For the West Jersey Pioneer. THE AGED SINNER'S DEATH-BED.

Upon his dying couch there lay An aged man, gray-haired, He knew his death was coming nigh, But he was unprepared.

He toss'd about upon his couch In dying agony, Then in a voice of woe, began His last Soliloquy.

"And can it be that I am old? That life is passing by? That all my days on earth are gone? And that I soon must die?

It seems to me but yesterday Since I was young and gay, My days were full of joy and hope, But they have passed away.

And when God's Spirit with me strove I quench'd his warning voice, And made the pleasures of this world. My early, only choice.

And when I was in Manhood's prime I thought that I had long to live,

Old age seem'd far away. And when old age came creeping on I felt my eyes grow dim, I gladly would have sought the Lord

And turn'd and worship'd him But when I would have served the Lord

I found it was too late, For in His sovreign justice, He Had left me to my fate.

Had I served God as faithfully As I have served the world. I should not be as I am now

Into perdition hurl'd. But now my days on earth are gone, God's Spirit too is fled;

Where will my spirit be, when I Am number'd with the dead. I dare not think of that dread hour,

I dare not, will not die"-When suddenly he gasp'd for breath And dimly glane'd his eye.

His friends were quickly by his couch, He toss'd from side to side, Pronounced the words. "I'm lost. I'm lost." Then struggled-gasp'd-and died. Cedarville, March 1855.

PROTRACTED MEETINGS .-- During the Winter, series of meetings are held in almost every place of worship in the Township .-This winter such meetings have been held at Haley's &c., and are now being heid at Port Norris and by the three different denominations at New Port, with encourageing success. Mr. Editor you ought to attend an extra meeting at Haley's-it would do you good. On such occasions they seem to "enjoy a feast of reason and a flow of soul" and they 'sing with the spirit' and we doubt not 'with the understanding" also.

The Rev. Mr. Cauffman, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Sleeper of Canton, held a series of

May the revival extend, until every and his 60 per minute with as much greediperson in New Port, shall "take the cup of ness and delight as he did the second boon to salvation and call upon the name of the Lord." And may the "news of pardon through a Saviour's rightcousness" be their all-absorb- the victim of the proto-murderer Cain. With ing, inspiring theme.

We were much pleased with the general or congregational singing at these meetings—it seems to come from the heart and goes directly to the heart. It is so much more soul- the boundless ocean of eternity. stirring and impressive, than the note and time-measured, "meretricious vocalization" of paid and fashionable choirs of many fashionable churches. The following pieces sung at these meetings, are touchingly beautiful, viz:-" None but the Righteous shall see God,"-" Oh Thou bleeding Lamb,"-" Only believe and you shall be saved,"-" We'll go home in the morning of the Resurrection Day,"-"Go with me to the New Jerusalem,"-" Invitation Hymn,"-" Across Jordan,"-" Home is Sweet,"-" No Tears in Heaven,"--"Bright Canaan,"--"I'm a Stranger and a Pilgrim,"-" The Judgment

The subjoined ballad, sung by a young lady at Dividing Creek on a Quarterly Meeting occasion, we took down and as we never saw it published, we will transcribe it into this article. It is entitled the "Bank of Heaven." and advantageous working of their roads. It is substantially correct and we think pretty nearly verbatims.

> "I have a never failing bank, A more than golden store; No earthly banker's half so rich, How can I then be poor. Sometimes my banker smiling says, Why dont you oftner come? And when I bring a little note, Why not a larger sum? Why live so sparingly and poor, Your bank contains a plenty;

Why come and take a one pound note When you might have a twenty. Since then my banker is so rich I have no cause to borrow, I'll live upon my cash to day And draw again to-morrow.

Should all the banks of Britain break, The " Bank of England" smash; Bring in your notes to Zion's Bank, You'll surely get your cash.

And if you have but one small note,

Fear not to bring it in; "Come boldly" to the Bank of Grace, The Banker is within. This bank is full of precious notes All signed and sealed and free.

Tho' many doubting souls may say .

I fear there's none for me. The leper had a little note. " Lord if then wilt, thou can:" The banker cashed this proffer'd note And healed the sickly man.

We read of one young man indeed Whose riches did abound, But in the banker's "Book of Grace, His name was never found. But see the wretched dying thief, Hung by the banker's side; He cried 'Dear Lord remember me', He got his cash and died." We have several notes of recollection in reference to the Protracted Meeting at Port Norris, but will simply say, that it is well attended and considerable interest is manifested in regard to the great subject of "the soul's salvation." May it be productive of much

> For the West Jersey Pioneer. Stray Thoughts, No. 2. WOMAN.

Perhaps my thoughts are here straying on forbidden ground! The labarynth of female character has never yet been threaded successfully by one of the opposite sex. It is only zoman that can understand woman

Whether the individual woman displays nore of selfishness, or pride, or vanity, shrewishness or pedantry in her composition, or on the other hand, a predominance of these attractive and ennobling qualities which adorn her character, such as devotion, constancy, endurance, &c. certain it is, this the collective woman, is an enigma which has never yet had an Ædipus to solve it.

I do not aspire to the honor of that celebrated ancient, but am rather content to take the fair as they are, thankful for all wherein they bless, and resignedly submitting to all wherein they do curse the race. But merely as a superficial observer have I considered this matter, and offer my stray and a sister's love. thoughts with all due humility.

I know not why it is, but the first thought plified in a recent criticism on a painting re- ten. These remembrances are to us what presenting a cottage scene, when the inmate beauty is to youth, what hope is to love, is stirring the fire with a poker, the critic what flowers are to the Spring-they cover thought the piece was true to nature and life, all our lives with a glorious light never in all and excellently well done, but the poker was time to be dimined. a little too stiff.

Now I have no design to subject myself to the pains and penalties of the law of libels, by pulling the women's character to pieces. and thus ruin it forever, but I have a few words to say on the Poodle peculiarity.

Of all the living creatures from a Band box to a Beau, upon which, and over which, the tendrils of the female heart do cherish and cling, none strikes the mind as so perverse and unnatural, as the often exhibited attachment to the little white Spanish Poodle.

And yet when we consider the strange fantastic freaks of some fair one, persisting thro' all opposition, in a wild and passionate attachment to some worthless wretch, who would trample on her love in very wantonness of power, we can no longer wonder at the strange affection and a weeping train will convey our perversity that sees the perfection of Beauty coffins to the unfrequented dwelling-places of in those snaring, yelping, snapping, soreeved varments.

"Ah, ha!" I hear some fair one cry, with that soft musical laugh, so bewitching in a sweet tempered woman. "Ah, ha! old stray thoughts has had a bite." No, no! not so fast, my lady, I have never been bitten by one of those yelping rascals, but I have been held in mortal terror for my best black eassimer unmentionables, for a good half hour, until its angelic owner was satisfied as to the set of her collar.

It is an annovance that cannot be frowned. down, and an attempt to kick it down, would inevitably be followed by a forgetfulness on the part of the lady to send cards for her next party; as my friend Tom Take-m-off found to his sorrow, when he kicked Miss Poodle into the pier glass: he tried to smooth over caogoes—principally oranges. The West Indian importations of last year are estimated the matter the next day, by sending his the Jug-or-not!

But change and progress is the order of the day, and the band-box feels its onward influence. "There is nothing like leather;" no truly "genteel" lady uses the old-fashioned article. The Bonnet-box, a recent invention, is the thing, a lady can carry her favourite "hat" from Dan to Beersheba without a soil. I was once favoured with an interior view of one of these structures packed for traveling, it contained numerous essentials beside the hat.

There are no homely women: what nature has not done for them art compensates.

Chemistry and perfumery work wonders; and fashion lends her aid, until we exclaim, with the gay delusion dazzled, there are no homely women.

Snodgrass will not believe that, and contends that a woman is more homely the more art she uses. Art, he says, destroys our convictions of innocence, which is half the charm of beauty; that conviction lost, we are reminded, he piously remarks, of the "whitened sepulchres' or the ash-apples of Tan-

Winter Wheat .- Thus far various accounts respecting the prospects of the wheat crop, are highly favorable. Respecting the crop in Michigan, the Detroit Free Press says:— From all sections we hear that the wheat is looking exceedingly well. The quantity upon the ground is greater than in any former year, and with no intervening calamity, the crop will be unprecedented. The Milwaukie Sentinel says the weather thus far, has been favorable to winter grain, and we hear good reports from our own, as well as adjoining States. In Ohio the farmers say that the crop sowed last fall looks well, and that the prospect of a heavy crop is a flattering one.

THE LEGISLATURE.

We learn that the bills for re-chartering the old Banks applying for re-charters, and certain new Banks, have passed both Houses of the Legislature and are now in the hands of the Governor. We understand that all the assets of the Banks including deposits are made liable for their issues, that the Directors are made responsible and that the Stockholders are made liable to the amount of their stock; and that it becomes an indictable offence for the officers of the Banks to, issue more than double the amount of the capital paid in. With these restrictions every one must be satisfied of their safety and we doubt not but the | hold of the death of Nicholas as an occasion community will hail with pleasure the prospects of their success. The Governor we presume will not object to their re-charter under tion through our streets. The past week has been one of motion amongst householdershouses, and every practical arrangement for facilitating removals and avoiding the confusion of moving day has been adopted, but still the bustle and confusion of to-day and Monday will keep the community in a commotion. We learn that in our town, notwithstanding the pressure of the times, and the partial cessation of work in the factories, houses are very much in demand and the supply

We are a changing people, seldom contented to remain many years in one place, and consequently every annual return of moving day witnesses a general upturning of house hold arrangements. People from the country get tired of work and are determined to come into town to live easy-people in town get tired of being shut up in prison and being the slaves of their employers and the public and resolve to go to the country and live easy and independent. Even those in town, many of them who own their houses and we might think were comfortably situated, get uneasy and cannot rest without a change, and a with a row of bricks the tumbling over of one sets all the rest to falling, so the change of one family sets in motion a long string of followers. There is in all this disturbance, which is in a measure unknown in older countries, one cause in operation which speaks volumes for our country and our government. In Europe, people do not move because they cannot many of them rise in riches or station, consequently they become fixtures and remain where they originally find themselves; here, on the contrary, our watch-word is progress; every one expects to rise in the world, and has no idea that the location which will do for him this year will be sflucient for him the next. They must change the effort is to go up-up and up again; if perchance they meet with disappointment, they have only to bear it and go down again to be ready to make a fresh start. The effort, the determination is to go upward; nobody expects to be stationary, therefore there must be constant changing of places.

Old Gen. Rose, who resided in our town number of years since, used to tell of a farmer in Pittsgrove who had for so many vears moved every Spring that his fowls had learned to calculate the time so well, that they always went to roost in his wagon on the night of the 24th of March, so as to be ready to be off with the first load in the morning. We remember once when we looked to moving day, as a time of pleasure and excitement not at all to be dreaded; but we are getting too old for that, and think it much pleasanter to look at our neighbours flying about in confusion, than to mingle with the crowd. By-the-by, many of our subscribers will remove from their old residences -they will please give us notice of their new homes.

DEATH OF THE CZAR.

The announcement that the Emperor of Russia had suddenly died, has produced quite sensation in the world; at first it was doubted by many who supposed it might turn out a hoax, or prove like the report of the capture of Sebastopol, only an expression of the wishes of their interests; but we believe it is generally believed to be true. What will be the effect of his death upon the affairs of Europe -whether it will or will not open the way for peace between the belligerent parties is now a question which is agitating very extensively the public mind. The general impression, as expressed through the press both in England and this country, is, that it will be likely to favor the peace movement. It is conceded by all, that the present war is not a war of choice with any of the parties engaged it was evidently blundered into most unwillingly and unexpectedly, and has been carried on although at great cost, without profit or honor to any of the parties. Great Britian has certainly reaped nothing but disgrace and disaster, loss of men by thousands and tens of thousands, of money by millions and of military glory and renown. France has been more fortunate and has exhibited much more tact and talent in her warlike operations, her losses will be in a measure made up by the national gratification which will be felt at the favorable contrast which the world will witness between the management and effectiveness of the armies of the two allies. The Turks now that the Allies have appeared on the scene of action, are in a great measure lost sight of, and must feel that they have but little to gain by the continuance of the war. The Russians, although they may be satisfied from what has already taken place, that they may keep their enemies employed without the loss of territory for an indefinate period, must see that they have nothing to gain by a continuance of the contest. There would seem to be nothing then wanting to secure a peace but a plausible pretext, the parties all tired of the war, anxious to get out of it, and only waiting for some decent excuse, may lay of new negotiations, occurring too just at this time when a congress is about to be held for considering propositions heretofore offered an excellent opportunity will be offered to bring There has as yet been no joint meeting and about a settlement of difficulties. For the West Jersey Pioneer. MR. EDITOR:-From the latter end of the tenth century, canonization has been one of the most solemn ceremonies of the Romish Church. By this ceremony certain deceased persons become ranked in the catalogue of saints; and the faithful are authorized to render them public worship. To the whole civilized world, and especially to the Protestant Christian world, all this has appeared supremely ridiculous if not indeed positively blasphemous. But the times are changing. Certain facts of recent occurrence seem to indicate, that the ill example established by the Panal church has come to meet with much greater favor than formerly. Who has not read Abbott's glorification of Napoleon Bonaparte in Harpers New Monthly? If he did cruelly and wickedly divorce the affectionate and lovely Josephine—a woman quite too good for him-and do a great many other cruel and wicked things, it is now discovered that he was a Saint for all of that! A few months since an article appeared in the National Magazine, utterly denying that Robespierre was the hard-harted, inhuman being that history has represented him to be. No, no instead of this he was one of the most amiable, "virtuous" men that ever lived! But this canonizing spirit seems not to be confined to historians and biographers. The popish mania has lately been caught by pugilists and infidels. That notorious fightingcharacter, Bill Poole, who kept a drinking and gambling house, whose associates were of the very dregs of society, men who live by corruption, violence, dicing, drabbing, and crimes that might make angels weep; this man-murdered by foul companions-received the ovation of a great public funeral. He had hardly been dead twenty-four hours when a "Poole Association" was formed in honor of his memory, by which the most flattering resolutions were passed respecting his life and character.' The following is the preamble to the resolutions:-"Whereas, It has pleased the Supreme Ruler of the Universe to remove from our midst, (using the hand of an assassin,) our friend and esteemed associate, the late Wilstanding Mr. Poole had been branded as a an institute in Camden. The project was bully and a leader of a gang of rowdies, who first started last Spring; and about the midthat Poole was above placing any man in old Academy on Market street. There were and believed that the day would speedily ever officers were chosen, a constitution generation breed and nurture all that is loathvulgarity and Sabbath-breaking, who was a terror to the Ward in which he lived, and who was murdered at last in a drunken mclee, that same Bill Poole has been fairly canon-

In view of all the above facts, facts which clearly indicate the tendency of the age we can hardly wonder at the late attempts of the admirers and followers of Thomas Paine to exalt him to a place in the catalogue of beatified and canonized Saints. The only pity seems to be that Paine was not a good Catholic, for in that case it might have all been done by authority, his holiness Pope Pius the IX, pronouncing the decree of canonization. There is an incidental matter however connected with the attempts just referred to, which is calculated to excite some surprise. The friends of Mr. Paine in their endeavor to magnify him, seem disposed to bestow the same honor upon the redoubtable Editor of the Bridgeton Chronicle. Now, in the Romish Church no person can be beatified, much less canonized, till 50 years after his or her death. But the Editor of the Chronicle is to be canonized before he is dead at all! Be not startled, gentle reader: the proof is at hand. Take the following as a specimen (but have compassion on the grammar.) "Is it becomperience, intelligence, and in every quality that constitutes the true man?" What next?

Verily wonders will never cease. But what of Thomas Paine? This question can be answered in very few words. The point at issue is, not Paine's political views and his moral character. Viewing him in renown, named by a correspondent of the Chronicle. The objection, we think, still holds good. He indeed affirms that "Barlow, Emmett. Jefferson, and Munroe, did continue their friendly intercourse with Paine to the hour of his death." But the evidence is wanting. The petition and letters quoted by him don't prove it, for those which bear before his death. What Barlow wrote of him was written after his death, and you know men when they are dead.

bald and gross in his later years, and his immorality so disgusting and flagrant, that men of standing and influence could no longer continue on terms of intimacy with him, without compromising their respectability. And now for the proof. It is not taken from "any one of his siz biographies." but from a much more reliable source. We quote from the Encyclopedia Americana, an authority which we suppose infidelity itself will blush to question. Leaving France in "August 1802 he embarked for America, and reached Baltimore the following October. He had lost his wife the year following his marriage, and after a cohabitation of three years and a half, had seperated from a second, by mutual consent several years before. Thus situated, he obtained a female companion in the person of a madame de Bonneville, the wife of a French bookseller, who, with two sons accompanied him to America; but, whatever was the nature of this connexion (at the age of sixty-five,) which has been differently represented, the husband and children, with the wife, became his chief legatees." The reader can easily draw his own inference. The account continues thus: "His subsequent life was by no means happy; for, although occupied in various mechanical speculations and other engrossing pursuits, and possessed of decent competency, his attacks upon religion had exceedingly narrowed his circle of acquaintince: and his habitual Intemperance tended to the injury of his health, and the ultimate production of a complication of disorders, to which he fell a victim June 8, 1809." This is a brief extract, but a very significant one. It is quite enough for our present purpose; we therefore withhold further facts. The miserable attempt to patch up Paine's rotten character is like putting "a piece of new cloth into an old garment; that which is put in to fill up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse." The time has not vet come for his canonization; he has not been dead quite fifty years. The moral sense of the community is not so lost to truth and virtue, as to exhibit no signs of sensitiveness under the sychophantic effort now making, to palm off as a paragon of moral purity and excellence, a low, vulgar blasphemer. His admirers are committing the same mistake that the Jesuits did, a few years since, in their attempt to overthrow our free school system—they are striking too soon. When necessity requires it, additional facts can be brought out, enough to make even the ears of his god-worshippers tingle. Till then,

New maps of every kind were hung up for our examination.

Mr. Davies, the celebrated mathemetician, came on and gave us several lessons in his department. Professor Sanders taught music and elecution, or rather pointed out how it should be taught. inst., Mr. NATHAN SHEPPARD, in the 57th year of his age. This afflicting Providence is severely he passed his life. He had a large acquaintance and was much respected by all who knew him .--For sixteen years he had been a member of the Presbyterian Church in Cedarville. With his family his place was regularly filled in the sanctuary. But two weeks before his death he was one of large congregation who had come to pay their last regards to a young man who had died in our midst. After a shortiliness he also was numbered with the dead. He leaves a now mourning and deeply afflicted widow, with whom he shared the joys and sorrows of thirty-seven years of wedded life; a family of children mourn the loss of a beloved father. The church on earth is deprived of one whose followship they prized. But whilst the tear of sorrow and affection flows, they are assured that death was not robed in terror, but was a welcome messenger, introducing him to the high and holy employment of the saints, who stand around the throne and ascribe glory and salvation to him who hath bought them with his

March 6, Mr. Ambose Pancost, of Atlantic Co. aged 63 years. The deceased was an acceptable member of the M. E. Church. Being a man of enterprise and indomitable perseverance, he was successful in accumulating a goodly portion of this world's goods. Though wealthy he was not a miser. He contributed to every benevolent enterprise connected with the Church of Christ .-The last few years of his life he manifested great zeal and took an active part in the temperance reformation, in consequence of which he was denounced by some, but with others he was none the less acceptable. His illness though protracted was borne with unusual christian patience and resignation. And when death with his icy hand was feeling for his heart-strings, he rejoiced in the assurance of a home in Heaven. Then with the Poet may we say:

"Why should we mourn for dying friends, Or shake at death's alarms? 'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends, To call them to his arms.

For the Spring & Summer of 1855 Wm. G. MAUL. COMMERCE STREET, BRIDGETON

Is now constantly receiving and opening a full and complete assortment of new and desirable goods for Spring and Summer wear, to which he would respectfully solicit the citizens of Bridgeton and surrounding country. And though I may regret I have said it; I am going to sell for the country approved credit. cash, barter or short approved credit. Thus insuring my customers that they may always de. pend on what goods they buy of me shall be at the very lowest prices, knowing that persons who give long long credits must necessarily get higher prices for their goods besides losing a great deal prices for their goods business to mig a great deal by bad debts. (and as all trades must pay or there could be no trade,) good paying customers must pay for the losses by bad ones. Or in other words, if Mr. A. fails to pay his bill, you must charge Mr. B. increased prices for the goods ha buys; so you see, Mr. B. has to redouble his ef. forts to make up for the fraud of Mr. A., which are the evils of the long credit system.

BARBER'S New Jersey Combined Mowing and Reaping MACHINE.

TIMS Machine is simple, of light draught and not liable to get out of order and will out all kinds of Grain and Grass equally as well as any other Combined machine ever in this region. It is so constructed, that all side draught, (which is so great in most Machines as to require three, and me machines four horses to do the work of two) sentirely overcome and seldom, if ever requiring but two horses in any kind of grain or grass.

An Extra Platform is so constructed, that the gavels can be laid at the side, entirely clear, when the Machine comes around and obviates the necessity of binding after it.

This Machine has been tested the last harvest by a number of practical Farmers and quite sufficient to prove its complete adaptation to Mowing as well as Reaping. It is so constructed, that it can be changed in twenty minutes into a Mowing Machine, and then again altered back for Reap-ing, in the same time. It leaves the stubble from twelve to fourteen inches high.

With this Machine you can mow an acre per hour, the whole day, though with but two horses, and with the same case for the team, as ploughing; is warranted to cut Salt Grass equally as well as Fresh, and work as well in the Salt Marsh as These Machines are Manufactured at Bridgeton, by the subscriber, where all Repairs can be done at Short Notice. An extra knife, with each machine. 189 Persons wishing to purchase, can apply to the subscriber, at Bridgeton, personally or by mail.

MATCHES! MATCHES! JOHN DONNELLY, Manufacturer and Inventor of Safety Patent Square Upright Wood Box Matches,

No. 106 North Fourth St. (above Race), Philida. ATCHES having become an indispensable article in housekeeping, the subscriber, after a great sacrifice of time and money, is enabled to offer to the public an article at once combining Utility and Cheapness. The inventor knowing the danger apprehended on account of the flimsy manner in which Matches are generally packed in paper, has by the aid of new steam machinery of his own invention, succeeded in getting up a Safety Patent Square Upright Wood Box; this box is far preferrable, inasmuch that it occupies no more room than the old round wood box, and contains at least Two Hundred per cent more matches, which, to Shippers, is considerable advantage. It is entirely new, and secure against moisture and spontaneous combustion, and dispels all danger on transportation by means of railroad, steamboat or any other mode of conveyance.

These matches are packed so that one gross or more may be shipped to any part of the world with perfect safety. They are the most desirable article for home consumption, and the Southern and Western markets, that have ever been invented. Dealers and Shippers will do well to call and examine for themselve These Matches are WARRANTED to b superior to anything heretofore offered to the public.
