From the American Banner. "COMFORT MY MOTHER".

The midnight previous to the interment of Ma-RION and KATE CAPEWELL, their angelic forms in visionary beauty, encircled in light and surrounded by angels, hovered o'er the slumbers of the officiating clergyman; and, in clear and impressive tones charged him-" Comfort my Mother." who, though months have passed away, the deeply stricken heart still bleeds; and hence these lines are affectionately and respectfully tendered: -

Oh! thou sad, and heavy-hearted. Mourn no longer-weep no moore; Though thy loved ones are departed, They are only gone before.

Gone before, in Jesus' brightness-Sorrows past, and anguish o'er; They with angel-hosts in lightness, Christ in mingling strains adore.

They range around the hills of glory, Towering cliffs, and valleys low; Where living streams refresh the holy, And angel-food forever gr

Where the Christ like myriad's gliding, There is, nounced neart may rest Where thine angel-girls abiding, With the ransomed and the blest.

Then stay thy tears-thy grief repress, Nor. Rachel-like, thy loss deplore; 'Tis Jesus speaks-" I'll give thee rest,

With them, on Canaan's peaceful shore." Oh! how oft in silent midnight, Has my soul with transport seen Angels down the stream of Sox-light,

Bear thy Kate 'neath Marion's wing. Hovering o'er, enshrined in glory, Marion's voice, distinct and clear Give the charge-serve and holy-" My mother! A, my mother cheer."

From to Baltimore County Advocate. I'LL THINK OF THEE! (TO A FRIEND)-BY RODOLPHUS.

Indistant lands, though fate may cast My ever-varying, changeful lot; From dearest friends though I have passed, To wilderness shade or desert spot; And dreary nature far around. In mournful numbers loud resounds; And every aged forest tree Gives back the sound-I'll think of thee. When Phœbus mounts the orient sky,

And joys reflect from flowers and tree: Or noon-day's heat on mountains high, The watchful shepherd hies to flee: Or ev'ning decks the western world, High o'er the Earth its tints unfurled, With gold and orange mingled free, And nature smiles-I'll think of thee.

When Cynthia wakes her pensive trail,

And mutely mourning to the earth; Or starry spheres take up the tale, To tell the story of their birth; Or ebon night breaks on our view, With panoply of sable hue-From pole to pole both lawn and lea, Are hung in black-I'll think of thee. When op'ning spring puts forth a bud,

And flow'rets early 'gin to spring; Or summer's beauties like a flood, Spread o'er the Earth, and music's ring Is herd in ev'ry tree and grove; Or autumn's hours luxurious move; Till winter comes with despot's plea, And ends the scene-I'll think of thee. ROCK GLEN, 1854.

An intermission of an hour, or an hour and a half, occured between the morning and af-ternoon services. For the comfort of those who came from a distance to attend worship, small houses were built, called "Subba-day houses," for such to assemble in as lived too far to return home at noon. These houses generally consisted of two rooms, ten or twelv feet square, with a chimney in the centre between them, and a fire-place in each room. —
They were generally built at the expense of two or more families. On the morning of house, built a fire, deposited his luncheon, warmed himself and family, and at the time of worship they were all ready to sally forth, and to shiver in the cold during the morning services at the house of prayer. At noon the family returned to the Sabbaday house, where a warm room received them. The luncheon was brought out and caten, and each in turn drank at the bottle. A blessing was invoked, and thanks returned at this repast. The head of the family took notes during the morning discourse, which were read after the noon meal. This morning sermon was discussed, as all present of the family enjoyed the utmost freedom in their remarks. Some one present prayed, and the family returned to the sanctuary.

In the afternoon, after prayer by the pastor or teacher, the Scriptures were expounded (in the churches where the Bible was allowed in the pulpit,) by the one who had preached in the morning, and a sermon delivered by the other. After this, baptism was administered. The minister made an exhortation, and prayed both before and after the ceremony. This ended, the contribution followed, one of the deacons making the appeal to the people. The whole congregation then arose, and proceeded to the deacon's seat. The magistrates and "chief gentlemen" first, and then the elders, followed by the rest of the put their offerings into a box of wood made to their seats again. The offerings were a miscellaneous collection of goods and chat-tles of various descriptions, besides money. From the assortment collected, the deacons made distribution to the ministers, the poor, and for other purposes. After the contribution, members were received, and cases of church discipline tried, until it oftentimes became very late. "If there was time" a psalm was sung, and the services were concluded with a prayer and blessing. The prayers were from fifty to one hunred minutes in length, and many of the sermons of the times make from a hundred to a hundred and fifty printed pages! If any one disturbed the services, he was made to stand two hours on a block four feet high, with the inscription, commerce conducted on righteous principles, a good degree of popular education, and, above all, the sanctifying influence of Christianity, all cooperating, before we can reasonably hope for the conversion and elevation of any people. That it will require much time, much labor, and much judicious management, to bring all these influences to bear upon the heathen, no person will deny. But why should we say it is impossible, or that any race cannot be regenerated by these powerful means, if they should be fairly and fully and full ly employed? Many thousands of Africans are now living who have been civilized and Christianized by these means, and it seems to be no rash conclusion that many millions more might be equally benefitted if they could enjoy equal advantages. We are not yet able to assign a limit to the improbability of man. It is easy, if not reasonable, to conceive of a people as much superior to our-selves, in all that is great and pure, as we are to some of the semi-civilized nations of Asia. There is certainly a difference in races, and this difference is radical, though I would not venture to say incradicable. I suppose that the present inferior races would be for ages dependent on the European race, if they were to day elevated to the highest point of civilization of which they are constitutionally capable. Yet, in the mean time their industry would greatly increase the wealth of the world, their now wretched countries would be the abodes of happiness, if not of high intel-lectual attainment, and their heathenish opinions and practices would be superseded by the SUNDAY REFORM .- The newly elected Mayor of Philadelphia, R. T. Conrad has carned for himself a reputation which he may well be proud of, by his determined resolution to put down the sale of intoxicating drinks on the Sabbath. The police cases, brought up for hearing on the Monday mornings of five weeks, immediately preceeding his entering upon this project, for offences on the Sabbath average 40; for the five succeeding weeks, the average was reduced to eleven, fighting, rioting and noise was almost entirely banished, and the good effects of Sabbath reform was extended into the business of the week. The mayor remarks, that the general diminution of offences was without a parallel. In the midst of the general rejoicing of all the order loving citizens of Philadelphia, and of the community in general, on account of this great moral reformation; the public are shocked by the proceedings and decision of the Supreme Court, an institution relied upon for the protection of virtue, not for the encouragement of vice and immorality. One of the offenders committed by Mayor Conrad was discharged by the court, upon the ground that selling liquor on Sunday did not constitute a disorderly house, but only subjected the offender to a fine of four dollars.

It is we believe, laid down as a principle, that law is based upon justice; that law, strictly speaking is justice; unfortunately law makers are not immaculate, and judges are not always justices. More difficulties appear to arise from the interference of courts upon some technical or fanciful grounds to the enwhen the liquor seller is to be reached than have it solved respection with the neonle would dearly love to from any other quarter. Mayor Conrad does | Co., have undertaken to make it, and claim not intend to be driven from the prosecution the right to make it the public are waiting with of his work of reform, by the hasty and exparte decision of this case, he is resolved to persevere, and in this resolution he is manfully supported by the Attorney General, Wm. B. Reed; they are determined, that all persons offending shall be committed, their cases go before the grand jury and be tried in a proper manner, and in this course, they have that pervades the State, will soon be stronger the approbation of the citizens, as well as the approval of good consciences.

A very common objection to a prohibitory liquor law is that it could not be carried into effect -here is a prohibitory liquor law carried into effect at once by the mayor of a great city and that too against the influence of a counteracting judicial tribunal; for the history of the last Sabbath proves that although evil come out of this proceeding of the court the law as interpreted by the mayor was generally observed. Laws can be enforced when they are for the public good and it is folly to refuse to pass good laws upon the plea that they cannot be executed.

An Agreeable Surprise.

We very unexpectedly met with a party of pleasure on Wednesday morning at the County House; there was young and old, the fathers and mothers, the young men and maidens, and the children of all ages; they were from Shiloh, on a pic nic or Sabbath school holiday excursion. The place selected for their entertainment and their exercises, was the beautiful grove near Bowentown; they land damages in many cases have been amiwere first paying a visit to our County House, which many of them had never visited; under ranged with all the speed the law allows-the the escort of Mr. Jeremiah B. Davis who is, ably short time we are assured the north and has been for some years, one of the superintendents of that establishment. They were evidently a happy group, the elder portion of the party looked, as if relieved fromthe pressing labours of their occupation, sensible of the goodness of Providence in having blossed their labors with abundance, justly proud of the healthy, happy progeny by which they were surrounded, they were at ease with the world, and ready to thankfully enjoy its blessings. When we looked upon the young folks just about to take the important step into the busy responsibilities of life, we were irresistably hurried back in our imagination to bye gone days, when the young blood coursed freely through our veins, when

"Our dream of life from morn till night Was love's young dream."

While admiring the sprightly countenances, rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, and tempting lips of the young girls, we could hardly suppress a feeling of envy towards the spruce young men who seemed so happy in waiting upon them. We almost wished that we could throw off some thirty five or forty years, that we might have a chance of trying to find out what some of those ruby lipe were made for; but the wish was vain, and we turned to contemplate the still more important, and interesting group before us, the children, whose characters are being formed, and who are to grow up to the responsibilities of another generation; and who can say, how great will

Our country is constantly enlarging its boundaries, it is rapidly filling up with the population of the old world; and although there is in this almost countless immigration many who will make good citizens, there are immense masses of superstition, inguorance, infidelity and vice, which will require the fullest exercise of the moral force of American character to control and mould into some sort of managcable shape. How import then, is every effort by Sabbath School institution. pulpit influence, family discipline, and educational institutions, to confirm in the minds of our children religious and moral principles, temperance habits, and a well grounded knowledge and appreciation of our political institutions.

After having in a body passed through the different parts of the house they were collected in the large rooms and the halls while the young folks sung suitable ode and listened to an impromptu address to the young people.

West Jersey Railroad.

Our anxiety for the construction of this road, our confidence in the ability and willingness of the Joint Companies to build it; and the assurance we had received that it compelled to walk and ride and live in mud, would be undertaken in good faith, and without unnecessary delay, made us willing to favor any proper measures to assist in the prosecution of the enterprise.

We have been willing to make all reasonable allowances for difficulties and delays produced by negotiations for the right of way, or such other hindrances as were unavoidable, and to give the company full time for such surveys and explorations of the country as would enable them to locate the road with iudgment and discretion. Encouraged by those interested in the road and connected with the companies, we have held out to our readers encouragement to believe that the work would be promptly commenced and carnestly prosecuted to completion. We confess that our expectations have not been realized; but that the people of this district are becoming restless and dissatisfied with the delay we do know. We believe that a road must be built to form an outlet to the commercial they will unanimously demand another road. We insert articles from the editorial columns of the Woodbury Constitution and Camden Democrat upon the subject to show the views of different parties upon the prospects for the road. We hold ourselves in readiness to adrocate the building of a Railroad, and shall

The West Jersey Railroad .- This road so long promised is still without a beginning. We have all along believed it would be made no little anxiety for some more definite demonstrations than running an interminable series of routes.

We know that difficulties have occurred in obtaining the right of way upon fair terms, still there has been time enough to overcome them and give some more incontestible evidence than we yet have that the road would be made. The strong anti-monopoly feeling and more extensive, if the Companies continue much longer to fail in the performance of their promises. If they have not the ability to do so, let them back out, and relinquish their high pretensions, stick to their legitimate business and leave the rest to the people and to a fair competition.

We believe public sentiment in this meridian, is as correct and just in regard to the rights of the companies, as it is anywhere else, or upon any subject, but the dog-in-themanger policy will here as elsewhere start a current which will gather force as it rolls on. Woodbury Constitution.

The West Jersey Railroud .- The Anti-Monopoly press of this State are making a great noise because the construction of the West Jersey Railroad has not been commenced. Do these papers believe that a railroad can be built in a month, or a few months; or make a little capital against the Joint Companies? We have taken some pains to ascertain the state of forwardness in which this enterprise now is, and can assure the public from the highest and most reliable authority that it is progressing as fast as common prudence would sanction. The route has been definitely settled for the chief part of the distance between Camden and the Capes-the cably adjusted, and in others are being arsection of the work will be completed.

CHICAGO Ill, July 31, 1854. Of all western cities Chicago has had the most rapid growth, and it is a very general opinion that it will continue to grow outstripping its most successful rivals, till it becomes the largest city of the west-at least so think its boastful inhabitants. But, however numerous the advantages possessed by this thriving city-and they are doubtless manyits peculiar situation must always prevent i from attaining the picturesque beauty of Rock Island, Davenport, or Rockford. It is pleasantly situated on the south-western shore of Lake Michigan, but being built upon the low flat prairie extending without bluff or bill ton's description of the "old serpent" in Eden, preparing to deceive "the mother of us' both is a description of the boundary of the mother of us' both is a description of the boundary of the mother of us' both is a description of the boundary of the mother of us' both is a description of the boundary of the mother of us' both is a description of the boundary of the mother of us' both is a description of the boundary of the mother of us' both is a description of the boundary of the boundar ali" ever to become imposing in appearance.

Squat like a toad, close to the ear of eve. Very fortunately, Chicago is a great lumber depot. Were there a scarcity of this convenient article there, its inhabitants would be whereas they now have plank roads and plank sidewalks in great abundance. It may with propriety be called the Plank City. The west, like all other parts of our coun try, has its peculiarities—some commendablé, others the reverse. One, which I was very much pleased to notice, was the exclusion o liquor from the hotels, especially those of the better class. This is not indeed the case in all sections of the west, but even where the rum traffic is carried on in connection with public houses, it is generally done far more covertly than among us, the bar being located in the basement, or some other obscure place, better becoming the dark character of the traffic than the most public and most exposed room in the building. If this nefarious business must continue its destructive operations, why the road is not commenced we know not, it ought to skulk away in some dark corner where only the initiated can find its foul a bode, and where its bewitching temptations are not constantly presented to the uncorrupted and unsuspecting youth of our fair cities from our part of the State, that the peo- land. But there is no more necessity of conple will not be put off, and that if they have necting the sale of alcohol with public houses, not reasonable ground to be satisfied that the than of connecting with them the sale of any West Jersey road is promptly to go forward, other poison. Cannot entertainment equally as good be furnished to travellers and others without it? It is sheer nonsense to say otherwise. In this respect so far as my experience and observation have gone, the western towns and villages present a decided superiority to most towns and villages in the Nontake such a course as we shall think best cal- I travelled more than a hundred miles in Ilculated to insure that object without refer- linois by private conveyance, and though we ence to the advocates or the opponents of the scarcely saw a rum selling tavern on the way we had no difficulty in finding meals and lodgings, notwithstanding we were total strangers in most of the country through which we passed. The first morning, having travelled and we think so still, but when? that's the about twenty-five miles, we came to a subourselves and plenty of oats for our horse, room, or the stenchy fumes of rum. Our host was a good-natured Jersey farmer, and entertained travellers from time to time as occasion required. And what is this but the more. An Inn was not intended to be a rendezvous of loafing drunkards, and idle loungers of all descriptions—the point of concentra> opening of public houses for such purposes is gross perversion of their original design. The same evening we stopped at a house of like character in the village of Prophetstown. neighborhood-but a much better place, viz: a house of entertainment without profanity or rum. Who would not rather eat and lodge at such houses, than at those numerous country taverns where rum selling and rum drinking form the staple of trade, and the acthing? What a pity that New Jersey and not only in advance of us in this respect—its larger towns and cities will at least bear a favorable comparison with ours. No doubt liquor is sold and drank in all of them, but I think it is quite safe to assert in reference to some of them, that the most respectable and best patronized houses in them are kept on the temperance principle. I was informed that the new and large hotel now building at Rock Island, is to be without a bar. The most of the other houses kept there I presume deal out the liquid ruin-however slyly-but the Maine Law a little more than any other cities in their respective states, though I think not so much as most of our large towns and cities in the East. By the way, Davenport German beer drinking, Sabbath breaking, one of said vessels is to be constructed. and infidelity.

But I commenced with an intention of speaking more particularly of Indiana in its relation to the temperance cause. Something On my way from Cincinnati to Indianapolis I met a gentleman-a lawyer-residing at third square, many buildings on which were Shelbyville. Learning that he was going to Indianapolis or near by, I inquired of him if there was any temperance house there.-"Plenty of them" was his prompt reply.-Supposing he had misunderstood my question I repeated it. "Why" said he "we have no other kind among us-except perhaps a few houses of the lower class. Every respectable principles, and the same may be said with a spreading is now over.

little exception of the state. "But," said I "you have not the Maine Law in Indiana?" "No," he replied "not in form, though we have in fact; a strong temperance sentiment prevails throughout the community rendering the liquor traffic utterly disreputable." On arriving at the capital I went immediately to the "American House" near the depot. I found it very full-which was also the case with every other hotel in the city-but at length succeeded to obtain quarters there for the night. I sat during the evening in the room answering to the bar-room in other hotels, but neither saw a drop of liquor drank

The Buffalo Express, in addressing Summer tourists, advises them to get as much of Nature as possible. The loss to the underwriters of N. York, by the wreck of the steamer Franklin, on vessel and cargo, chiefly on the former, is quite dis-couraging to risks in the Havre trade, coming so soon after the loss of the Humbolt, off Halifax. Some of the Companies are about to notify the holders of open policies that goods from Havre, by steamer, must hereafter be specially insured. Misfortunes to the money market seldom come singly. The destruction of marine insurance capital and profits in Wall street the present season, by wrecks and burnings, has been no unimportant element in the financial troubles of the day. A vast amount of means, usually loaned upon or invested in Stocks or Bonds, has thus been withdrawn from use. The disasters at sea in the season 1853-4, count nearly as many millions as the great fire of 1835.

Desertion from the U. S. Army .- It was tated that there were 3000 desertions from our army during the past year, and as the entire force amounts to but 8000, the fact shows that the army must be a rather uncomfortable place for a sober man to be in. The truth is, that nobody ever enlists but from the direst necessity, and, at the first prospect of bettering their condition they are off. The uniform of the army or navy is about as disgraceful as the dress of a criminal, and every man who has an ounce of self-respect feels disgraced by wearing it. It is a sign that he cannot carn his living by any honest employment, and that is in itself a disgrace in this country. Many a good honest fellow has taken refuge in the army to escape from piercing poverty, rather than commit a crime, or ecome a pauper, and these, doubtless, have too much conscience to break their oaths and desert. The sole reliance of the country for military defence is not in the regular army, but in the well drilled militia who are always on hand to save their country when the occasion comes. - Bro. Jonathan.

Expanding Bit. So far as we can learn better augers, bits, and many other tools for working in wood, are made in America than in any other country. This is the natural result of living in an extensively timbered region. All large machines for working in wood have also attained to greater perfection in our country than any other, and some of these perfectly astonished the British Commissioners who were appointed last year to visit the New York Crystal Palace. But the word perfection has a very lofty meaning with some people, especially with our countrymen; they are not contented with saying, 'let well-enough alone," in the old fogy principle, without first proving that there is noth ing better. This appears to be really true with respect to improvements in the above named tools. Excellent bits are made in various places, but Wm. Gage, of Buffalo, N Y., believes he has made them a good gauge better, and he has therefore applied for a patent on his improvement, which consists in attaching the cutting portion of the shank in diameters; a very economical improvement indeed - Scientific American.

Brewster's Cholera Mixture. Na great majority of cases the cholera is pre-ceeded by Darrhoea or looseness of of the bowels; which being neglected under the false but too common opinion, that it will work its own cure by a little abstinence, has resulted fatally in numerous cases.

Thousands of persons in New Jersey and hroughout the United States have borne testimony to the efficacy of Brewster's Cholora Mixture as a remedy for Diarrhoea, Bowel complaints and Cholera Morbus, the premonitory symptoms of Asiatic Cholera.

The proprietor is constantly receiving testimonials of cures performed by this mixture. During the last eight years it has been very extensively used, nearly two thousand bottles have been sold within a month past, we have no hesitation therefore in recommending it as a safe and effectual remedy if administered in the early stages of the disease, according to the directions on the bottle, every family and vessel, as well as travellers should have a botand vessel, as well as traveners should have a not-tle of it, to be ready for sudden attacks.

Prepared only by F. G. Brewster, Druggist, Bridgeton N. J. Price 25 cents per bottle, and sold by most all store keepers and Druggists. July 29, 1854.

A Great and Important Change!

CHANGES of all kinds are of such very common occurrence at the present day, that little or no notice is taken of them, unless they are of a very extraordinary nature. A change of this kind took place in this town a few days since, and the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, were sur-prised when they heard the intelligence, that

Samuel R. Fithian, Had taken the Old Stand, at the N. East corner of Laurel and Washington erregis, formerly occupied by John Salkeld, where he intends keeping a full Stock of Dry Goods, Groceries, Provisions, Queensware, Earthenware, &c, which he will offer to the inspection of the public and will dispose of, on as fair terms, as can be purchased elsewhere and to which he solicits the attention of buyers, knowing they will only have to visit him, to find out the truth of the above as-Sertion.
