For the West Jersey Pioneer. THE LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Far down amid the woods deep shade, Where breezes softly murmer round; Where rippling streamlets silent flow, A gentle lovely flower is found.

I love thee, little flower so fair. All wet with dew-thy pearly bells; Which sparkle in the sun's bright rays, That glimmer through thy leafy dolls.

And there thou dost so modestly, Thy many beauties seek to hide; Content to blossom all unseen, And in deep solitude abide. Sweet lily of the valley pure, Spotless and white thy flowers appear; O may our lives be fair as thine, And pure our thoughts and actions here.

Like thee fair flower-O may we love In sweet retirement's shade to be; Like thee content where'er our lot, Bright emblem of humility. Philadelphia, Oct. 29.

From Putuam's Magazine BORN, BUT NOT BURIED.

Lift your dress as you cross the street, And show your dainty little feet; Your steps are light, your eye is gay; No fairer lady greets the day!

Your rivals smile with bitter hate, Humbled to death with your scornful state: Each gallant eyes you through his glass, And the poor stand by to let you pass.

Madam! 'tis sweet to be young and fair, And well to be rich, and free from care; But the poor are flesh and blood like you-'Tis ill to scorn them as you do. That wrinkled old crone, who begs alone, While the sharp wind cuts her to the bone

Hark! to her burden, sad and wild, " We are born, but we are not buried child!"

MORAL.

I DID NOT THINK OF THAT. One day as Mr. Lawson, a merchant tailor, stood at his cutting board, a poorly dressed woman entered his shop, and approaching him, asked, with some embarrassment and timidity, if he had any work to give out.

"What can you do?" asked the, tailor, looking coldly upon his visitor. "I can make pantaloous and vests," answered the girl.

"Have you ever worked for a merchant tailor?" he asked. Yes, sir I have worked for Mr. Mright."

replied the girl. " Has he nothing for you to do?" "No, not just now; he has regular hands who always get the presserence.' "Did your work suit him?" "He never found fault with it."

"Where do you live?" "In Cherry st., No .-"

"I have a vest here," he at length said,

If you think you can do it very neatly, and estly." have it done in time, you can take it." "It shall be done in time," said the young woman, reaching out eagerly for the bundle.

"And remember, I shall expect it will made, If I like your work I will give you more."
"I will endeavor to please you," returned the young girl. "To-morrow evening, recollect."

"Yes sir; I will have it done." The girl turned and went quickly away. In a back room, in the third story of an old house in Cherry street, was the home of said in a cheerful voice to her sick sister-"Mary, I have got work; it is a vest, and and I must have it done by to-morrow even-

> "Goodness!" he ejaculated, turning over frightened.

"Well, this is a pretty job for one to bring n!' said the tailor in an excited tone of voice; a pretty job indeed!" at the same time tossing the vest away from him in angry contempt,

Miss, thinking I am going to pay you for ruining a job. It is bad enough to lose my material and customer. In justice you should set eyes on you again."

Ellen made no reply; she turned round, raised her hand to her forehead, and, bursting into tears, walked slowly away.

After Ellen had gone, Mr. Lawson returned to the front part of the store, and taking up the vest brought it back to where an elderly man was setting, and holding it towards him, said, by way of apology for the part he had taken in the little scene. "That is a beautiful article for a gentleman to wear, isn't it?" The man made no reply, and the tailor, after a pause, added, "I refused to pay her as a matter of principle. She knewshe could not make the garment when she took it away .-She will be more careful how she tries to impose herself upon customer tailors as a good vest maker.'

"Perhaps," said the elderly gentleman in a mild way, "necessity drove her to undertake a job that required greater skill than she possessed. She certainly looked very skill. The fact that a young girl, like the one who was just here is willing, in her extreme poverty, to labor instead of sinking into vice and idleness, shows her to posess true virtue and integrity of character; and that we should be willing to encourage, even at some sacrifice. Work is slack now, as you are aware, and there is but little doubt that she had been to many places seeking employment before she came to you. It may be that she and others are dependant upon the receipt of money that was expected to be paid for making the vest you hold in your hand. The expression as she turned away, her lingering step, her drooping form, and her whole demeaner, had in them a language which told me of all this, and even more.

A change came over the tailor's countenance. "I didn't think of that," fell in a low tone from his lips.

"I did not think you did, brother Lawson," said his monitor; "we are all more apt to think of ourselves than others. The girl promised the vest this evening; and so far as that was concerned, she performed her con tract. Is the vest made very badly?"

Mr. Lawson took up the garment and examined it more closely. "Well, I can't say that it is badly done. But dreadfully soiled and rumpled; and it is not as neat a job as it should be, nor at all such as I wished it." "All this is very annoying, of course; but still, we should be willing to make some ex-

Walking on Red Hot Iron.-Professor Pepper recently delivered a lecture in the Polytechnic Institute, before a large audience of mechanics, in which he remarked that the setting of the Thames on fire was no longer a ke but a reality. By dashing a small bottle of sulphurio ether with particles of metal potassium into a flat cisteru, a bright flame was produced, which illuminated the whole place. He then laid down four plates of red hot iron on four bricks, and one of his attendants walked over them barefoot without injury. By wetting his fingers in ammonia, the professor dipped them into a crucible of melted lead, and let the metal run off in the shape of bullets into a shallow cistern of water.

WHERE THE POULTRY GOES.

A recent writer in "Life Illustrated," an excellent New York Weekly, has been allowed to take a peep into the kitchen mysteries of the St. Nicholas Hotel, one of the largest and most fashionable public houses in New York. Amongst other items of interest, he asserts that three hundred pair of chickens are required for the daily consumption of that one establishment. Assuming this as a fair average, the enormous number of one hundred and nine thousand and five hundred biddies and their feathered companions annually wing their way down the exquisite throats of the fashionable epicures of the St. Nicholas. Reception of Gov. Reeder .- Easton, Pa., Nov. 6.-Ex-Governor Reeder was received at the cars, on his arrival at Phillipsburg from Philadelphia, to-day, by a very great assemblage of the people of Easton and the neighborhood, who were there to greet him with a hearty welcome home, and an earnest and warm approval of his course in the difficult and momentous affairs with which he has been so creditably and distinguishingly asso ated in Kansas. He was Connor's Hotel, where was received in a short Batenan, both of Cedarville. and eloquent address, by Gco. W. have subscribed $110,000 to endow a Col lege for the people, to be built in that city, and $54,000 additional has been subscribed in other parts of the State. It is necessary to raise the sum to $200,000, before regard ing the enterprise as complete; as it is intended to make the Institution second to none in the Union. This enterprise originated with the Methodists, but gentlemen of all denomi nations of Christians share in its benefits, and contribute to its funds. The President is Hiram Slocumb, Esq, of Troy, and the leadare among the Board of Directors and officers, We commend this institution to those who wish well to the cause of a high, moral and intellectual standard of education.

A Praiseworthy Enterprise .- A fine lo of ground, containing fifty acres has been secared in the twenty-third ward, above the borough of Frankford, for the purpose of converting into a Cemetery. The design of the projectors of the enterprise is to dispose of a sufficient number of lots, at a reasonable rate, to pay the first cost of the ground and for improving it it, and then to make the whole concern over to, the Masonic Order for the purpose of appropriating the profits to the fund for the benefit of the widows and orphans of deceased brothers. The scheme is most benevolent one, and will, without doubt, engage the cordial co-operation of the Great Ocean Steamers .- The Persia

Economy Combined with beauty & Service. SAMUEL L. FITHIAN.

WAVING purchased the right of making, using and selling, Cyrus Buler's patent paint mixture; would hereby offer it for sale to the citizens of Bridgeton and vicinity, having used and experimented with the mixture, I feel perfectly safe in saying, that it is decidedly to the advando not expect or ask them to use it at their own risk; but am willing in every instance (where it is used according to direction) to warrant it; and if at the end of two years after the paint is put on, the person using it is not satisfied, I will repaint at my own expense, with either Pure Lead or the best Zinc, at their own option. Now the advantages, to a person using it are as follows, viz:—First, they save 33 per cent on the first cost. Second, the paint mixture gives the paint a very beautiful gloss, consequently, they have a much handsomer job of work done by using it.— Third, it will last from two to three years longer than painting done in the old way of mixing. Fourthly and last they run very little or no risk. All further necessary information will be given by calling at SAMUEL L. FITHIAN'S Drug & Chemical Store, sign of the Big Mortar, nearly opposite E. Davis & Son's Hotel, where will always be found a large assortment of White Lead, Snow White Zinc, ground in oil or Demar Varnish, Paris Green, ground or dry, Mineral Green, Verdi-gris, Lamp Black, Chrome Yellow, Prussian Blue, Venitian Red, Yellow Ocher, Ohio and Silvers
