached the ends of our habitable globe, producing results like the source from whence they came either good or evil.

Influence is not like passion—quick and on, entwining its chords around the will of man, until his powers are irresistibly made subservient to its control. Its progress is onward; and amid the wreck and fall of thrones and empires, its strong and deep-rooted hold upon the human mind, remains firm and unshaken. Its operations are observable in the world at large; and in all our personal intercourse with our fellow men.

So warned, we must listen to the voice of inticipate its movements in the future.

From the past and the present, we learn that its tendency is either to elevate or lower the standard of morality and religion. In that community in which a salutary personal influence is exerted, we find that this standard is elevated. It will have its way and produce its effects, in spite of opposition. As well might we attempt to chain down to quietude the rolling surges that break and dash upon the shores of the broad Atlantic, as to attempt to stay the controlling power of personal influence. Then if its operations are so great as to control communities, nations, and the world, with such an overwhelming sway, how important that it should be of the right charneter. Then, though its extent lies beyond the reach of imagination, yet its results instead of demoralizing the world, will be the elevation of society, and the happiness of man-

Personal influence is exerted in our actions ooks, and conversation. Actions are the results of thought and feeling.

Therefore we can readily see the necessity of feeling right, acting right, and of having right motives in view in order to exert a good

We feel the effects of influence most sensibly in those circles of friendship in which our hearts are united most strongly to those with whom we continually associate.

Then in view of the position which each ccupies with reference to his fellow men and to God, how great and imperative is the duty of each to exert a good personal influence, remembering that we will be called upon to give an account for all our responsibilities.

NEW MAN AT THE WHEEL.

Last week, as the steamer Lady Elgin was making her way up the lake with a large load of freight and passengers among which was a collection of animals for exhibition, the wheelsman suddenly found difficulty in changing the boat's course. For tug and pull and bear on as much as he would, the wheel would not budge an inch.

"Port helm," cried the captain.

"Aye, aye, sir," was the response. But still the helm was hard a starboard and the boat was taking a turn in the middle of the lake. The captain swore, and the mate made for the wheel-house. Pushing the man aside, he took hold himself. It was of no use—the mate was no more successful than the wheelsman.

"Port helm, for God's sake. Can't you see where the boat's going?" shouted the cap-

The mate declared that something was the matter with the wheel as it could not stir. The thing was perfectly inexplicable. The engine was stopped, and master, mate and all hands went below to see what could be the matter. After a search of some minutes, it was discovered that Mr. Siam, the elephant of the managerie, not liking the noisy rattle of chains overhead, had taken upon himself the responsibility of giving a new turn to affairs. With his trunk wound round the chain, he was holding on with the grasp of a vice, and it was with some difficulty that the keep or persuaded him that such liberties would not be allowed. It is said that he behaved quite well during the rest of the voyage.

FRANKLIN FERGUSON, EDITOR. Notice to Agents and Advertisers.

WE ARE PREPARED TO SHOW THAT The West Acreey Pioneer Has a Circulation of at least 300 more than any other paper printed in Cumberland County. Its Circulation, (in the County,) is nearly double that of any other paper.

This notice is called for in self-defence. The "BRIDGETON CHRONICLE" falsely conveying the impression, that its Circulation is larger than that of the PIONEUR.

CONGRESS.

It is quite probable that to some of our readers the announcement that the Congress of the United States, that body which in time past we have been taught to look to as of vital importance, is now in session in the city of safely relied upon; for if the sacredness of Washington and has been since the first monday of December of last year, will be news.

That the representatives of a great nation, at a time in the worlds history when great events are occurring, a nation too, which is spreading itself with unexampled rapidity over a vast continent, is absorbing the excess population of all the nations of the earth, and is claiming the right to speak authoratively on the important transactions of the world, should remain in session for six months and do so little to attract the attention of a people whose pride it is, that they are the sovereigns, and that they control the affairs of the nation, should really be forgotten by any portion of the people is a source of wonder and should be the cause of serious reflection. If we may conclude that the organization of our government is so perfect, that the doings of our representatives is unimportant, and that their annual coming together is only necessary to carry on the forms requisite to be observed in its operations, that its safeguards are so well secured, its permanence so well provided for, that the irregularities and senseless proceedings of weak and trifling agents may safely be tolerated without danger of deranging its action or impairing its efficiency, then we may look upon the proceedings of such a congress with complacency, and allow them to strut and bluster, waste their time and pocket their share of the public income without serious apprehension; happily for us this to a great extent is true, so well organized is our government, so strongly are its foundations fixed upon correct principles, and more than all, so necessary does its successful existence, and efficient action seem towards carrying forward the great mission of spreading the influence of religious, moral, and political liberty, that we have a reasonable assurance, that, spite of the madness and folly of the little mischievous demagogues worse than waste the influence of their posi-

But they have done more than this. they have passed, by the active influence of the President and the departments, and the influence of the power and patronage of office, a bill for the establishment of territorial government in the wild and uninhabited districts of Nebraska and Kansas territories, without either native born or naturalized citizens enough to furnish officers for carrying on the government, in consequence of which, or by way of pandering to or courting the foreign foreigners eligible to office without having been even in appearance subjected to the cusbeen set apart for the poor persecuted Indian Agent for Bridgeton. and which he had been taught to believe,

Why the introduction at this time, and the nighty efforts of government to pass at this time the Nebraska bill which would seem to have in itself so little to commend it to favorable notice? Surely there was no urgent call in the circumstances of the Territories themselves, and no special suffering of the almost imaginary population which warranted the zeal and warmth, the legislative maneuvering and intrigue, the executive influence of dragooning and threatening on the one hand, and flattery and official patronage on the other, which has so disgraced the departments of our governments.

We could hardly have believed that the South would have been so inconsiderate, so blinded to their own best interests, as to have been led into the support of this measure, we did not suppose that the bait was sufficiently gilded to have made them swallow it, but we were mistaken; we were well aware, that there were fanatics not only in the North, but in the South, who like Nero, who fiddled while his great city was being consumed, would glory in the disruption of the Union, and would gloat over the destruction which their wicked baseness had produced, but we did suppose that the well meaning and patriotic portion of our Southern Brethren, assured of the good faith with which the great mass of Northern men had accepted of the compromise of 1850. and their determination to earry out its conditions, would be satisfied with its conces sions, and honestly support and be satisfied with its provisions; they have however, grasp ed at the prospect of more and put to hazard that which they had obtained and might have

We are not amongst the croakers who are constantly prophecying evil, or those who love to dwell upon the dark side of every picture; who shut their eyes to the bright rays of hope and prosperity, and only enjoy the gloomy foreshadowings of despondency and despair; but we should seriously fear some dreadful and impending evil to our happy and highly favored country, if we did not confidently believe that the Great Ruler of the age price for him at three or four years old Universe, who has so strangely and wonder- was not more than fifty dollars, what must be fully brought this nation into existence, pre- the profit derived from that nource, when a pared it for usefulness, prospered it in all its good young horse will readily command from growth, made it the grand instrument of car- one to two hundred dollars. The increase in rying forward His grand designs in christianizing, civilizing and enlightning the world, has yet more work to accomplish through our instrumentality, and that as He makes the wrath of man to praise Him, so Ho will yet ply the demands for horses and cattle. We turn these clements of mischief and trouble, to the promotion of His own glory and the true interests of our country.

Riots in Boston.

The fruits of the Nebraska bill are showing themselves in Boston. The feelings of confidence which the moderate portion of the community, even in Massachusetts have felt, that the compromise of '50 had settled the slavery question, and that no farther co sion would be asked by the south, had secured the successful enforcement of the facitive slave law even in Boston, where the moral force of public opinion against slavery was so strongly developed; but the strangely impolitic and inconsistent course of Congress, in passing the Nebraska bill in such a way as virtually to repeal the compromises; and again furnish a fruitful subject of agitation to an easily excited public, has removed the rewho get into power and place, and waste, and straints, which a sense of the sacredness of cured to the peaceful enforcement of an obtions, cur government must and will go on to accomplish the end for which it was institut. THE SALEM STANDARD.

Our neighbor complains so bitterly of the hard usage he is receiving from his follow Editors, that we are disposed to have pity upon him and leave him to himself. Wo must however, correct one or two mistakes he lias fullen into, and first, of the late Mr. Newell. How the Standard came to suppose we alluded to Mr. Newell in our last article, we are at a loss to conceive. The character spoken of was so entirely different from his, that we find it difficult to get clear of the impression, that our neighbor knew the allusion was not to him, and only professed to so understand us, for the purpose of exciting a feeling unfavorable to us. Mr. Newell, was not famous for the number or length of his editorials, and never wrote without saying something which would tell. His articles were usually spicy and full of matter, either good or evil. We certainly had not the most distant allusion to him, and trust our neighbor will do us the justice to correct the erroncous impression he has produced.

The second error is about our subscribers. We repeat that we have not to this time had out eleven names withdrawn from our list, or otice of their intention to withdraw; and repeat that we have received no such letter as the one he refers to. The only one received was from the Post Master at Greenwich, containing a list of eleven. Either his informant or himself have ____ made a mistake.

So well satisfied, are the Patrons of the Pioneer, with its general merit and cheapness, that we have not erased fifty names from our subscription list within the last three years, from any cause. We are sorry to see the small game, played by certain Editors, jealous of the success of the Pioneer, wilfully publishformer compromises are to be disregarded by ing falschoods, from week to week as regards our patronage, &c.

We of South Jersey are becoming a highly prosperous people: The evidence of this fact are, the subdivision of hitherto unwieldy farms and the construction upon them of large and commodious buildings, the free use of fertilizing materials of all kinds, and the improvement of our roads. It is amusing sometimes to see what an air of astonishment a Philadelphia cockney is made to assume when he visits our town. Bridgeton. May 13, 1854.

Bridgeton, May 13, 1854,

We published on Saturday morning the fact that a public meeting had been called in Boston, for the preceding evening, to take some measures in reference to the arrest of a man named Burns, claimed by a Col, Suttle of Virginia, as a fugitive slave. At the appointed hour a large number assembled at Faneuil Hall, who were addressed by Wendell Phillips, Theodore Parker and others .-While the meeting was in progress, word was brought that a large number of negroes had collected about the Court House and intended to rescue the fugitive. The meeting adjourned and most of the people in attendance made their way to the Court House. The mob at this time had reached several thousand, when a desperate assault was made upon the building, a huge piece of timber serving the purpose of a battering ram in demolishing the door. Stones and other missiles were freely used, and pistol shots fired. But just as the storming party were on the point of forcing an entrance into the Court House, a body of police rushed upon them, captured about a dozen of the most active ringleaders, and finally succeeded in dispersing the mob and restoring order for a time, but the riot soon broke out again. The latest intelligence received by us will be found under the telegraphic head .- State Gazette.

Boston, May 27. There is a great excitement in this city, growing out of the fugitive slave case. The examination commenced on Thursday, was resumed this morning before a crowded at least 3,000 persons congregated.

Mayor Smith addressed them, after which the riot act was ordered to be read. The examination of Burns has been postponed until Monday morning.

The funeral of Deputy Sheriff Batchelder will take place to-morrow from his late residence at Charlestown. Much sympathy is expressed for his fate.

> Later Intelligence. Boston, May 27-11 P. M.

A crowd of from 500 to 800 persons have remained about the Court House all the afternoon. The Cadets and Boston Light Infantry are on guard at Court square, and two companies of United States troops are quartered in the Court House.

About four o'clock a muscular negro was seized on the Court House steps for carrying We notice that already concealed weapons. He knocked the officer down, drew a bowie knife, and it required six policemen to disarm and convey him to the station house.

In the police court to-day the following persons were arraigned as accessories to the murder of James Batchelder in the riot last night:-A. J. Brown, John J. Roberts, colored; Walker Phousix, colored; John Westerly, colored; Walter Bishop, colored; Thomas Jackson, colored; Henry Abel, colored; Henry Rowe, Martin Stowell and John Thompson; John C. Cluer, a Scotchman was subsequently arrested, and all were committed without bail.

The preliminary examination will take place on Tuesday next. The Coroner's inquest on the body of Batchelder has been adjourned to Monday.

Col. Suttle, the claimant of Burns, has offered to sell him for $1,200. A subscription paper to that amount is almost made up. There are about 2,500 persons in front of the Court House, mostly idlers. The Rev. Theodore Parker and Wendell Phillips have applied to the police for a force to protect their residences, being fearful of a rumored attack by the Irish, who have during the day, threatened to avenge the death of Batchelder. No demonstration has yet been made.

The on Wednesday, at the Cunard Docks in Jerofficers prevented a rush into the Court House, but the mob outside is very large, and at times quite turbulent. The testimony in identifying the prisoner is positive.

A large number of persons have arrived here during the day from adjacent towns, some of them coming in clubs. It is thought that if the prisoner is remanded into slavery, a bloody and sanginary riot will ensue.

The military force under arms to-day is very strong. The U.S. Wershal will vindicate the supremacy of the laws at all bazards. Boston, May 30, 2 P. M.

There is a continuance of the recent excitement in regard to the alleged fugitive slave, Burns, but it is evidently subsiding. The examination before Commissioner Lo-ting was resumed this morning in the U.S. Court room, which was crowded as soon as the doors were open. There was a strong police and military force present, and no disorder occurred ofther within or without the building. Mr. Ellis, one of the counsel for the pristhe defence. At its close he said he could rissued on any vessel engaged fifthe foreign bring a witness who would be able to prove that Burns, the alleged fightive slave, was here previous to the time? here previous to the time when it is averred that he escaped from Virginia. The speech of Mr. Ellis occupied the whole morning, and when he had finished, the Court, at a quarter of two o'clock; adjourned,

There was all the morning, and still is, a large crowd around the building.
The case of the eleven persons who were arrested for the murder of Batchelder, has been postponed till Friday.

Our Summer Resorts.—On Thursday all the Summer resorts at the North will be opened, and our fushionable people will be closing up their large and commodious edifices for the purpose of being mewed up in an eight by ten room at a watering place. It has too, for New Yorkers and Newarkers, this advantage, that now, by the completion of the Morris & Essex Railroad to Hackettstown, our business men can leave their families at the Mountain and return in the evening to enjoy the real pleasure of its glorious air. There are many pleasures connected with our rambles in that vicinity, and a more delicious retreat can scarcely be imagined.

And when one is wearied with the beauty of the Mountain, there is the Delaware Water Gap, that greatest curiosity of the continent within a pleasant morning's ride. And there in contemplation of that mighty wonder, there is enjoyment of the highest and loftiest character. We have sailed on a moonlight

We advise our readers to instantly engage rooms at Growell's, which we should do ourselves, but for the fact of the world never allows us to collect it in sufficient quantities to make any more than a flying visit to our summer resorts.

Farmers are cautioned against being deceived by the boasts made of the London Exhibi-tion Medal. With regard to the premature award of that Medal the facts are these: The Medal was awarded to McCormick without fair competition, his machine was managed by an experienced hand, sent from America, while mine was without any one to manage it except common laborers time and labor necessary to their successful perpicked up in London in my absence; laborers who knew nothing of its operation. My machine was wrongly adjusted for the work, and used in a most blundering manner, every man in the field were total strangers to it. It was on such a one-sided and partial trial that the Medal was disposed of. It must be clear to every reflecting mind, that no air trial could be made under such circumstances. On my arrival in England both machines were put into the hands of the Cleveland Agricultural Society, in consequence of a challenge given by McCormick's party and accepted by me, that the two machines might be deliberately proved by the Farmers of England, instead of an Exhibition Jury, who had too much on their hands to allow them to make such an important trial in a proper man-The Cleveland Agricultural Society, of which the Earl of Zeiland is President appointed a jury of twelve of the first farmers of the country, whose award was most decidedly in favor of my Machine; and no decision was ever more heartily concured in by the whole community. This is well known all over England and the Continent, and is con-firmed by all Americans returning to this country, informed of the facts.

My great victory in England is fully sustained by the testimonials of practical farmers in this country, who have had long experience with both Machines. OBED HUSSEY, Bridgeton, April 1, 1854. Baltimore, Md.
