The Kansas Emigrants' Song.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

Air-Auld Lang Syne. We cross the prairies as of old The falgrims crossed the sea, To make the West, as they the East, The homestend of the free.

Chorus-The homestead of the free, my boys. The homestead of the free; To make the West, as they the East, The homestead of the free.

We go to rear a wall of men On Freedom's Southern line, And plant beside the cotton tree, The rugged northern pine!

The rugged Northern pine, &c. We're flowing from our native hills, As our free rivers flow; The blessing of our mother-land Is on us as we go.

Is on us as we go, &c. We go to plant her common schools On distant prairie swells, And give the Saubaths of the wild The music of her bells.

The music of her bells, &c. Upbearing, like the ark of old, The Bible in our van, Wego to test the truth of God Against the fraud of man.

Against the fraud of man, &c. No pause, nor rest, save where the streams That feed the Kansas run, Save where our Pilgrim gonfalen Shall flout the setting sun.

Shall flout the setting sun, &c. We'll sweep the prairies as of old Our fathers swept the sea,

And make the West, as they the East, The homestead of the free!

The homestead of the free, &c. The Spirit of Liberty. It dwells among the mountains,

It lingers in the vale, 'Tis gurgled from the fountains It speaks in every gale. 'Tis heard where mother Ocean

Her dashing spray doth pour, And where in wild commotion, The raging billows roar. All nature bears its impress, And owns its ruling rod;

The impress of its Deity, The voices of nature's God.

MORAL.

From Gleason's Pictorial. HOLIDAY REVERIES. BY MRS. E. WELMONT.

On the morning of one of our annual holi days we found ourselves gazing abstractedly upon a solitary leaf that hung upon the topmost bough of the tree directly in front of our study window. The wintry wind was swaying it wildly to and fro, and although the damps and frosts of autumn had taken all the verdure and even vitality out of it, still it clung with stubborn tenacity to its hold upon the frail bough, where among hundreds of its kindred, it had helped cheer and give its shade to multitudes amidst the scorching heats of mid-summer. We wondered as we gazed, why it lingered; for just about yonder eddy its numerous companions were whirling in fantastic dances, while anon they would rise in the air as if in frolicsome glee, sceming to close their frail destiny in the merry evolutions of a polka or a waltz with one of their kindred. And such an air of desolation, such a look of londhuess, as pervaded the sere and dried leaf, led off my thoughts into the common avalogy, which we so often use when we compare the moral with the natural aspects of humanity. In close preximity to the last leaf, we began to similar in thoughts—no, they rather came without our bidding, and the vaccut chair stood before us, which upon our last buliday, was filled with venerated age. The lineaments of that placed countenance rose distinctly, before us, but it was the impersonation of an abgel how we bogan, to trace the spirits slight with our finite vision; yonder spack of fleesy cloud, or away in the denies the spirit shight with one finite yision, you have the same length. The same length of the same length of the same length of the same length. The same length of the same length of the same length of the same length. The same length of the same length of the same length of the same length. The same length of the same length of the same length of the same length. The same length of the same length of the same length of the same length of the same length. The same length of the same length. The same length of the sam wisdom as had preceded us, and so we welcomed the holiday which suggested such associations. We had turned but a moment, yet when we again sought the last leaf, it had gone; its brief exit caused an involuntary sigh, for we felt one of our humble monitors had departed, and in that naked branch nothing was left us but the mute faith which Will be inserted for 40 cents a folio of 100 shall clothe it again in freshoned beauty, with words, for the first insertion; 20 cents for each subsequent insertion. A liberal deduction. So we rejoiced in the appointments of their will be middle of the control o Providence, and as we closed our reverie, the feeling lingered, that if true to the light of conscience, as was the leaf to the time of its full, we may be equally assured of a more incorruptible inheritance when we put off the clothing of our frail humanity. We love to study the books of nature; it is but the handmaid of revalation, the twinsister of faith, the internal evidence which no other philosophy can apply. We remember it was but a few weeks since, when we missed a tiny rivulet that had always threaded our way in the taugled wildwood. Once we saw a party of squirrels who had made their bed in a nest of damp leaves, come to this little spring to drink. We sat in quiet ambush and looked upon their playful glee—now nest-ling under a canopy of leaves, then bearing off a nut for their winter's heard, and their animated life infused a charm into our own. But when the streamlet became dry we saw none of the squirrels, yet there was a little scoop of dried leaves and a hollow aperture, as if some specimen of animal life had been there. We stopped and looked within; a small handful of nuts lay there, and beside them a bushy tail stretched out at full length; we gently stirred the bed, but there was no timid and bounding spring to clude our acquaintance; for our squirrel was dead! The remembrance of this fact, trifling though it be, suggested to us the forms of many who began last year's holidays with us, over whom the ocean is now singing a requium—and yet others who had gathered heaps of shining dust in a strange land, and there had lain them-selves beside it, no more to join our social

But why pursue this sad reverie? Laugh ing childhood is still before us full of gleethe strong arm upon whom for years we have leaned, is still within our reach; the world is full of sunshine, and we would cast no shadow upon the full holiday enjoyments which relieve our working days from the dull monotony of cares, which too prematurely plant indelible furrows upon the faces we would fain keep young a little longer.

TEMPERANCE

From the Prohibitionist. What is your Rum Tax?

The burdens which drunkenness imposes unon society are borne for the most part, by the sober and industrious. Few understand how heavy these burdens really are: how much expenditure of time and musele they demand-and how utterly unnecessary they all are. So long have people bowed their patient necks; beneath the accumulated load, that they almost seem to have lost the power if they have not forfeited the right, to lift their heads and look the bloated Robber in the face, to whom they have paid tribute, lo!

What would be said by the yeomanry of the land, should Government demand of them the product of every tenth day's toil to swell its revenues? There would be heard a murmur from the multitude, growing deeper, louder, more significant and terrible with each passing hour, till it should swell to thunder, rolling in many-voiced anathemas against the tyrrany that would thus rob Labor of its reward. But Labor is robbed, nevertheless, and submits to it with a patience that endangers the hard-won la riels of the man of Uz: robbed, too, by the sanction of the law-making power, through a legislation alike impolitic, immoral and absurd, opposed to the purpose for which Civil Government was ordained, finding no defence in its inherent powers, will one day, doubtless, be embodied in the and no excuse except in the ignorance or fol-

It was sometime since estimated by Mr. Greely, that five years of the life of every sober and industrious man, who reaches the of the soil of France came by purchase into age of forty-five, go to support drunkards, the hands of small proprietors. And, to this and the criminals that drunkenness makes. That is, one day in nine, beginning with his infancy and extending through forty-five years, he is compelled to devote to the benefit of the Rum Power! or, estimating that his active life, as a producer, commences with his twenty-first year, one day in five! What entific agriculturist. The houses are small an enormous drain upon the industry of a people is this! - and this is our Rum Tax! -Whom does it benefit? Not ourselves, nor our children-not the drunkard, nor his family. It does not build churchus, nor andow schools, nor dig canals, nor link State to State by the Iron bands of the railway. It does nothing for the public nothing for the the people, though it is not conducive to the individual. Why, then, should we longer submit to it? A law prohibitory of the liquor traffic, similar to that of Maine, rigidly enforced as it may be, would gradually lift from the people this enormous burden. Not in one year, nor in five, —perhaps not wholly in ten—but ultimately; and then, once freed from the weight which they had borne so long, they would look with aniazement upon the folly that had imposed and endured it, through years multiplied into years, and generations added to generations. In view of this Ram Tax, to needless and so enormous, borne patiently and dong by the sober and industrious, injurious to them and benefitting no one, who will venture to say ration of life rises to fifty-two years! and that the domand for a prohibitory law is un. These facts it is true are not entirely just or unreasonable? on that the Civil Power clusive; but they are worthy of consideration a true to the purpose of its ordination, while by political economists.

AGRICULTURE.

From Life Illustrated. TACTS FOR FARMERS.

Muck. - Many farms contain mines of gold n their deposits of swamp muck - the sweepings and scrapings of ages washed down and buried in some valley. To extract the gold, it must be dug in a dry time, and carted up to the high land fields, and converted into grains of wheat, rye, oats, corn, barley, and thence, by an easy transmutation, into grains

. Before using muck, it should be mixed with alkaline substances, such as ashes, lime, soda, etc., to neutralize the acid, which is the antiscptio that has preserved the vegetable fibres of its composition almost as unchanged as though they had mineral instead of vegeable substances.

Perhaps the best way to correct this acidity and decompose the muck is the following: Take a tub or barrel of water and set a basket of salt in it, so that the water just comes up to wet the bottom of the salt, and let it dissolve as long as it will. When it will take no more the water is saturated .-Use that to slack lime, and use that lime in the formation of your muck pile, at the rafe of a bushel to a cart load, and the muck will soon become as fine as loamy earth, and may be used as a top dressing for grass or grain, or, better still, be mixed with manure to form a compost. It should always be used in stables to absorb all the urine, and keep the place as free from offensive smell as a clean

MANUER should never be hauled to the field and dropped in little piles to await the time when it is wanted—often from fall till spring. It loses half its value. Manure hould never be exposed to the weather; and we think it should never be kept in a cellar under the barn, unless it is absolutely perfeetly disinfected by the use of muck, charcoal, peat, plaster, copperas, or something of the kind.

In the farm yard, manure should be stacked every day, and made to shed rain, or piled under a roof. It is nonsense to talk of making manure by letting cattle tramp clean straw in the mud. The straw is worth more clean than dirty. The chemistry of the dung heap ought to be taught in every country school. It is not "a dirty subject."

WHAT IS DIRT? The grain, meat, fruit

you eat are all dirt. You sit in the dirt and sleep in the dirt. The white linen table-cloth before you is dirt. The beautiful clean porclain plate, upon which you place your food, was dug out of a clay-bank last week. That bright steel blade, with which you are now itting the salt out of that crystal cup, if left in contact with that salt a little space - a very short fraction of eternity-would turn to dirt -very dirt. Even the caystal cup, reduced to powder and mixed with water, would change into the petato you are eating. And if crystal is dirt-nothing but dirt, what are you yourself? Dust thou art. You ed not be ashamed to talk about yourself or your fellow-what you are or he will be, in the course of nature's eternal changes-for by her immutable laws we are but dirt purified from its most offensive particles for a little season, and shall return again to our original condi-

LARGE FARMS AND SMALL FARMS.

It is one of the questions of political economy, whether a minute subdivision of the land loes, or does not, conduce to national prisperity. The verdict of England on this question appears to be against the system of minute subdivision; and the tendency there is to swallow up the small farmer, reduce him to the condition of a laborer, and annex his farm to the domain of his wealthier neighbor. Practically, the United States goes for subdivision, and there is a prevalent feeling decidform of a law. In France both systems have ly that enacts, what apposite and avaries de- been tried. Before the first revolution, the land of France was held in vast tracts by the nobles; but, after the republican triumph and the stampede of the nobility, a large portion day, the French farmers do not, on an average, measure twenty acres each.

Travelers have ridiculed the small holdings of the French farmers. It must, indeed, be confessed that the aspect of the rural districts of France is not pleasing to the eye of the sciand mean. The implements are rude. There are few mansions and fewer parks. All the evidences of large capital skillfully applied, which salute the eve on every side in the neighboring island, are wanting to the rural scenery of France. But appearances deceive. The small-farm system may be beneficial to picturesque.

The Paris Siecle has been investigating the subject of late. It has presented a mass of interesting facts, from which we deduce the

These new Territories are destined at no distant day to come in for a full participation of the commerce of the East. The surveys of the public lands in both of them are being prosecuted with great energy. Indications of extensive mineral resources more valuable than gold or silver, are presented in both .-It is believed that they will soon be able to afford an abundant supply of coal to our steam vessels in the Pacific. There are no agricultural lands on the globe superior to them, and hey open a wide field of solection to emigrants of homes and fortunes. The Surveyor Generals offices are now organized in both these Territories. The offices of the Registers and Receivers for both Territories are also estab-

The stock market has experienced changes with a series of depressing falls in prices, and much difficulty in making business arrangements; we are in the middle of the dull season. There seems a general disposition to repeal the Usury laws of Pennsylvania, North and South Carolina, New York, &c., and the necessity of action on this subject seems to elicit much interest, and disposition to move in this important matter.

There has been much curtailment among the banks, and the most prudent firms are preparing to meet our future emergencies .-Property has experienced great depreciations and our peculiar progressiveness is superceded by financial prostrations. The stoppage of many extensive works, in the Country, from inability to procure loans in Europe, and expiration of payments for these indebtedness's has resulted often disastrously. Contractions, must follow these too rapid strides, local causes of distress are very numerous, and the difficulty of Banks lending out money safely, has greatly diminished the lucrativeness of the system. Bedouins. Soon after we arrived, it being noon, the hour of prayer all the males were engaged in their devotions. The women informed me that they had never been at Juffar it would be a sin for them to go. I invited them to visit our bianah-the sisters—two of whom replied that it would be a great pleasure, but she knew that her brother would not permit it; he esteemed it a sin for a woman to visit any but her own relatives. ... The families seem to be all related to each other. They assured me that they lived in perfect harmony, and that they loved their bushands and children very dearly, their eyes kindling and their faces glowing with emotion as they spoke. They stated that the Bedouins regarded having more than one wife as a sip, while the Mohammedans of towns and cities allow it. I was repeatedly assured that no males, not even the young lads of his people, were ever permitted to see the wife of the Sheik, or enter her tent Notwithstanding their urgent entreaties to remain over night, we excused ourselves on acof such a step, and soon after three o'clock; with their kind benedictions, we quietly left their encampment, and returned safely home before dark. The next day, Abdallab in-formed me they were much disappointed, as they had killed a lamb, and were preparing a feast for us. Since that time the Sheik visited us at our house, one and a half miles from Jaffa, and also here at our work in the bianah. He expresses an carnest wish that we would take some of his land, any situations we may choose, even the old mill-seat, and build and plant near him. Of his own accord he asked if we would not take his sons and teach them. He has one of ten years.—

It is stated that upwards of three thousand inchanies are now without employment in the city of Newark, and that the greatest destitution prevails among the largest portion of them. In view of this fact an association for their relief has been formed, and the city has oden divided into thirty-nine districts, and in each district a visitor has been chosen, selected from the most pillanthropic citizens, whose duty it is to accertain who are in the most needy circumstances, and afford relief. The Old and the New Year.

Before we again have an opportunity of communing with our readers, and visiting them in their homes, and by their pleasant firesides, through the medium of our weekly newspaper, to convey to them the news of the day, and a record of the doings of the community, the present year with all its important events will have passed away and be numbered with the things that were, but are not, and a new year, fraught with important interests to man will have commenced its existence.

In the ceaseless and untiring course of time, which waits not for the convenience or wishes of man, but hurries bim forward in its onward progress, carrying him with it, willing or unwilling to his final end, it is well that there should be some period or point of time, when he shall be specially induced to look back upon the past and forward upon the future. The closing of the old, and the opening of the new year is such a time, and we should upon these occasions review the both old and young; of the smiling faces and past and make preparations for the future.-How few of us will really and seriously do so. it is more natural to cover up and forget the past, and to enter without thought or prepation upon the busy scenes of the future.

The young, naturally looking forward to coming time with sanguine expectations of happiness, with an instinctive consciousness that their importance in society, their power of accomplishing their wishes, their capacity for enjoyment, for energy and action is inereasing with their years, have little to induce them to think of the past or to cloud their will reach, and when we at down to write, visions in anticipation of the future. Those our mind was irresistably drawn into the just budding into manhood, preparing to take train of thoughts in which we have indulged. their places in the busy and important transactions of life, are eagerly looking forward to events, and in the improvements which have this important period. To them, time drags taken place, with us, as a community, not onthat much nearer the gratification of their ambition.

Or have we spent our time, and our strength, in the pursuit of the pleasures, the honors or the tiches of the world? These are serious questions, which men ought to ask themselves on this occasion, and should in entering upon the new year resolve, that if they cannot now answer them satisfactorily, they will endeavor to be better prepared for such an examination at the close of another year.

We would not be understood as condemning the proper indulgence in the pleasures of the world; by no means, a benificent Creator has surrounded us with sources of pleasures, and has given us capacities for their enjoyment; nstinct to prompt us in our selection, and reason and conscience to control us in their

Nor would not we condemn the possession or even the desire for the honor of place or station in society; or a participation in the official duties of the country; these things are alike honorable, and men may as effectually and efficiently, turn the talents committed to them, to the profit of themselves, their fellow men, and the honor of God, while engaged in the highest official stations, as anywhere else. Neither would we condomn due diligence in laying up that which constitutes the wealth of the world-its money.-It is only the hearding of money, the devotion to its accumulation, which eventuates in covetousness and idolatry, dries up the fountains of humanity, wraps the man in the folds of pure selfishness, and blinds him to the realities of the future, that we would condemn.

But we did not, when we get down to talk by our pen, with our reeders, intend to give it would have been more in accordance with the following advertisement:our general character, to have gossiped cheerfully of the festivities and pleasures of the holiday season; of the merry Christmas and the happy New Year; of the beautiful productions of art and industry collected for the Philadelphia to New York, in one day and a amusement, the pleasure and the profit of graceful figures of our young ladies, bouyant and the journey performed in the above menour streets; and of the universal appearance jamin David's at the sign of the George, at of satisfaction and pleasure, which has exhibited itself in the moving mass of mortals which has thronged our streets.

We however, the assistant editor, are, spite of ourself growing old, we have lived almost three score, of the three score and ten years allotted to man, as the limit, which in almost any circumstances he may hope to reach to: and to which he is constantly reminded few The past year has been important in its

Improvement in the Mode and Speed of Travel.

Our attention has been particularly direct ed to this subject by an article in a late number of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.-In the year 1754, just one hundred years ago, Benj. Franklin gave notice, that a mail would be carried from Philadelphia to New York, three times a week, in the Summer and once a week in the Winter. Previous to Post Master Franklin's wonderful effort in eccelerating the communication between the cities, the mail had been sent from Philadelphia to New York, but once a week in Summer, and once a fortnight in Winter. At this time and for years after, the mail bags were carried on horsehack.

The American Weekly Mercury of March 20,1735 made the following announcement. Post office, Philada. Saturday, March 22, hours, A. M. The Northern Post which was to set out from New York, on Monday ast and arrive at this office on Wednesday evening, in order to perform his stage as usual is not yet come in, which has occasioned the delay of this paper.

In the year 1771, a great improvement took place; a stage wagon was started, which promised to perform the journey between the them a lecture, or to preach them a sermon; two cities, in a day and a half as appears by Wednesday, Dec. 28 .- Wheat is plenty and dull at previous rates, and about 1500 good Pennsylvania Red sold at 210a212 ets. White is held above the views of buyers.— Corn continues scarce and in request at 90a 92 cents for new and old Yellow. Small sales of new are reported at the latter rate from store. Rye and Oats are also in good demand with but little offering. The former is quoted at 125 cents, and the latter at 55 ents per bushel for Pennsylvania. There is no change in Groceries, and the transactions to day are moderate. The Provision trade is very inactive and prices about the same.— Seeds—No alteration, and Cloverseed very scarce.

The Cincinnati Gazette says it is a mistake that Judge McLean approved a decision that free people of color cannot sue in the Courts of the United States. This right, according to the Judge's decision, does not depend upon color, but upon citizenship. In the States where blacks are recognized as citizens, they may appeal to the courts of the United States.

The Morris Jerseyman states that the snowbanks in some parts of that country are very large, and travel is not yet perfectly safe. In the neighborhood of Parsippany, it is said that persons have been imbedded to such an extent as to require several hours to extricate themselves.

The Trenton State Gazette says:-"Mr. Henry Wurts, of Newark, the chemist at maked to the geological survey of our State now has his labratory complete, and is very busily engaged in making analyses of the vamous minerals and earths, specimens of which have been collected by Dr. Kitchell, and the corps under his direction. The town also contains one Public School, your juveniles to his Academy, and if they don't become scientific scholars, you may charge me with telling what the Vermont boys call a thumper.

The village likewise can boast of a singing class under the tuition of Mr. R. V. Downing, who is an excellent teacher, and unceasing in his efforts to put them through. This class meets once a week and indeed such proficiency have they made that there is strong talk of their singing anthems soon, which thing of course cannot be done but by Amateur singers. The principal female singers are Miss Rachel Lore, with her clear silvery voice but who drags a little on the half notes, Miss Ruth Tubman who is a pretty girl and sings sweetly, Miss Ella Robbins, whose education and accomplishments are so commendable for one of her age, for she is but a school girl; these and a number of others too tedious to mention compose the female list, Lizzie Sloan is also a member of the class, but being only slightly acquainted, we will drop her name at present. Now comes the B'hoys .-Garner Tullis Esq., leads on the Bass, but as Doesticks says, his voice sometimes gets unruly among the bass notes and he cuts a few monkey shines in the treble, but after struggling manfully with a few variations he then gets back on the bass again. But he is withal, quite a good singer. Bolivar Lore, one of the Town's most obliging Merchants comes next; John T. Ladow, Jacob Campbell, Philip Mints and some others, fill up the ma roices. So much for the singing class.

The place contains one Hotel, where the weary traveller can find rest, a good table set to refresh his appetite, and lodging if desired; his horse likewise, if he has one, can be accommodated. There are three stores in the village kept by Messrs. Lore, Orr, and Burt, all worthy enterprising men. One thing in regard to the place we would not forget to mention, though we do so with some regret The subject of Education is much neglected there. Some of the people seem to think everything else of more importance than learning; they think that as their fathers lived and as they have lived, so may their children.

They forget that 'Tis Education forms the common mind, Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined. We hope however that our friends at Di-riding Creek, will awake up to this matter and see the necessity of giving their children liberal and thorough education, and as a hint to the wise is sufficient, I will forbear speaking further upon the subject. And now Mr. Editor, as I have already lengthened out my remarks longer than I had designed, I will for the present lay down my pen until a future period. yours &c.,

The Vienna Treaty of Alliance.

On the 2d of December, a treaty of alliance was signed at Vienna, between Austria, France and England. The exact terms are not known, but are surmised as follows: Firstly, that Austria regards the violation of the Turkish territory as a war against herself .from Count Nesselrode, setting forth the sented to us in the four points, a basis which terms on which the Czar will assent to peace namely: first, a protection of the whole Chrisof the Danubé..

It is indeed stated, but should him in her name. be received with caution, that at a council held on the sixth, the King of Prussia determined to unite in the treaty, with a view to bring the war to a cless.

Most of the Germanic States are with hast. putting their armies on a war footing. The present opportunity for peace is probably the last, and if this be rejected, we may be prepared to see next spring military operations on as large a scale as they were during the great wars of the French empire.

The Seige of Sebastopol.

The news from Sebastopol is to Nov. 28th. Nothing decisive had occurred. Both beligcrants were receiving numerous reinforcements. The allies were strengthening their position, but the fire had been slock on both sides. It had been raining in torrents, and the allies were going into the 25th ult., which was repulsed by the English, who took nine guns. On the next day an attack was made on the French lines, which was also repulsed with a Russian loss of 230 and a French loss of 75. It was stated that several hundred Russian wagons, with provisions for Sebastopol, were lost in a snow storm, and that the supplies in the city would only last fourteen

The same number of the St. Petersburg Journal contains a report from Gen Dannenberg on the battle of Inkerman, in which the blame of the failure of the attack is thrown on Gen. Seimonoff, who advarced with the right column too precipitately instead of halting until the left column made its attack.

It also contains a report from Prince Menschikoff to the Emperor, certifying that the Grand Dukes Michael and Nicholas behaved with the greatest bravery at and after the battle of lukermann, and praying the Emperor to grant them the Order of St. George of the Fourth Class, for military merit. This prayer the Emperor has been graciously pleased to grant.

The Adhesion of Prussia.

PARIS, Dec. 7 .- A telegraph from Berlin states that the new treaty between Austria and the Western Powers had been sent there, treaty was determined on.

This produced great surprise among the Russian party. The public both there and here has received this change most favorably, and the funds have risen greatly. The treaty is very shortly to be published.

Russian and British Exchanges .- It is The deliberations of the Germanic Diet blockaded by the combined fleets when the true that the Russian ports on the Baltic are contrary, Austria insists that the following the Russians. The Philadelphia Ledger observes that the blockade so far from reducing the exports of Russia, has only diminished the capacity of England to pay for them othcrwise than in gold. In the early part of last spring, under the prospects of hostilities, exchange on Loudon fell below par at St. Petersburg. But while Sir Charles Napier was lying in the Baltic, exchange rose above par, and gold has in consequence been drawn from the Bank of England to be transported to the Russian capital. The Russians ship their hemp, hides, tallow, &c., from Russian ports while they cannot receive in exchange, s formerly, raw cotton, sugar and coffee from British ports. England has taken products of Russia, worth thirty-five millions of dollars since the war begun, while Russia has not tiken above six millions in return. In fact, says the Ledger, 'in some articles the import from Russia into England has been heavier this year than ever, and the prices of those articles to England have been nearly twice as great as they were before.' Thus England is forced to disburse gold to an unprecedented amount, actually furnishing Russia with those sinews of war in which she is most deficient; for it is not men that the Emperor wants, but money. The English newspapers re very angry at this state of things, and The St. Petersburg Journal of Nov. 21 quantities of lead to Prussian ports, to be contains a report from Prince Meuschikoff to then carriel into Russia to be manufactured into musket balls. > Foreign Convicts and Paupers .- A new proof that Europe is thrus ing her thousands of degraded population anually upon our shores, is seen in the fact that the ship Roehambeau arrived at New York on Wednesday with 12 convicts and 150 paupers, that had been shipped at Antwerp for the United States, by the Belgian Government. The po ice caused the convicts to be immediately arrested, when they were locked up in the Tombs, to wait there until some provision can be made to convey them back to Belgium .-The paupers will have to be provided for by the city of New York, which is already weighed down almost to bankruptcy by the excessive amount of taxes laid upon it for every conceivable purpose, just and unjust. While the convicts are to be sent home, the paupers will in five years, rank themselves among our most "intelligent" and patriotic voters, understanding more of the constitution than most of the native born—an effect of our institutions upon this clement, when brought into sudden contact with them .- Mercary.

The St, Patrick reports seeing the ship Lidy Franklin about ten days ago, from Liverpool for New York. The St. Patrick's passengers were all saved and brought to the city by several fishing schooners. AGNEW & CO, 196 CHESNUT St., Below 8th. Philadelphia, Dec. 16, 1854. MATCHES! MATCHES!

JOHN DONNELLY, Manufacturer and Inventor of Safety Patent Square Upright Wood Box Matches;

No. 108 North Fourth St. (above Race), Philada. MATCHES having become an indispensable ATCHES having become an indispensable article in housekeeping, the subscriber, after a great sacrifice of time and money, is enabled to offer to the public an article at once combining Utility and Cheapness. The inventor knowing the danger apprehended on account of the flimsy manner in which Matches are generally packed in particle of the flimsy of his per, has by the aid of new steam machinery of his own invention, succeeded in getting up a Safety Patent Square Upright Wood Box; this box is far preferrable, inasmuch that it occupies no more room than the old round wood box, and contains at least Two Hundred per cent more matches, which, to Shippers, is considerable advantage. It is entirely new, and secure against moisture and spon-taneous combustion, and dispels all danger on transportation by means of railroad, steamboat or any other mode of conveyance. These matches are packed so that one gross or more may be shipped to any part of the world with perfect safety. They are the most desirable article for home consumption, and the Southern and Western markets, that have even been invented. Dealers and Shippers will do well to call and examine for themselves.

So These Matches are WARRANTED to be superior to anything heretofore offered to the public.

Perham's 3d Gift Enterprise. 60,000 Tickets already Sold. Call for KIN (I. MASS MEETING of Share holders, to diversing on the disposition of the Gift Property to the Shareholders. 'T a meeting of the Shareholders in Perham's July the following resolution was adopted: "Resolved. That so, soon as it is ascertained that 89,000 of the Gift Tickets issued by Mr. Perham in his third enterprise, are sold, the Committoe shall call the chareholders together at the most convenient place, for the purpose of instructing said committee in regard to the manner of disposing of the Gift Property.

Having learned from Mr. Perham that 60,000 of said tickets were sold, and that in all probability the remaining 20,000 called for by the above resolution, would be sold by the first day of January next, we have determined, in accordance with the above opinion, to call a Mass Meeting of the Shareholders, at some place to be hereafter named, on the 17th day of January, 1855, for the purpose, designated by the resolution.

ROBERT BEATTY, Jr.) J. LATHROP, Committee. B. S. ADAMS. 100,000 Tickets only at $1 each will be sold Each Ticket will admit FOUR Persons, all at orec. or portions at different times, to
