MORAL.

From the Newark Mercury. HOME THOUGHTS.

Talk and act as we may in the day time id the bustle and strife of life, there is at ne an influence that moulds our nature and kes us wiser and better. Night, too, has associative influence, thrown around it as ening falls, which cannot be lightly estiited; but a Winter Night has ever a strange cination in its spell. Last night we were earning home thoughts, silently, alone, and swept on into the dead past where the dry wes rustle with every breath of rememnce. No doubt others were as busy as ttered not to us as silently the pictured enes rose up before us with a power which emed to overmaster us.

We rose from the table and strove to shake the saddenning memories. From the winound, and we wandered away from our first me scences which would be brought before could we step unseen into the dwellings of city. How many joyous tableaux we ight have gazed upon, opening the most adsome springs of the heart! In how maa home might we have dropped upon those hose life seemed crowned with affection's oicest gifts! In some, perhaps, we might ive looked upon a mother watching with bdued and holy joy the slumber of her ruggling with some bitter sorrow. But Asodeus was not with us, and we did not atempt to stir from our quiet domicil, for even is we gazed out, the cold night wind swept lown the open street with that melancholy moan which sounds so saddening at that hour. Again, as come the impulsive thoughts which master our existence, the past swells ip before us, as if the dead were once more walking with the living. As the silent hours sweep on, these bygone scenes increase in distinctness and power, and thoughts of clien time live ancw in the light of other days. -Who has not at such a time recalled each past error, each unworthy aim, and turned anew to life with better and loftier aspirations? Thus the home thoughts become a monitor

From the Smyrna Times. A BIRTHDAY REVERIE.

BY CHARLIE.

" My cheek is burnt with eastern suns; My boyish blood more tamely runs."

My birthday! Well, really it like to have passed away without due recognition. I purposed to have celebrated it by the performance of some singular and erratic act or exploit that would have caused it to have been distinctly remembered. One's birthday don't come but once a year, I believe. I expect some people wishes theirs didn't come that often! They len't want to learn the "melancholy truth that they are growing—old." But since mine has passed away without the worl's knowing anything about it, I'll sit down and have a pleasant "chat' with the beautiful and social reader. -Byron says,

"It's pleasant sure to see one's name in print," but it's much more pleasant, I think, to know that sweet eyes will look upon this page, and perchance, remember me, when this gay, wild heart, is hushed and still. Percival says

"The world is full of poetry; the air Is living with its spirit; and the waves Dance to the music of its melodies, And sparkle in its brightness," but I have found it to be not alone "fall of poetry," but of heauty and loveliness, and I don't feel disposed to ridicule a world wherein there is so much to love, to admire, and to be thankful for. Life has not been all poetry and sunshine with me, gentle reader. It has had its days of toil and its nights of study-its cares, its sorrows, and its repulsive duties. And I have sometimes felt as though my heart would sink beneath the load, and, perchance, it would have done so, had it not have been for the kindly encouragement of a few warm-hearted friends who have stood by me, in every nour of darkness and trial, and have whispered-"don't despond, 'there's a better time coming." I need'nt tell you, dear reader, who they are. They'll know, when they look up-

The comnonest accessaries of a hospital are wanting; there is not the least sttention paid to decency or cleanliness—the stench is appalling the fetid air can barely struggle out to taint the atmosphere, save through the chinks in the walls and roofs, and for all I can observe, these men die without the least effort being made to save them. gives an account of a new application of the art of Photography, which, if correct, threatens to annihilate all security in paper currency. He says that by means of this art copies of bank notes have been, and copies of all forms of printing may be made; and that, too; with such perfection and accuracy that no one will be able to detect the counterfeit, or distinguish it from the genuine. Experiment has proved that the skill of bank officers, brokers and engravers is defied and foiled by this wonderful and dangerous mode of duplication; Cashiers cannot tell their own bank notes from the copies, nor can any man be sure of his own signature, by any ordinary test; and so complete is the art that even the conterfeit bears a microscopic scruting without yielding any chance of detection. The writer says: 'It is needless for engravers to increase their skill, as every step they take in advance is followed with mathematical accuracy by Photography, which copies the red or brown backs of the notes as easily as their faces."

A gentleman living in Brussels, somewhat troubled by cobwebs and spots in his eyes, rubbed them one night with a few drops of extract of belladous. In the morning the cobwebs had gone, but the whole outer face of the world had changed. His newspaper, which had been placed by his bedside, was Q. > The stringency of the times, besided pressing upon the people generally, has had its effect upon the different corporations. The freighting business of the various railroads is said to be not more than one-half what it was a year ago. Some of the roads which then required sometimes as many as three locomotives to carry the freight to its destination, now need but one, and have searcely enough for that one to do. The reason for this is obvious. Dealers are not buying and laying in more than built the stock they were then, and hence there is not so much freighting.

BY TELEGRAPH.

TRENTON, Jan. 25, 1855. The Prohibitory Bill passed the House day at one o'clock, 35 to 22. Wells and Keen voting in the affirmative. W. H. B. The most important amendment introduced into the bill was the change of the election at which it is to be submitted to the people, from the day of the general fall election to is expected to be arranged, and brought forthe first Tuesday in October. The law is to go into effect on the following February, and if disapproved by the people, the Legislature will have an opportunity to repeal it.

POETRY.-We have received from a correspondent in Philadelphia, a poetical effusion from the nen of a lady of that city for which he will accept our thanks. We shall be glad to receive a continuation of articles from the same source. It will appear next week.

We learn that C. E. Elmer, Esq., has sold the house which he formerly occupied to Mr. Groscup, who purposes to remodel it and turn it into stores. It is one of the most desirable locations in town, and well calculated for a business stand. Our town will go ahead spite of hard times and money pressures.

NEW IMPROVEMENTS .- Our enterprising neighbor Wm. G. Maul, determined not to be behind hand with his brother Merchants, has been putting up a new front to his Store, which is now with its new front, back lights and sky light a very commodious, light and airy room. He can show his excellent assortment of cheap goods to advantage. Men like him who are determined to do business and do it right, deserve and will receive patronage.

Curiosity.-We were shown a few days since a great curiosity in the Egg way. Mr. Brookfield had purchased of Mr. Charles H. Davis, of Shiloh, some poultry, among which was one hen remarkably plump and large, which he had the curiosity to open and examine, when he found to his surprise eleven full sized eggs, perfect in form, covered with soft shells, but without any appearance of the formation of the hard shell; there was no small or partly formed eggs, the whole clutch or laying, was fully grown but had been unnaturally retained. We have not been able to learn anything of the history of the hen, or how she was affected while living by the unnatural retention of such a number of eggs.-Here was evidently a deficiency in the supply of lime for the formation of the hard shell, and a want of power to expel the eggs in preper season in their soft state. A useful lesson may be learned by those who keep hens. from this case, it is quite probable that many hens die from the accumulation of eggs, which they cannot expel, from the want of a proper accrue to its bill holders; we shall however. consistence of their outside covering.

We have received the Ladies' Christian Annual, for January. It is a neatly gotten 'up monthly of 32 octavo pages, published in the Bulletin Buildings, 3d story, by James Challen, at $1 per annum, or $5 for six cop- every day business transactions, and who are ble, if it can be built by giving away a pories, and $15 for twenty copies.

GODEE and GRAHAM, have come duly to hand, richly laden with Literary Jewels, La-

This Society held its annual meeting at the Court House in Bridgeton on Wednesday.-The Committee appointed for that purpose reported the Constitution and By-Laws alterel and amended, which after consideration and amendment by the Society was adopted. The schedule of premiums to be awarded by the Society at its next exhibition was re ported by the Committee and approved.

The Treasurer reported a balance in his ands of about six hundred and forty dollars. The secretary read a statement of the rise and progress of the Society, the present number of members and the proportions coming from the different townships.

The President placed on the table for disribution a quantity of garden seeds nicely done up in packages with directions for planting sent to him from the Patent Office at Washington, received there from England. The collection consisted of twelve varieties.

The Executive Committee will publish the Schedule of Premiums and the awarding committees within sixty-days.

The meeting was well attended, was harmonious in its action and exhibited a commendable zeal for the interest and successful prosecution of the objects of the Association. The officers for the coming year were

THE STORM .- We were visited on Sunday night with a very severe storm—the wind was unusually high, blowing the vessels in our barbor from their moorings. We do not learn that any serious damages were sustained in our town or its vicinity-a noble locust at the corner near the Court House, which has for many years stoad an emblem of bye gone days, was prostrated, and the fences around the country were many of them blown down. The tin roofing of the Academy was started from its fastenings and came very near being carried off.

We learn that in Philadelphia and Camden, much damage was done, houses blown down, roofs carried off, vessels sunk and otherways injured at the wharves; so also in N. York and other places, we do not however learn that any lives have been lost. Along our coast we presume we shall hear of tronbles and losses.

STATE LEGISLATURE. Legislation is not a very active business in these days any how, there is usually a large number of new hands at the business, who make their appearance on the stage at every session; these require time to get into harness, and get accustomed to new scenes and new The Public are respectfully invited to at- associations, before they are in working order; they must form acquaintances, and learn that others are as ignorant of the business there as themselves, before they venture to come out and show themselves. They are naturally distracted for a time, with the multiform wants and projects which are urged upon their attention from so many different sources, the new importance which is insensibly impressed upon their estimation of their individual selves, induces them, upon the principle that great bodies move slow, to be cautious how they hurry into business. Besides the work ward by the old members, who have been schooled in the old routine of slow movements; we must not wonder then that half of the forty days have gone by with but little accomplished. But they have not been idle, preparations have been made for action, and as much has been accomplished as usual so early in the Session. In the Senate, the Bank question has been debated at some length, and Mr. Hoxsey has defended his pet, the General Banking Law, and denounced with his utmost power the old or special banking system; after an obstinate fight however, in which he resorted to every means to prevent it, a test vote was had in the Senate which proves that a considerable majority of that body will go for renewing the charters of well conducted Banks, and probably granting new charters where they are called for by the business necessities of the people. In re-chartering old banks or chartering new ones, prudent care will be taken to secure bill holders as far as possible from danger of loss, withusefulness of the banks.

> The advocates of the general banking law money, while they contend, that the issues of the general banks, being based upon sufficient securities deposited with the proper State officer, are the real representatives of money perfectly safe, there being no danger but what the bills will be, in all cases, paid dollar for it works practically. The Merchants Bank at Bridgeton was nominally located here; its business however was in New York or somewhere else, no more being done here than was sufficient to answer the requirements of the law. Its circulation was we believe properly and sufficiently secure, and we presume that all its bills will be finally paid, but it does not follow, that it has not been an imposition upon the public, a deep laid scheme to make money out of the laboring poor, and that many of them will not suffer great loss, as well as inconvenience in realizing any thing from its notes. We know but little of its concerns, and dont know certainly that any loss will suppose what may, or at least might have happened. Suppose this bank had in circulation fifty thousand dollars, in bills which were in the hands of manufacturers, mechanwho need their funds for their sustenance, or We say, give us the road as speedily as possiunable to fund money or hold it without use tion of the land on its borders. for the period allowed by law for the settlement of the affairs of the bank and the redemption of the bills. The subject nearly all of these bills, will in a short time for their next meeting which will be the 5th find their way to the brokers office. And of the next month, will be Chickens; this who employs the broker and furnishes him will be the first time this subject has been the money to buy up these bills. We of brought before the society, and now as the course do not know, but it is quite possible excitement has considerably abated about it is the banker, and he thus buys up his own this Chicken speculation, we hope to learn notes for two thirds of what they call for, and is thus soon prepared to demand of the State his securities in exchange for the bills redeemed. This is then heralded to the world as an evidence of the security of this method of banking. All the circulation has been redeemed, every note been paid dollar for dollar, when in truth, the poor honest laborer or other holder, has been fleeced, most shamefully fleeced out of his hard earnings. Our financier, who is represented by Mr. Hoxsey as so moderate in his desires, so easily satisfied with a reasonable profit on his banking operations; after having realized fifty per cent on his closing operation, may now turn round and say to the State, keep the securities and furnish me with another batch of notes for a Mechanics bank at Bridgeton. I have done pretty well by the Merchants Bank, now I will try a Mechanics Bank. Now we dont pretend that this is a literal history of any Bank, we only give it as what might be. We are however entirely satisfied, after having been for a time carried away somewhat by that it should be done away with. Our best source of safety after all for banking operations, is the known character of the officers. Let Banks be chartered where the business of a place require banking facilities, and locaed, and the business done, where the people know and are interested in knowing, the character and standing of those who manage their concerns. Let the State require all the seeurity for the faithful transactions of the years 5 months. bank, which in the nature of the case can be given, and although the public may possibly still occasionally suffer loss, they will be much safer, than in the hands of speculators who can so easily avail themselves of the CONGRESS. The doings of Congress, with the exception of their action upon Pacific Railroad Bill, has not possessed much interest for a time passed; the regular course of business is going on probably quite as well as usual, and no doubt but the appropriation bill, which will secure the pay of the members and the various officials, will be got through with.-The Senate have passed their spare time in talking about an improvement or alteration in the judiciary system, including increase of out unnecessarily restricting the operations or | pay to the judges; there seems however very little harmony of sentiment amongst the great men as to how, the desired improvement is and opponents of the special banks, represent to be effected, it is not very probable that a the issues of the latter, as mere rags or paper | definite result will be reached this session. promises to pay, which should not be called The members of Congress would like a pretty considerable increase of their own pay, if they could bring it about without endangering their popularity, it is however a ticklish subject and we presume a majority had much rather hold on to what they now get than to take more at the risk of having leave to stay dollar. Now this is all very plausible, and is at home. In the House, the great subject is an admirable system in theory; let us see how | the Pacific Railroad. In some form or other we presume a bill is to be passed, which we presume will eventuate in the construction of a road to California sometime; it may be much sooner than we anticipate; great things are done in our country and our days, but we judge that a speedy prosecution of this enterprise need not be looked for. We think there is evidently a majority in the House favorable to the bill, though they differ as to the details. As usual there are several simon pure constructionists who can find no constitutional authority for the bill, but these men would strip Congress of all power to do anything, but cater to the wants of the South, hunt up their slaves for them, and protect the peculiar institutions.

If alternate sections of public lands on each side of the road, will secure its construction, a great public good will be accomplished, without cost to the nation, for the remaining ies, laborers, farmers or producers of any kind portions will be the more readily disposed of.

DIED.

At Shiloh Jan. 16, 1855, with the Typhoid fever, connected with the inflamation of the ungs, after an illness of eighteen days, Mrs. Sa-BAH ANN, wife of Rev. W. B. Gillett, aged 46

She professed religion when young, and for many years was a fathful helper to her husband in the work of the gospel ministry, having journeyed with him in his missionary labors in Western New York and Pennsylvania, thousands of miles thro' heat and cold, storm and sunshine, to promote her Master's cause in the earth.

During her sickness she enjoyed much of her Saviour's presence, being very anxious to depart and to be with Christ, believing that her work was done, yet regretting that it was not done better. She arranged all her domestic affairs with as great composure as though she had been going journey, and left messages to be sent to her distant friends, particularly to those who have gone as missionaries to foreign lands. Her funeral was attended the 18th by a large concourse of mourning friends. She has left a husband, three children, and many near and dear friends to morn

He was emphatically a Bible Christian, it having been his constant habit for a long time before his death, to read that blessed book entire ly through each year, nor did he fail to practice what he read. It was not surprising therefore that his last illness though protracted and severe, was endured with holy calmness and resignation, and that he met death at last

"Sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust." His funeral was attended by a numerous congregation on Sabbath the 21st inst., at the Commerce St. M. E. Trenton, Jan. 21, 1855. I find there is a very general disposition among the leading Americans of of the State to rid their organization of its secret operation. While persuaded that its secret charneter has contributed greatly to its amazingly rapid developement, they fear that, having served this purpose, it will hereafter prove an injury rather than a benefit, all experience having demonstrated that publicity is the law of American affairs, and that every political agency which seeks to operate powerfully upon those affairs, must rigidly observe it. It is not all improbable, therefore, that we shall have an open and distinct American Party in this State. That it will be a powerful Party, none can doubt. The design of amending the naturalization laws and the spirit of resistance to foreign influence, both internal and external, and the disposition to hold the living ideas and the solid rules of the early days of the Republic, in distinction from the empty chimerac of modorn radicalism, are calculated to pre-dispess all truly conservative men in its favor, and will in the end consolidate a party made up, as we may trust, of the best elements of all those now existing, which shall exert a redeeming and an abiding influence upon the destinies of our commonwealth and the country, There are agencies in operation, not yet distinctly manifest to the public eye, which are fast producing this result. It is sufficient that it will advance rapidly enough to have a most important bearing upon the next election.

The annual report of the State Directors of the Camden and Amboy Railroad, was presented this afternoon. I learn therefrom that the increase in the value of their property during the year 1854, was about $150,000. The gross receipts of the Company, from their road and branch, for the year ending December 31, 1854, amounted to $1,682,-486 23, and the expenditures for the same period were, $1,135,029 10, showing an excess of earnings over expenditures of $552,-457 13. The nett carnings of the Delaware and Raritan Canal for the year, were $303,-186 41. The whole revenue accruing to the State for the year 1854, from all sources, was $134,071 12, of which $61,175 43, accrued from transit duty on the Railroad; the sum of $14,035 69 for transit duty on the Canal-the balance from regular dividends upon the steek of the Companies and from interest on their bonds held by the State.

You will recollect that the Governor in his message recommended that the circulation of small notes should be prohibited. As a sort of carollary to this, I notice that on Thursday the New York Senate by a vote of 19 to 5 repealed the law prohibiting the circulation of small hills, belonging to banks in other States, which was adopted while Mr. Marcy was Governor. This action then is quite deknew it was in existence. If the question were one of general application, and if small but to prevent the issuing of such bills by our own sound and safe institutions only to have the blank filled up by the money of other States, would certainly be an act of the great-

Cor. of the Newark Daily Advertiser.

The Bank controversy was again resumed in the Senate to-day, and will probably eccuby a prominent share of attention during the present week. Mr. A. V. Bonnel introduced into the Senate to-day, a bill for appointing; by joint the duties now under the care of the Bank Commissioners, receiving an annual salary. The Joint meeting will not probably occur during the present week, as the committees on the Treasurer's accounts and the State Prison have not yet finished their duties .-The affairs of the latter institution will undergo a more thorough investigation than they have for several years past, and if there is any reason for the complaints made last year. it will be exposed. The list of candidates for the leading offices remains about the same as previously noticed- The temperance men are making a determined stand for Enoch Knowles or Mercer, as keeper of the State Prison, and a portion of the Americans are strongly urging Mr. Livingston, of Mercer, us State Treasurer. It will be perceived that Hon. Henry Barnard, the distinguished friend of Common Schools from Conn., has been invited to deliver an address before the Legislature on the subject of education. He is now in Washington and will probably return on Thursday or Friday. No important changes in the school laws are proposed at the present session but the subject of establishing a Normal school will be brought forward, and the chances for its success are very favorable. Its necessity is considered by many leading men to be apparent and inevitable, if our State is to possess a complete and efficient Common School system. The Absecum Ruilroad, I am informed, is business. The road-which runs from Camden to Absecum-has proved a losing con cern to its original owners, like many others which are now thriving and prosperous. The track is well laid, and beside the summer passenger transportation, there is a large amount of freighting. When connected with Cape May by the intersection of the Delaware and Raritan Bay Railroad, it will become the route for travel between the watering place and Philadelphia-thus superseding the necessity of constructing the West Jer sey Railroad. The Camden & Amboy R. R. Company, are preparing it is said to build the latter road, and held a meeting on the subject last week at Princeton. It will be constructed, however, only to Bridgeton-the part of the route between this place and Cam-

The efforts for the relief of the poor continuc. In some cases it has been found that relief has been illy bestowed, but care is taken to avoid further imposition. The Alms-house continues full, and applications of the pose of aiding Mayor Wood's efforts to suppoor are on the increase.

The Foreign Intelligence.- The more complete and thorough intelligence furnished by the Canada's mails opens to us a new page in the history of the deadly and determined contest new waging in Europe. The articles of the London Times increase in force and virulence in reference to the mismanagement of the British army in the Crimea and the consequent loss of life which it entails. It: urges a change in the control of the war in the most powerful appeals to the public sentiment. It describes the army as a brave mob left to perish by the gross mismanagement of its officers, and thinks those who died gloriously at Balaklava and Inkermann ought not to be mourned so much as they who perish, unnamed and unknown, by hardships and disease. While it is admitted that the British troops are in a miserable condition, the ferce of the allies if continually being increased, independent of the 30,000 Turks under the command of Omer Pasha, and there is little doubt but that a most determined effort will be made to carry Sebastopol by assault. Rumor states that the attack was to be made en the 28th of December, as the approaches of the siege are completed, and the works are ready for a cannonade from 300 guns. The English are within 200 yards of the entrenchments and the French within 108 yards, thus exhibiting the certainty with which the siege has progressed, despite the calamities attend-

Negotiations are still in progress on the part of the great powers, but nothing has transpired which would indicate a prospect of place Prussia is not well pleased with the Isola el condition in which she is placed by the action of Austria, and is attempting still further to mystify her position; but she is no longer taken into conference at Vienna by the representativees of the allied powers. The new French loan will be taken as readily as the old one, and in the same popular manner. but Great Britain experiences more obstacles in cularging her army. The most of the Continental Kingdoms have already taken ground against the introduction of their subcets into the foreign legion about to be esblished, although it is probable that it will oc formed from all nations. The French have a legion of this description actually in the Crimea, known as General Bosquet's division, and it behaved very well at Alma and Inkermann. From other portions of Europe there is nothing of marked interest, or that would attract the attention of our readers. Newark Mercury.

From the Woodbury Constitution. Missing -The citizens of this place were much alarmed on Saturday last, 14th inst., on hearing of the sudden disappearance of Isaac Thompson, a respectable middle aged farmer, living on a small farm, near this village. Ris state of mind on the evening previous to his leaving was such as to induce his cisive as to their opinion of such a humbug home privately before day, with an intent, friends and neighbors to believe that he left proposition, and yet it was totally unnecessa-no one knows, and from the fact of a hat being found early on that morning, on the steamboat wharf supposed to be his, strengthpaper money could be driven from circulation, and the day following was spent without sucthe subject would be worthy of consideration; cess in diagging the Creek, under the hope that if drowned his neighbors and friends would find his body. Mr. Thompson was well known in the county, and having left 2 motherless children, it is hoped that any peron knowing anything of his where bouts, (whether dead or alive,) will have the goodness to make known the same to the Postmaster at Bridgeport, and they will confer a great favor on his many friends.
