BE MENET MORPORD. Not houses or lots in a principal street; Not rich fields waving with golden wheat: Not darksome mines deep stored with gold. Nor piles of ingets in coffers old; Not these-though they fill so many a lot;

I'm poorer to day than a year ago, I was poorer then than I cared to know: The future has nothing but struggle and care For the bread to eat and the raiment to wear; For I'm very rich in the wealth I've got.

I've kind ones to love me, rich or poor; I've friends whom I hold with a friendship sure; I've pleasure and duties, day by day, And work for each hour that passes away. I've a home with its treasures—carth's dearest

Where I board, like a miser, the wealth I've got. I've a heart, thank Godi that loves mankind; I've a spirit, thank Godi that can be resigned; I've a hope to finish some trifle of good, Before I lie down for the grave-worms' food; I've a hope that neither stain nor blot Will cling, when I'm gone, to the wealth I've got. I've a trust in the Master, whose tender care Giveth bread to eat and raiment to wear; I've a firm stout heart, that he giveth me, To bear whatever my fortune may be.-So earth can be never a sorrowful spot While kind Heaven leaves me the wealth I've got.

For the West Jersey Pioneer. SATURDAY NIGHT.

Who is there that does not love its return? hough with its setting sun our week's work be scarce accomplished, yet its twilight, its evening, and its night, do they not bring the doxology and repose which tired Nature so longs for? And is it not sweet to feel one's at least for one whole day in the seven-to earnestly inculcate: think "Now I lay aside my tools and my Speak knidly, speak kindly; ye know no not the toil, my thoughts of whatever annoys or distresses my mind as pertaining to time, that I may make one good Sabbath day's journey toward a brighter and a better land?" Or to retire with the impression "I shall waken-

if I waken-to a bright sun and a sweet Sabbath. It will be a day of rest to my soul, and I need not hasten to bid home adieu for business or pleasure, on such a day my greatest pleasure is tendered me freely, and I need not look long for good. Hundreds and thousands anticipate much, but their enjoyment, whether of a proper kind or otherwise, will not subtract from the purity of mine." The Sabbath is the only day in the whole alendar which does not grow old. It is just the same as when we were young, and under a kind though rigid old Puritanical jurisdiction, scarce dared to whisper our thoughts of this or that; while we filled up the interim of church-going with pouring over that same old Westminster Catechism. You remember it well? And Saturday night too. I am sure we shall never forget it? It comes round yet, and though the day of its anniversary is ever changing, still it comes at the same time of the week-always at its close.

And where do we find a more wholesome institution? It is sure to wind up the week's toil-a certain forerunner of the Subbath to which it is preparatory, and whose beauty woman, who by the tender management of against her, and overset her in Joe's lap!—

She became product to through such a medium into the graduated, golden sunlight of "the day of rest." In our school boy days we hailed a season which came some twenty four hours earlier. "No school to-morrow," was the cry then, and the last day of the week was the one we desired to be the longest. Five days toil was to be the longest. Five days toil was enough then; but since Time has put age on our heads, our week's work and wages must must spell out the sentence for us-No school to morrow!

Most people enjoy its recurrence, especially in prospect of its immunity from weariness and anxiety; yet there are exceptions, oven, to this general rule. And this is of necessity too. Did you ever think of this, kind reader? And do you ask who, and what, they are?-Physicians and Sailors, is our reply. They must labor while others rest. Day and night, storm or sunshine. Saturday night or Sunday, water "Far, far at sea," may as imperiously Sabbath and social pleasures for that of saving the lives and property of his fellows. ## From the Philadelphia Sun. HOW TO TREAT FRIENDS.

True, reliable friends, are not so commo in this selfish world, that we can a ford to estrange and to alienate them from us for slight and insufficient causes: And yet how often is this done? Some people have a happy fac-ulty of making friends, and a most unhappy manner of cooling their attachment, and not unfrequently of driving them into open and avowed hostility. A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver; but an unguarded, unkind, barsh word, drives the iron into the soul, and often seperates chief friends. Few appreciate the full import of the divine injuction, " be corteous." Courtesy implies more than external affability; ait includes kind words, kind actions, prompted by a kind heart, as well as a becoming deportment. Half the jars in the domestic circle, and half the coolness and estrangement between friends, arise from those chullitions of passion, which may and ought to be checked and suppressed. Uniform courtesy and kindness in our intercourse with friends cement the bond of attachment, and give to life lasting claims. A fretful, iras-cible temper is the bane of friendship, and the poisoner of domestic bliss, A harsh word spoken cannot be recalled. It may be apologised for; it may be repented of; but still it remains upon the tablet of the memory, tallow candles there or thereabouts; into my and gives pain in the remebrance. -A person possesng a husty, ungovernable temper, cannot too auxiously and earnestly set about a

Common Schools.

In another column we cheerfully give place to a communication from our old friend, "R. C. H." on the above named subject. The thoughts suggested by him, if properly considered and acted upon by our State Legislators would, we believe, lead to the passage of such a law as would advance the interests of Common Schools and general education in our State. The plan proposed by him appears to be a good one, though a free discussion of the aubject would probably lead to a more feasible one. The proposed plan would undoubtedly produce the beneficial effects attributed to it by the writer and many more of a similar character. Who cannot recollect the stimulus imparted in their school days by the "Reward of Merit" given by the teacher for good conduct or superior scholarship? Would same or a more desirable effect? We believe it would and that the small amount awarded for premiums to the best scholars would be money judiciously expended.

Among the beneficial effects resulting from the plan of our correspondent the "establishment of a day when the inhabitants can sociably meet to interchange their views and opinions upon this and kindred subjects" would be one of no small importance to every community. "Friendship and those friendly social feelings which are too much neglected" would undoubtedly be encouraged.

Would not the spirit of ciulation prompt of their respective schools? How long would it be before more competent teachers, with better school houses, books and tools to work with, would shed their enlightening influence over every district and county in the State.

We leave the subject until some future cocasion when we will give our views more at length on the subject of Common Schools. In will soon speak out their views on this impor-

We thank "R. C. H." for his timely and which not only prove a blessing to the community in which he resides but of lasting importance to the county and State.

-----Hand Writing.

We know of no calling or profession, the members of which have more just cause for complaint or suffer more from the ignorance or carelessness of indifferent writers than that of a Printer, and yet we doubt if there are a very respect than editors. Much of the writing prepared for the press by the most able editors in the country cannot be read unless by an experienced compositor or an adept in the art, and not unfrequently are editors puzzled to read their own writing, after the ink has had time to dry. We have known persons who, before accustomed to writing for the press, were considered good penmen, but in a short time contracted the pernicious habit of illegibility. We have just received two letters; one from an Editor, the other from the thirty-five years of uge. He entered upon Principal of a popular Female Seminary; the former is a bold and noble dash of the pen, leaving an impression on the paper as firm comparison with the letter of the Principal it dren to mourn his early death.-Standard. is most an excellent hand. To attempt a description of the scroll of the Professor with A. B. affixed to his name, would be like giving a description of the manuscript found on our the dark, by a lot of mice, which had alternately travelled over the paper, into the paste cup and ink stand, until the white sheet of paper had become completely filled with hie- average form 10 to 12c, per pound to the roglyphics,

One of our Dreams. It is not unnatural for editors in these time to have what are termed day-dreams or a pro pensity to build airy castles, but we had a called a day-dream. The sable curtains of night had not yet been thrown back nor the the horizon. For once at least we had a veri fication of the doctrine inculcated in the old saying "that those thoughts with which the mind is most occupied as we close our eyes in sleep are most apt to be the subject of our dreams." Having paid out during the day not a similar or even greater reward have the book, we retired to our home late in the even- which with the teachers, examiners, freeholdbook that had discharged so many an honest debts. Scarcely had our head touched the pillow, when we were aroused by the jingle of quarters, which proved to be the Printer's new one, that I offer these suggestions in a D-1 at our bedside, appearing in the form | crude state. Probably five delegates from each of an Augel of mercy, bringing "good news school district where the counties are densely and glad tidings" in the following pathetic populated would be too many. 'twas but a dream) had presented us with a $50 bill, as a gift, had never in his wakeful moments dreamed of any such performance. The interpretation of our valuable thoughts, we have known him for a dream (we imagine) is something like the follong time as an advocate of those measures lowing: Our worthy old neighbor who came into our office, is fifty of our subscribers, the $50 bill is fifty one dollar bills, the gift is the pay for fifty subscriptions for the Pioneer, and the time of the transaction is between this date and new-years. This trade is yet in infancy, and must continue limited while horseflesh is used for getting supplies from the pits, seven miles, to the cars. When a railroad shall have extended into the heart of the marl region, and the facilities for procuring large supplies at cheap rates furnished, then the marl trade will be so increased as to enable farmers generally in every part of the State to sbare its benefits. This difficulty will doubtless be remedied as the demand increases.

British Contracts for Beef and Pork .- It is stated that private telegraphic despatches from Halifax announce that the proposals from a number of American houses, for the contract of beef and pork, have been accepted by the British government. There is a rumor that all of the bids from this side have been accepted; but this is probably exaggerated.

Population of Massachusetts.-The Secre tary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts gives the result of the census of June last as ollows: Population of the State, 1,132,259; of Boston, 160,508; of towns contiguous to Boston, 87,221 more.

When romoved it will be superseded by one far exceeding in utility and magnificence even that of the celebrated "St. Peter's." The beautiful invention of Professor Walters will rise three hundred feet above the basement floor. and reach three hundred and eighty feet above tide water. It will contain one hundred and twenty-four windows, many of which will be eighteen feet in height, decorated with entabatures which will be emblematical of the most important events in American history; and such arrangements have been adopted that all visitors, from those in the spring tide of life to the hoary-haired veteran, can easily ascend, and from the loftiest of all our lofty eminences behold the extent and grandeur of the National Metropolis.

The rapid increase of demand for books in Texas is really astonishing. It is only a few years since it was wholly impracticable to susain a book store in any part of the State. Now many such establishments . xist, and are doing an exceedingly profitable business. Almost every important town in the State demands a book and stationary establishment. There are few States in which capital in a book and stationary business can be more profitably employed than in Texas. Young gentlemen desiring to embark in that species of business would do well to keep an eye to openings in An exchange says, a few days since an officer of one of the Boston Banks stepped into the safe just before closing it for the day, to see that all was right. At the moment, auother officer coming along and not knowing that any one was inside, gave the door a slight shove which closed it fast, and as the key was in the possession of the prisoner within. it was something of a puzzle how they should effect his liberation. Parties ran in different directions, some for a locksmith, others for safe keys, &c. After some little time a key was fortunately found which proved an open sesame to the safe, and the suffering prisoner was delivered, to the great joy of himself and his anxious friends.

$10,000,000 in one Year for Liquor .- In the year 1853, it is estimated the liquor consumed in the entire State of New York cost $40,000,000!!! Giving to New York a 10th of the inhabitants of the Union and allowing the same proportion of liquor to be consumed by the other States, it would make a grog bill for the Union of $40,000,000!!!

We do not wonder that they want prohibition laws in that State; they need them and ought to have them. There must be a vast amount of drunkenness or at least an awful ight of temperate drinking.

Education in North Carolina. - The State of North Carolina has distributed among the several counties of the State, during the current year, the sum of one hundred and eighty one thousand dollars for the support of Common Schools. We hope that the county which some years ago gave 1300 votes maiority against the adoption of the school system has been sufficiently enlightened by its operation to be prepared to give a like majority on the other side, should the question be again submitted to a popular vote.

The Result of Kolly .- A man was placed few days ago in a lunatic asylum at Berlin, to be treated for mental alienation brought on by the use of hair dye. On examining the dye which he had employed, it was ascertained to be composed of lead, mercury, and lunar caustic. It produced violent pains in in the head, and at length led to madness.

The Courier says t' at it is reported bat a hundred and twenty-four Associations have been examined, and that the Committee will report in favor of revoking the charter of all without distinction. It is stated that the aggregate number of members is 25,000, and that a large proportion have never received any return of the moneys they have raid; a few more fortunate bave received fifty per cent. back from their original payments while the majority, it seems, have been able to recover next to nothing. The total amount expended thus by all the members, and now severally due them, is said to be not less than 1,000,000 dollars. It is well known that the contributors to these Associations were generally of the humbler classes.

Meeting of the Soldiers of the War of 1812 .- On Tuesday evening, the defenders of the country in "the war of 1812" held a meeting at the county court house, in Philadelphia, to make the necessary arrangements for sending delegates to Washington, on the auniversary of the battle of New Orleans. Joel B. Sutherland, Esq, submitted the following resolutions, which were unanimous-

Love vs. the Ministry,-"The course of true love never did run smooth." A young minister, attached to an Old School Presbyterian Church, in Philadelphia, has for some time past been paying his addresses to a lady of wealth, who, we understand, has been divorced, her first marriage being a forced one. The minister's congregation heard of the intended match, and a meeting of the trustees, or proper officers, was called, to take the matter into consideration.

The rule of the church forbidding a minister to marry with a divorced woman, was pointed out to the lover, and he was then asked to resign his love and hopes of connubial bliss. The minister, after mature deliberation, determined to resign his place in the church, along with its salary, and cling to her, to whom, no doubt, his heart's best affections have been given.

A Correspondent says: Mr. Thackeray's third lecture was a brilliant one. The felling with which it fell upon the minds of his audience, it strikes me, must have been very similar to that with which the traveller emerges from the sands of the desert and wends his way across a patch of verdure. It was delightful to pass from the Oxfords, and Bolingbrokes, and the Chesterfields, and their time, into nolds. Mr. Thackeray's picture of George the Third himself and his Queen, were most elaborate. The monarch was, as a lad, dull, and brought up by dull people. In youth his education was neglected and throughout after life he did his utmost to make amends for it. He was the first of the Brunswicks who felt at home in England. In his first speech from the throne, he said,—"Born and educated in the country, I glory in the name of Briton," and the people liked him for it.

The American war was popular with him as it was, Mr. Thackeray said he must allow, with the people at that time; the Americans, George regarded as rebellious children who ought to be punished.

Queen Caroline-with whom the King fell in love on scoing a letter she had written to a friend, in which she spoke of the horrors of war and the beauties of peace-was extremely plain in appearance, rather intelligent, fond of her husband, but strict and tyranical with her children. Mr. Thackeray referred to the miserable condition to which king George was reduced when eight, strength and reason had all forsaken him, and closed with the appeal, which I find reported in one of the city papers -"O brothers, speaking the same dear mother tongue, O comrades, enemies no more, let us take a mournful bend together as we stand by his royal corpse, and call a truce to battle. Low he lies, cast lower than the poorest dead, he whom millions prayed for in vain. In the Fourth George of England, Mr. Thackeray found nothing manly—the other Georges loved and hated, but this one did neither. He was a man of no mind or rather of other men's mindsdocuments were signed George P., or George It, but their periods were turned, their language chosen, and their spelling done, by some officer or clerk. Yet this clever prince could correct his tutor in Greck prosody, and thereby gain Lord Bruce's advancement to an Earldom! George was called the first gentleman in Europe, But gentlemen in these days could drink and fight and swear. Men called him haudsome and women thought him so. At twenty-one years of age he took possession of Carlton house, and pretended to have Burke, and Fox, and Sheridan as his friends, but they were not. Statesmen were not the friends for such a man; he had no friends, his companions were dandies and satellites, whom he threw off as he tired of them. Beau Brummel was at times his friend, rival, and enemy; when George was King and Brummel in want he passed him by without recognition. But he was heir apparent to the throne, and could draw men of genius and talent around his table. There Scott poured fourth bis stories of learning. Grattan his eloquence, Sheridan sparkled with wit, and Moore warbled his love songs.

Mr. Thackeray then drew a sketch of the social habits of the times—how the princess drank their wine, the nobles theirs and the lawyers theirs. They were giants in these The Sale will remain open Christmas Eve and the times, said he. He alluded to the general prevalence of gambling, the immense sums lost at play, the cheating which prevailed among the fine English gentlemen, and men of honor. Through all these scenes George the Fourth ever moved a principal actor .-Turning from such men of honor he contrasted them with the reality—the chivalrous and for the purpose of appointing a delegate or dele-heroic Collingwood, the kind and manly actes to attend the National Convention of the Sonthey, the pious and devoted Heber.
