From the Philadelphia Sun CLEAR THE TRACK!

Suggested by the Engraving of the Art Union for 1854.

Yes, "clear the track!" for who can stand Before youth's strength and fiery zeal, Or hope, by accents mild and bland, His noble projects to repeal?

The youthful heart will bound and glow, Though keen winds whistle loud and long, As through the banks of drifting snow, He drives with merry shout and song.

And though around, pale winter's face Stares at him through the leafless trees, He slackens not his eager pace, Nor heeds the sighings of the breeze.

'Tis well, while life seems full of joy, And hope paints all the future fair, To be the merry hearted hoy, Nor pain the breast with cank'ring care.

The time may come, as seasons roll, When past his joyous, dreamy spring, And summer's gifts have cheered his soul, And autumn's flown on golden wing.

That winter's cold will frost his hair, And chill the blood that warms him now; His tott'ring steps he'll watch with care, Nor dash the sweat-drops from his brow.

Thus "Young America" goes forth, The nations from their chains to free. Nor west nor east, nor south nor north, ". Can stay the cause of liberty.

Nor England's fog, nor Russia's snow, Nor Afric's heat, can keep him back; And Emperors and Kings will know His footsteps, and will "clear the truck!" Oct. 28, 1854.

Farming in Early Times.

In looking over lately the Annual Report

A singular disproportion in prices prevailed at the same time; for while cows were often so high, as to sell, in 1836, for twenty-five to thirty pounds sterling, and oxen at 40 pounds per pair, a quart of new milk, or four eggs, could be bought for a penny. The real value of such cattle, at our present estimates, may be inferred from the fact that a hundred and lifty years ago, the average weight of the former is over 800 pounds, and the weight of the latter 80 pounds. It is also stated that twelve years after the anding of the pilgrims, the farmers about Boston, having no plows, were obliged to break up the bushes with their hands and hoes; in preparing the sod for cultivation; and in 1637 there were only 37 plows in the whole State. Even later than this it was the custom for the owner of a plow to take it from one place to another, doing the plowing for a whole neighborhood.

The inhabitants had not then learned the value nor the cultivation of Indian corn, pumkins, squashes and potatoes. Even as late as the beginning of the 17th century, potatoes were sold in England for 2 shillings per pound, for the Queen's table, and were used as a fruit, baked into pies, seasoned with spices, wine, and sometimes eaten with sugar.
The following is a specimen of subsequent husbandry, which a few have followed, even as late as the memory of the oldest living in-habitant and which we commend to the spe-cial attention of those who think we should not be wiser than our fathers'. "Land new and rich in mould, the accumulation of ages, did not require very careful cultivation to secure and abundant return .-But a few years of constant cropping exhausinsurgents taken prisoners and one hundred ted its productiveness. The proprietor could

From Moore's Rural New Yorker. Hints on Fattening Hogs.

That pork has an important place among the products of the country, is shown by our statistics of domestic commerce, and also by the late census, which gave thirty millions as the aggregate of individual porkers in the United States-about ten millions above heep and twelve millions a head of cattle. It s an important item of domestic consumpion, salt pork being, in the country especially, the stand-by when other meat fail, and nighly prized where long-keeping and trength-sustaining food is desired. And its alue as sustenance for the laboring man will not be doubted by the experienced, whatever regetarians and other squeamish people may y on the subject.

For fattening swine on the farm, it is important to commence early, for the reason that articles of food can be made use of which would otherwise be wasted, and that mild veather is much more favorable to taking on or even Cape May, can produce anything of lesh, than cold. At this season, most farmers have quantiies of autumn apples, summer squashes, early potatoes, &c., which would perish or deteiorate sadly by keeping, but are now of considerable value-well worth saving, at least, as food for swine. Boiled or steamed, and mixed with meal, they are well relished, and or a commencement in fattening, answer as well as can be desired. Where apples and potatoes are both used, when boiled in a large tettle, it is a good plan to put in the apples first—three or four bushels of these to one of potatoes, and then cover with the latter-well rashed, of course. Then fill with water, and and corn, oats and barley, or shrunk wheat for this purpose.

An experienced farmer gave us the followng as his practice, and with uniform success. He commences early, having the pen open into a small yard adjoining, that the hogs may have exercise and get at the ground at pleasure. . He begins feeding boiled apples pumpkins, carrots, potatoes, &c., mixing the same with some light mill-feed, which he is careful for feeding, He never fails in making the first quality of pork, and a good deal of it. REV. ZABDIEL ADAMS.

A neighboring minister-a mild and inoffensive man with whom he was about to exchange, said to him, knowing the peculiar bluntness of his character, "You will find some panes of glass broken in the pulpit window; and possibly you may suffer from the cold. The cushion too, is in a bad cendition; but I beg of you not to say anything to my provide on the subject. They are not for people on the subject. They are poor, &c. "O no!" says Mr. Adams. But ere he left home, he filled a bag full of rags and took it with him. When he had been in the pulpit short time feeling somewhat incommoded by the too free circulation of the air, he de-liberately took from the bag a handful or two of rags and stuffed them into the window.— Towards the close of his discourse, which was more or less upon the duties of a people toward their clergyman, he became very animated, and purposely brought down both his fists, with tremendous force upon the pulpit cushion. The feathers flew in all directions, and the cushion was pretty much used up.-He instantly checked the current of his thoughts, and simply exclaiming, "Why, how these feathers fly!" proceeded. He had fulfilled his promise of not addressing the societycon that subject, but had taught them a lesson not to be misunderstood. On the next sabbath the window and cushion were found

THE WAR. There is absolutely nothing exciting from they are, are altogether conflicting, but it is the ingress and egress of such large numbers authentically reported that up to the 9th instant, nothing had been done. The allies now number 90,000 men, and they occupy a strong position south of Sebastopol, and have all their siege apparatus landed, Menschikoff continues to hold the field north of Sebastopol, with 30,000 troops, and a similar number is expected to reinforce him by the 15th

The latest accounts are that on the 9th, General Canrobert had ordered the Russian outposts to be driven in on that day and the batteries erected. A detachment of 10,000 French troops is to be immediately shipped from Marseilles to the Crimea. It is confirmed that the Baltic fleet will return home without further operations. Omar Pacha is preparing to operate upon us the three points of the Pruth, the Dobrudscha and the Sea .-Russia is amussing forces on the Austrian frontier. It surmised that England and France are at present organizing the re-establishment of an independent Kingdom for Poland.

Jerome Bonaparte has been naturalized as a Frenchman. Lord Raglan's latest despatches say that he expected to open the fire in a few days. Private letters add that the attacks on the outworks was fixed for the 9th inst., and that the Allies, siego artillery had mostly reached the camp. On the 4th, a cannonade took place between some English steamers and the Quarrantine fort at Odessa. Nothing of im portance resulted. A Vienna despatch says that a secret treaty actually exists between the Czar and Prussia. The Schastopol despatches are most conflicting. Some report another Russian defeat and the capture of the southern heights, &c., but the most reliable indicate nothing of moment having occurred up to the 9th inst.

The War in the Crimea. The fall of Sebastopol is expected about the 16th. The Russian troops in the Crimea have been decimated by the cholera. The Russians troops 20,000 strong, made a sortie from Sebastopol, but were attacked and routed by the allies.

The War in the Crimea. - We have at las: the full details of the Battle of the Alma, which was won by the allies after one of the severest contests of the war. The Russian army occupied the position behind the river Alma, at Burlink, which has already been more than once pointed out, but Lord Ragan describes with great precision and felicity of expression the precipitous and unequal nature of the ground, which added so materially to the difficulties surmounted by the allied troops. In that amphitheatre of cliffs, surrounding the course of the Alma, at about two miles and a half from the sea, the Russian commander had fortified himself in a manner which was expected to retard the advance of the enemy for a considerable time. From this height, after a severe struggle, the Russians were driven, but not without a terrible loss of life. The English loss is set down at 2,500, and the French at 1,400, while that of the Russians will probably reach

The real brunt of the battle fell upon the English troops, and it was the most trying that can occur in military operations. To cross a deep and difficult ford in the very face of a tremendous fire of a hundred pieces of artillery, to form on the opposite bank where the ground was most broken and encumbered, to struggle up steep heights under a murderous, sweeping shower of grape, round shot, shell, canister case shot and musketry, to march steadily on, though platoons and companias were moved down like grass, and to sw en away the Russians from a position of such extreme strength, was an achievment that took Saxon stamina to execute. We regard the full of Sebastopel as certain, and we rejoice that Russia at length is to suffer for her bold and unrighteous lust of territory .-The reinforcements which the allied forces will receive, will enable them to press the siege with great vigor, and we have little d ubt that the fortress will be taken by them
