Written for the West Jersey Pioncer. Hagar in the Wilderness.

BY SARAH SOCWELL.

In the vast, lonely wilderness, A desert drear and wild, Wandered in wretchedness and woe A mother and her child.

The burning sun beamed fiercely down On her unsheltered head, And wildly did that mother pray, For hope had almost fled.

The water in her cruse was spent, No fountain murmured near; And faintly came her boy's low moan Of anguish to her ear.

"I cannot linger near my child I cannot see him die. I cannot watch his paling cheek, And close his dimming eye.

44 How often hath that soft cheek lain In slumber on my breast. And that clear, flashing eye met mine, Making my spirit blest!

" How often hath his merry voice Rung out in childish glee, As a young fawn fleet and free.

But now, those ringing tones are hushed, That beaming eye is dim;

Alas! that death should smite my flower, Should lay his hand on him!" But suddenly an angel's voice Fell on the mother's ear-

"Arise! the Lord hath heard thy child,

Thou may'st no lenger fear." And lo! before her wondering eye All cool, and pure, and bright, A well of sparkling water gleamed In the clear glowing light.

Quickly she bore a cooling draught To her faint dying boy, And cheerfully they journeyed on, In thankfulness and joy. Shiloh, August 1854.

For the West Jersey Pioneer. "The Drunkard's Wife's Soliloguy."

Now I am here again alone Weary and wan and faint, Why don't he come-my husband sure Is staying very late, It wants ten minutes now of eleven I wish and yet I dread I wish he'd come yet almost hate To hear "his heavy tread." 'Tis sad to be a drunkard's wife To spend your days in fear To long-to wish-to hope-regret To find comfort-nowhere. 'Tis sad to see the form you love Come tottering, raving wild, To heap his curses on the head · Or helpless wife and child. Shall I heap curses on the man Who just below my door Daily deals out the poisonous drug From that accursed Stone Store? Which spreads destruction like a flood

O'er peaceful home and hearth And makes the once "charmed circle" like A hell e'en while on earth. Oh no, I will not curse the wretch. But I would have him know That God has said "a man shall reap Whatsoe'er he shall sow." And I would say that he hath sown Broadcast-the seeds of pain. Of misery, want, of vice and crime, Which he must resp again. And I would say to every man Who sells my husband rum, He's robing me of all life's joys Of peace, of hope and home; Yen, more, he takes my childrens bread, He gives me sleepless nights;

I ask the man-the wretch I mean, I ask him. Is it right? Oh! what is left for her to hope Who is a drunkard's wife? But for these habes I'v nothing left That makes me wish for life, But hark what hoise is that I hear DIONAL CO From the Smyrna Times. THE MAIDEN.

BY ZEKEL.

It is pleasant to look upon the trees, the shrubs, the flowers, coming out with all the beauty which joyous May can give. It is pleasant to gaze upon the little bleating herds, is still save the little rippling rill, the whis-pering zephyr, the buzzing bee, and the sing-ing bird. It is pleasant to see a gang of hap-py school girls or boys, running and sporting in all the merriment of their glad day. It is pleasant to behold the young man engaging in schemes of honor, industry and enterprize, with energy, while his young day is on, that he may be provided for against his stormy or aged day. It is pleasant to view the aged one, who has served with his might through the battlings of earth, and, having gathered a competence about him, now retires, with the competence about him, now retires, with the blessings of his neighbors, to enjoy his carnings in a quiet suited to his years; and it is pleasant—ay, pleasanter than all these—to meditate upon the name and character of THE MAIDEN. The thought is fraught with highest interest. The magic of that word calls up sensations which sleep at every other sound. Were I a sculptor, and were desired. sound. Were I a sculptor, and were desired to carve an imitation of the pleasantest fig-ure in nature, I would spend my time in chis-elling out a maiden walking in her sammer garb, while modesty, innocence and beauty should sit upon her brow. Where I a painter I would seize my brush and dash down the figure of the maiden upon the canvass, with lips, and eyes, and cheeks fired with life, vigor and loveliness, and call it my best performance. Were I a poet, and were wished to deliniate the pleasantest figure of earth, I would train my numbers with the most exquisite care to picture out the joys, the happy days, the evening strolls, the cheering scenes, the smiles and hearty laughs, and, also, the griefs and tears of the maiden, and think it my pleasantest effusion.

What a halo of interest hovers about the name! Aside from the common feeling of our nature, there is something very pleasant about her. How often her foot-fall sounds peace to the indigent and suffering! How often do acts of benevolence push her out, tremblingly, perhaps, but still with energy! Trained to deeds of worth by her mother, from the moments when she sung to her darling her sweet lullaby till the present, and backed by a noble feeling heart, she is ready for exalted deeds, and active where duty points. None languish where she is without her tear falling and her hand helping. But I will not-I cannot-portray her character. Suffice it that I add only, that I now know of no name around which concentrates so much that is so lovely and excellent; and her history will be record ed by the uncrring penman for the archives of God. We, of earth, must wait and listen to the voice of the future years. They will tell of her from the pulpit or the professor's chair, from the rostrum or the senate cham ber, or from some other point of honor. Then, who would speak harshly to her, or lightly of her name? Who dares thus to tread upon innocence, and block up the way of rising worth? Who is so lost to his own dignity or so low in moral sensibility as to pluck a single gem from the female name, or to trample ruthlessly upon her rights? Or, asid from this, who would not fear the pettings of an incensed community were he to injure her, whether in feelings, in interest, or in character? Who would risk a wayward fling, from a careless hand, at her, the feelings of whose heart are tender and dear, lest he be spurned from the good wishes of his fellows, and be left alone in his glory? Ay, let that one know that he treads upon guarded ground, and the just reward of his insolence shall descend plentifully upon his own head.

Hayglade, July, 1854. THE OPEN SKY.

It is a strange thing bow little, in general, people know about the sky. It is the part of creation in which nature has done more for the sake of pleasing man, more for the sole and evident purpose of talking to him and teaching him, than in any other of her works: and it is just the part in which we least attend to her. There are not many of her other works in which some more material or essential purpose than the mere pleasing of men might, so far as we know, be answered, if once in three days, or thereabouts, a great, ugly, black rain-cloud were brought up over the blue, and everything well watered, and so ties of its opposers. These viewed the earlier all left blue again till next time, with perhaps movements of temperance reformers with con-a film of morning and evening mist for dew. tempt, believing efforts at reform in this dia film of morning and evening mist for dew. And, instead of this, there is not a moment of any day of our lives when nature is not producing scene after scene, picture after pic- ferred to, and they exhorted to forsake it, ture, glory after glory, and working still upon such exquisite and constant principles of the most perfect beauty that it is quite certain that it is all done for us, and intended for our satisfied security, ever gave a thought to the perpetual pleasure. And every man, whereever placed, however far from other sources of interest or of beauty, has this doing for him constantly. The noblest scenes of the earth can be seen and known but by few. It The rumseller wears an anxious brow; the nois not intended that man should live always ble little band he once held in contempt, have in the midst of them; he injures them by his stolen a march upon him. #### WANTS AMUSEMENT.

When we watch, as we can with delight for hours together, the early manifestations of thought in the infant child, we wonder that any mother possessing intelligence above pleasant to walk through the grove, where all the mere animal mother, can wish for more delightful occupation. The most beautiful, the most wonderful thing we meet with, is this early unfolding of the mind of a child. What can be more manifest or more interesting than the desire of the young infant for intellectual sympathy? Mark, observes an eloqueue writer, how the infant sitting on your knee thrusts into your face the toy it holds, that you may notice and admire it too. See when it makes a creak with its wet finger on the table, how it turns and looks at you, saying as plainly as it can, Hear this new sound. Watch how the children come into the room, exclaiming, "Mamma, see what a curious thing! Mamma look at this," and would continue the habit did not the silly mother tell them not to tense her.

And how sad it is to think that mothers, instead of encouraging these inquisitive appeals of their little ones, instead of answering with patient interest their many questions, turn them off with reproofs and frowns for being so troublesome. Oh, if parents under-stood the importance of cherishing and guiding this natural longing of their children for information and sympathy, not only would the children be benefitted incalculably, but parents themselves would find in it an inexhaustless source of pleasure and improvement.

Our idea is, that any intelligent mother might find in the delightful task of developing her infant's mind such a variety of pleasurable feelings as would quite wean her from all desire and relish for the frivolous pursuits and amusements of society. We believe that not only does such a mother perform the holiest of duties in thus developing her infant's mind, but that she enjoys the purest of pleasures of which the human bosom is capable. Such a woman need not go abroad for joy, she has a feast at home. - N. V. Organ.

and delight does he report the fulfilment of his malignant hopes. And yet, what disposition of heart is so utterly and intensely devdownfall of a fellow man, especially his downfall from virtue?

No man need ask for other or stronger evidence that he is a fiend at heart, than the consciousness that he exults in the fall of his neighbor, though that neighbor may have been his greatest enemy.

We fear this is by no means an uncommor disposition. We fear that some who read this paragraph would have to confess to the ownership of such a disposition, if they told the truth. Just think of the enormity of gloating over the ruin of a fellow man, of repicing over his departure from the path of virtue and happiness! Think what a sink of unmingled malice that man's soul must be, who can exultinfily proclaim, 'I told you so,' when a brother man makes shipwreck of his earthly reputation and bliss. - N. Y. Organ.

Progress is the watch word of the nine teenth century. New discoveries are being made in the sciences. New inventions. improvements and appliances in the arts. The church is pushing her conquests at home and abroad, and her laborers are daily entering new fields of operation; the heathen at home as well as abroad are being cared for. From the New Jersey Standard. GOING DOWN TO SALEM.

BY THE WEST JERSEY WANDERER Salem-how many sweet associations clus r around the word. Inlinked with our earliest studies, as the spot where that mysterious character of holy writ—Melchisedec, makes his appearance—which afterward grew to Jerusalem, with its superhuman glories, its first and second temple, and finally its Calvary!—these, and a thousand other thoughts, come trooping along at the very name of Sa-

After leaving home, Philadeiphia was away, conscious of the perfectness of the defound myself at the foot of Arch street wharf, looking in vain for the boats advertised to run ilish as that which finds its happiness in the to Salem. I went straight down to the pier Hook, Pennsyille, Pennsgrove, Newcastle, atmospheric pressure being about fourteen at the foot of the street, and there was no steamboat of any kind, at all there. I looked up the river and down the river -out into the river and across the river; and still though there were innumerable little boats (used for purposes of towing, reminding one of the strutting and crowing of dunghill cocks, in their fierce pretensions and tame performan-ces,) yet no boat of the kind I desired, made its appearance. Time was pressing; it was quite important-nay absolutely necessarythat I should be there; and the vague idea of crossing over to Camden and riding some fifty or sixty miles from Saturday noon to Sunday morning, and that through Jersey sands, was anything but agreeable. And as all men do, began to cast about for somebody or something upon which to vent my rapidly accumulating spleen. Thinking it, however, worth while to ask somebody about the matter before rushing into the desperation of a sand trip, I made the acquantance of an old negro pie man, who paraded up and down that por tion of the wharves, ringing a little bell, and holding up his basket temptingly before the eves and noses of the always hungry dock rats and water rowdies, occasionally selling one or two to some unlucky passenger, who, with no time to get a dinner, yet felt the cravings of appetite too powerfully to be very particular as to whether the mince in the pie owed its peculiar aroma to the cat or dog department of the Philadelphia markets. The old gentleman gave me to understand that the boat of which I was in scarch, lay a couple of piers down the river,—that it was all Arch street wharf until you got to the next one, the great cause of Temperance. Its course is and added the agreeable information, that if I

The Special Committee of the United States of Ithiel S. Richardson, asking for an appropriation to test the feasibility of his proposed suddenly impressed with the importance of sustaining the law, and object to the action of Mr. Conrad in putting his will against such a decision. This class of individuals are confident that the right kind of a law can be framed to prevent the evils of intemperance, but it is an unfortunate fact that one has never been drawn, the details of which were satisfactory. The truth is that the public mind is settling down upon the conviction that there is but one method of arresting the progress of drunkenness, viz, by an entire atmospheric telegraph, have recommended compliance with the request, and reported a forseen obstacle would prevent its transmission, beyond a very limited distance, till acup to this mark is of little real advantage. — up in poverty; and in a city like that -- poor, tual experiment had resolved the doubt. And although I did not know that then, it too in the recent case, to dissipate the fears of those who predict a less efficient operation through a longer line of tube than that which is exhibited in the model shown at the Capitol, which they declare works admirably, and erable in the practicable operation of the atmospheric telegraph. This model is described in the report as follows,

"It consists of a horizontal tube of one seen following in our wake. Nothing was said on board of the Myaunty, as they familiarly called our vessel; but the speed did increase, wonderfully. They were opposed to racing on our boat; the opposition made no secret of their racing—so our people said; but we just kept on our way. Yet, as I said before, it was singular how at every visit of one of the hands (who kept a look-out) to the end. pleasure from right to left, or from left to right. A piston, or plunger, three inches long, and fitting the tube loosely, but followed by several detached disks or washers of leather, which accurately fit it, is inserted in one end of the tube, seperated by a cut off; and a few strokes of the pump produce in the tube a partial vacuum. The cut off is then reversed, and the plunger set free on the side of the vacuum, relieved from the resistance of the air in the tube, and propelled alone by the pressure of the atmosphere passes through in a time wholly unappreciable by ordinary means.'

Mr. Richardson refers to a still more practical test of the working and capacity of his telegraph, in a tube a mile long, of three inches clear diameter, and following the elevation With what an exultant feeling does the predicter of evil concerning his neighbor utter the one quoted as the caption of this article.

BONNETS.

Rev. Mr. Vancleve, of the Front Street M. E. Church, preached a sermon on Sunday morning last, in which he took occasion to speak of the expensive and ridiculous follies of the fashionable world—and very particuarly alluded to the dresses of ladies. The bonnet-that neat and fascinating article of ladies' apparel, shading, as it often does, a much more beautiful and fascinating face, was represented with its artificial colors of every rainbow tint, as entirely inconsistent with the plain, simple requirements of religion. We observed while this critical analysis of the head dress was going on, a great deal of uneasiness among the hundreds of pretty bonnets in the house. There was a shaking of the artificials, as though they had encountered a blast from the North wind's breath.-We felt for some time that we were "in a straight betwixt two," scarcely knowing which side to take; but when we fairly considered the subject, we remember how many really pretty faces we have seen spiled by a superlatively ridiculous bonnet, and disproportioned curls-how many times we have been reminded of a mouse between two bunches of oakum-how often we have lost the exchange of a soft blue eye, or the piercing elec-tricity of a keen black eye, by the attractions of a very gaudy bonnet. We therefore, concluded the preacher was right, and the girls were wrong. - State Guzette.

Herring Fishing at th South.

A correspondent of the New Haven "Register," gives an interesting account of the herring fishery, as practised in the eastern part of the Carolinas. The herrings which are taken there, he says, are of a different species from those which are used in New England being larger and less savory. They make their appearance shortly after the run of shad commonces, although their grand run, as it is termed, does not take place until considerably later in the season. They always go in shoals, and unlike the shad, do not confine caught, induces the inhabitants to watch the waters pretty carefully throughout the fishing season, and when a shoal enters a branch or inlet, the news is soon spread from house to house, and a motley assemblage of all ages and colors soon gathers on the banks, each individual being armed with his deep hand net.

As soon as the mein body of the shoal apthus in a single hout. It is customary when the herriugs enter the branch, for the person making the discovery to spread the news among his neighbors, so

CIRCULATION 1300

Omly $1 00 per Year?

FRANKLIN FERGUSON, EDITOR.

Notice to Agents and Advertisers. WE ARE PREPARED TO SHOW THAT

The West Jersey Pioneer Has a Circulation of at least 300 more than any other paper printed in Cumberland County. Its Circulation, (in the County,) is nearly double that of any other paper. This notice is called for in self-defence. The "BRIDGETON CHRONICLE" falsely conveying the impression, that its Circulation is larger than that of the PIONEER.

IMPROVEMENTS.

The building of Mr. I. A. Sheppard west of the Bridge, is beginning to make an imposing appearance, we are glad to see that there is to be a display of taste in its finish; every effort of that kind adds to the appearance of our town, and should receive the commendations of the people. We should have been pleased if it had been constructed of brick instead of wood, but in view of that fire which is probably to come before many years and sweep away our combustible town, it is probably better that it should be like the rest, so that a clean work may be made of it, and an opportunity afforded to build up the new town in a uniform manner. We sometimes suppose our property holders have read over so attentively the published accounts of the advantages of a sweeping fire, how much more the property has been worth after the buildings have been destroyed, than it would have brought with all the buildings standing, that they are making their calculations of profit on that contingency.

The fact there is not at this time as we believe, an engine capable of throwing water upon a fire should one occur in our town, coupled with the other fact that an effort has been made by men who own no property to get up an efficient fire company with a good engine, without its having received the countenance. support or assistance of the property holders tends to confirm the supposition: Our men of property are, we are inclined to think, a pect liar people, they have been so accustomed to having the value of their property increase from day to day upon their hands, without any effort of their own, that they have got to be pretty much like the young birds in the nest, open their mouths from morning till night to take in the food the old birds bring to them. The young birds however are fledged at last, the feathers appear, their wings grow, and with them the disposition to help themselves, they no longer trust to being fed by others, but go to work for themselves, whether our property holders will ever become fledged, stretch their wings and help themselves or not, is a question; there are some evidences to prove that they will, they did build a steamboat and a good one too, but when by bad management it got into difficulty, instead of doing as men of energy usually do, try again, they abandoned the enterprise and lost their labor. It is also true that they have built an Academy, which we trust will sustain itself; and by a spasmodic effort, which even astonishes themselves, they did build a good turnpike, six miles and a half long; when they will build another is very doubtful.

It is not that they are insensible to the fact, that these things increase the value of their property, but they have been fed so long by others, that they are disposed to still depend upon others to do for them; they are willing to have railroads and turnpikes, but expect somebody to build them, without their assistfire department, but are waiting for the poor men to furnish it, they are rather anxious for a steamboat and have been trusting that pro- you. vidence would send them one for some years, they are aware of the necessity of a town Hall, but can't see why it dont grow up as the grass grows. Thanks to Mr. Sheppard, we understand that upon his own risk of remuneration, he is going to fit up a large room in his new building for public meetings and such other purposes as it may be wanted for.

We could have an abundant supply of good water for domestic purposes, and for extingishing fires, furnished to all the business parts of our town at a very small cost, by laying pipes from the tumbling dam, the supply from the waste water, which could be led into them without difficulty being amply sufficient, but then that might spoil the chance for speculation in lots in that burnt district which we have in prospect.

Perhaps our readers will suspect, from the fault finding vein which we have indulged in to-day, that (as the children say) we got out of bed this morning wrong end foremost, well, we do get out of patience when men who have the property and the means refuse to use them ble that the road will not be built.

Mr. John Bowen, of this town, left at our office, several pods of Beans, one measuring CONGRESS.

length adjourned, with how much credit to itself, or benefit to the country, its proceedings have been conducted, we will not pretend to determine; we suppose however, that the country would not have suffered in character, in reputation, or in its interest, if the adjournment had taken place six months earlier. As American citizens, as members of a great confederacy which claims for its government and its institutions a pre-eminency amongst the nations; which boasts of the intelligence of its people, and which is, or ought to be, exerting a salutary and powerful influence upon the world around us, we cannot look with much complacency upon the doings or the character of either the Legislative or Executive branches of our Government, and need not be sorry to see their labors intermitted at least for a time; it is fortunate for our country that we do not need much legislation, the progress of our country in growth and wealth, in power, and in intelligence and influence, will go on without, and in spite of the doings of our servants at Washington. It is a happy thing for us that Washington is not the United States, and that our general government is limited in its power to do evil.

ELECTION.

The time for our elections is drawing nigh, and the saviours of their country, are waking up to the work before them; Democrats and Whigs, Monopolists and Anti-Monopolists, Temperance and Anti-Temperance mon, and in addition to the customary divisions of our county, Native Americans, are all ready in their particular manner to serve the State. It is probable that in all these combinations may be found men of pure selfishness, others who are so self conceited and presumptious as to set down all men as dishonest who think different from themselves: but at the same time many who honestly think themselves course they think most conducive to the pub- interest manifested in the erection of such Men of good feelings and liberal minds should therefore, while they zealously contend for what they conceive to be right, exercise charity and good feeling toward those who may differ from them in opinion.

A few hints to the advocates of a prohibitory liquor law, from an old laborer in the Temperance cause. Impelled by the action of parties kept up merely for party purposes, without political principles to warrant their continuence or the despotic exercise of their power, the temperance men of this county last year determined upon entering the field in support of their cause, and make themselves heard at the ballot boxes; they properly and effectually organized their forces and were successful; parties were put down and party drill broken up; temperance men resolved to follow up these efforts from year to year, until their end was accomplished and the traffic in liquid poison was abolished. The time for renewed action is drawing near; are the temperance bands in or-Greenwich assembled on Monday evening, in der for another campaign? Are they alive to management, break up their ranks? We ask them to look around them, and cautiously, and carefully to examine the signs of the times. Let no side issues draw them off from the sacred cause in which they have enlisted. Institution for the Deaf and Dumb. - The Managers of this Institution are having two spacious wings added to the building, located at the corner of Broad and Pine streets, which, when finished, will add greatly to the appearance of the whole, and afford the room so long desired for the operations of the establishment. The whole lot is two hundred feet front by two hundred and thirty-five feet deep, affording a fine space for garden and play-grounds for the pupils. The building fronting on Broad street has a facade of 96 feet, handsomely ornamented in the Doric style by an exceedingly chaste portico, set off by pannelled wings. This front, so neat and unpretending, is one of Haviland's finest efforts, and has long been regarded as one of the chief attractions of Broad street. Without disturbing it with its neat flower beds and side area, the Managers of the Institution are having wing buildings erected on the north and south, commencing a short distance back of the line of Broad street, and extending from the main edifice to Pine street on the one side, and Asylum street on the other. The base of each wing is of granite very solidly built, and the superstructure of brick.

Phila. Sun. Breadstuffs Must Come Down .- The New York Sun in the course of an article on "Breadstuffs and speculation," says that the prospects of bountiful harvests throughout Europe are so promising, as to create great uneasiness among the holders of large stocks of grain and flour, in England, and have caused an almost entire suspension of orders upon the U. States. The London Daily News says that accounts from all parts of the continent represent the crops as promising and prices declining. It may also be taken into the general calculation that the Russians are being driven from the Danubian Principalities, and the navigation of the Danube re-opened. The success of Turkey and her allies in that quarter will not only enable the Allied Army to obtain most of their supplies in the Danubian Provinces, but will enable all their surplus produce to go forward as usual to the English markets. There is, then, every reason to believe that prices of food will rule low in Europe in 1854, and the demand for our produce be restricted.

The Newark Mercury says that the business men of that city, who are engaged in the Southern trade, prophecy a much later opening of business the present season than usual, but few orders from their regular customers ricans, as any that can be found, and amongst having as yet been received. Usually, the Southern trade is in full blast by the first, of August, and the present backwardness therefore excites little remark. It is confidently expected, however, that an equal amount of business with former years will be transacted by our manufacturers, at withstanding the present unfavorable signs. them engaged in a false issue. FITHIAN, Sign of the big Mortar.

Ritter's Compound Syrup of Tar & Wild Cherry. IS the safest, cheapest, and best of all Cough Medicines now in use. Of this fact a single trial will contince the most skeptical. It contains no mineral or narcotic ingredients, and causes no inconvenience during its administration; is very palatable, will be taken freely by the youngest children, and will afford instant relief in croup and whooping cough, if given according to the direc-tions. A few doses will allay the irritation of the bronchial tube, incident to cough and sore throat, and by removing the cause will in a short time produce the effect desired-a permanent cure .-One bottle, the price of which is 25 cents, will in nearly every instance oure a cough, however in veterate and of however long standing.
