LIFE'S TEACHINGS.

BY MRS. FRANCES D. GAGE.

Chasing after butterflies, hunting after flowers, Listening to the wild birds, thro' the sunny hours, Looking up the hen's nests on the fragrant mows, Tending to the Lambkins, driving up the cows, Mixing play and labor in my childish glee, Learned I life's first lesson-learned I to be free Waving on the tree tops, roaming o'er the hills; Wandering through the meadows, fishing in the

> From the American Farmer. THE FARMER.

Of all pursuits by men invented, The ploughman is the best contented, His calling's good, his profits high, And on his labors all rely. Mechanics all by him are fed, Of him the merchants seek their bread; His hand gives meat to every thing, Up from the beggar to the king. The milk and honey corn and wheat, Are by his labors made complete. Our clothes from him must first arise To deck the fop, to dress the wise; We then by vote may justly state, The ploughman's rank among the great. More independent, too, than all, That dwell upon this earthly ball. All hail, ye farmers, young and old! Push on your ploughs with courage bold; Your wealth arises from the clod. Your independence from your God. If then the plough supports the nation, And men of rank in every station, Let kings to farmers make a bow, And every man procure a plough.

PARADISE. Go, wing thy flight from star to star, From world to luminous world, as far As the universe spreads its flaming wall; Take all the pleasures of all spheres, And multiply each through cudless years,-One minute of heaven is worth them all!

UNFORTUNATE. 'Twas ever thus from chil'hood's hour That chilling fate has on me fell,-There always comes a soaking shower When I hain't got no umberel!

Such know not that our darkness is heaven's light; our trials but steps in our golden ladder, by which if we rightly ascend, we at least gain that eternal light, and bathe forever in its fulness and beauty.

"Is that all?" and the gentle face of the wife beamed with joy. Her husband had been on the verge of distraction—all his carthly possessions were gone, and he feared the result of her knowledge, she had been so tenderly cared for, all her life. "But," says Irving's beautiful story, "a friend adviseth him not to give sleep to his eyes, nor slumber to his eyelids until he had unfolded to her all his become places. It is but seldom that a season presents such an array of severe storms, in such rapid succession, as has been witnessed during the last two months. The speaker labored under some disadvantages, not being able at the commencement to read his manuscript, on account of the position of the lamps. This being remedied he proceeded to interest the audience for about an hour and a quarter with a lecture that exhibited much research on the part of the speaker. He commenced by enumerating and elucidating some of the reasons why the Bishop of Rome attained such ascendency. They were the situation or position which he assumed. The internal dissensions which rent the Church in the early ages .-The wars between neighboring Princes. The gnorance and servile spirit which prevailed at the age whon he commenced his usurpations. The belief that he could dispense the rewards of heaven or inflict enernal misery. The removal of the Roman Court from Italy to Constantinople. New and Valuable Work. Mr. C C. Soowell, has presented us copy of "SEAR'S Pictorial Description of Russia." It is an illustrated description of the Russian Empire; embracing its geographical features, political divisions, principal cities and towns, population, classes, government, resources, commerce, antiquities, religion, progress in education, literature, art and science, manners and customs, historic summary, &c., from the latest and most authentic sources. It is a beautiful work of nearly seven hundred pages, printed on excellent paper, with clear type; and profusely illustrated with appropriate engravings and maps of European and Asiatic Russia, with the sixty or seventy governments and provinces of the empire neatly and accurately colored.

The work takes in its descriptive scope, the entire empire. Fiuland, Lapland, the Baltic Provinces, Russian Poland, Southern Rusgia, Armenia, Kazan, Siberia, Kamtschatka, Russian America, in brief every province and government and prominent city and town of this colossal empire, extending more than half way round the globe, is separately and fully described; not in its geographical and topo- nual Fair. graphical features merely, as they appear to the passing traveller, but its location, its area and population, its mineral, agricultural, manufacturing, and commercial resources, its antiquities, natural curiosities, and other important details are given.

The work is published by the eminent Au thor and Publisher, Robert Sears, in a new, revised and enlarged edition. Mr. C. C. Soc. well, whose advertisement appears in another column, has taken the agency for the sale of the work in Cumberland and Cape May Counties, and with the assistance of those whom he may employ as canvassers, will call upon the citizens and offer a work, which at this time (when Europe is in arms, and two of the most powerful nations are combined for the overthrow of this same Russian empire) will be opportune and particularly interesting to all who desire information pertaining to this

During the present week we have observed scores of two horse teams passing our office. on their way to Philadelphia, with their precious freight. A glance at the teams showed that many of them were from the city, and the crack of the whip and sound of the voices of the drivers as they turned the corner with their well trained horses, reminded us of the times when such voices were an every day services in that capture, and was actively salutation to our ears.

Notwithstanding the immense quantity of oysters that are taken to the West during every winter, the Philadelphians will "impede the progress" of many of these "shelly" bivalves, before they enjoy the opportunity of sliding down the throats of the Western epicures. A Springfield paper referring to this subject says:-

"The cities of Albany and Troy, and other western places, in part are being supplied with oysters through this, to an extent which even though it should cover the whole supply, is a little remarkable. Loss of Life by Wars.

We have seen it sometimes remarked, in reference to the loss of life in the Crimea, that certain battles were among the bloodiest ever fought, the sacrifice of life the greatest, &c .-But such writers either forget or certainly know very little about the terrible battle fought in former times, and even of a comparatively recent date, and within the memory of persons. Let us notice some of these.

At the battle of Arcola the Austrians lost, n killed and wounded 18,000 men; the French At Hohenlinden the Austrian loss was 14, 000; the French 9,000. At Austerlitz, the Allies, out of 80,000 men lost 30,000 in killed and wounded or prison ers; the French loss only (!) 12,000.

At Jena and Austerstadt the Prussians lost 30,000, men, killed and wounded, and nearly as many prisoners, making nearly 60,000 in all; and the French 14,000 in killed and woun-At the terrific battle of Eylau, the Russians in killed and wounded, the French loss 8,000. At Wagram the Austrians and French lost each 25,000 men, or 50,000 in all killed and wounded.

At Smolenski the French loss was 17,000 men-that of the Russians 10,000. At Borodino, which is said to have been

At Bautzen the French lost 25,000 menthe Allies 15,000. A Dresden, where the battle lasted two days, the Allies lost in killed, wounded and prisoners, 25,000 men; and the French between 10.000 and 12.000. At Leipsic, which lasted three days, Napoleon lost two Marshals, 20 Generals and about 60,000 men, in killed, wounded and 6,800. The battle of Trebbia lasted three days; and the French and Allies lost each about 12,000 men, 24,000 in all.

Here we have battles, among which are some, compared to which those in the Crimca were but small engagements, great as they appear to us. Besides these were several R. Wheat 1 90 " others of minor importance to the foregoing, as to the loss of men, but large in the aggregate. There were those of the Bridge of Lodi, a most desperately contested fightthe famous battle of the Nile, a sea fight, in which Nelson lost 895 men, in killed and wounded; and the French 5,225 men, in kill ed and wounded, 3,005, prisoners, and 13 had 8,000 men engaged, and the Turks 9,000 and every man os the Turks was lost, in kill ed, wounded and prisoners-Novi-Engers -Marengo, a most desperate and bloody en-

In all these battles, the loss, in killed and of men! besides thousands in skirmishes, minor engagements, &c., and that within a period of less than thirty years! Enormous as is the loss and injury of life, - of those who fall in battle and are maimed by wounds,it is but small compared to the loss of life caused otherwise by war. "The numbers killed in battle," says a writer, "are no full index to the loss of life in war, and seldom comprise one fourth of its actual victims."-It is small compared to the immense numbers carried off by disease, exposure, and other casulties incident to war. Allison says of the campaign of 1790: "In little more than four months the French and Allied armies had lost nearly half of their collective forces; those cut off, or irrecoverably mutilated by the sword, being about 116, 000 men." And, "the survivors of the were not more than 35,000 men, out of an

The Flight of the Emperor of Hayti.-A correspondent of the Evening Post, writing from Port au Prince, under date Dec. 30, closed an account of the defeat and flight of the Emperor of Hayti as fellows:

"The army has lost everything. The Emperor is said to have had with him, in his reasure chest, $3,000,000 in currency, and $80,000 Spanish. All this is lost, with the guns, ammunition and provisions, and other baggage and money. The retreating troops have thrown away their arms. The Emperor is said to have reached Bonheur, a small place some sixty miles from the Cape, with about a thousand men. The Aux Cayes troops, with some others, have arrived back at Los Caobas, to the number of 1,500.

"The Emperor has sent them orders to join him at Bonheur, which they have refused to do. Whether he will march against them, settled. The great misfortune, to commerce is, that the war was got up so suddenly that no one was prepared for it. ### Important to Jerseymen! Valuable Book of Reference.

Every man who has taken any interest in the public affairs of the State of New Jersey, must have frequently felt the want of a complete journal of the proceedings of the Legislature, with the debates proceedings, and votes of its members, on all important questions.— Aside from the daily publications in the newspapers, which are read to-day and forgotten to-morrow, there is no comprehensive record of the acts and sayings of our public servants. The journals published by the legislature are seldom distributed until after the next election, and when published do not give the views of memhers on any question. To supply this apparent want, and to put in the hands of every public officer and every other person who desires to be informed as to the affairs of the State, it is proposed to publish at the office of the True American, a LEGISLATIVE JOURNAL, of each session, commencing with the present, containing the Debates. Votes, Proceedings, and List of Acts with a complete index to the whole.

These proceedings are reported with scrupulous impartiality, by competent persons, who will give a faithful and perfectly reliable record of all the doings of legislators and public officers-forming, at the close of each session, a volume, after the style of the "Congressional Globe," which will be of incalculable value as a book of reference.

The work will be furnished in sheets of eight large pages, printed on new type, as the session progresses, or all together within a few hours after the adjournment of the legislature.

The Legislative Journal will be published at the extremely low price of FIFTY CENTS for the volume, which will place it within the reach of every man in the State. Orders must be directed to the "True American office, Trenton."

The Air Line Railroad. By Mr. PARRY, to charter South Jersey Central

& Air Line Railroad. Mr. Parky, in introducing the bill, spoke as

Mr. Speaker-The bill, which in accordance with previous notice, I am about to introduce, provides for opening a railroad communication through the interior of our State, where railroad enterprise has not yet commenced. As a bill for a similar object has heretofore been before this House, it may not be improper to preface its infroduction by an explanation, giving the reasons for again bringing it up for our consideration; the principal of which is because it did not pass into a law of last session.

The loss and inconvenience felt for the want of such a communication is steadily increasing, as the superiority of railroads over all other modes of transportation, becomes every year more fully established. Experience has proved that with steam power and railroads goods and merchandisc can be carried on at one-tenth the cost that is required by the strength of animals on common roads; and that the cost of transportation must first be paid before the producer gets any profit on his goods; that by the introduction of railroads the area from which agricultural products are carried to market has been enlarged ten fold, and instead of the principal cities in and around New Jersey depending on our crops, as informer times, their supplies are drawn from hundreds, and, in some cases, a thousand miles beyond us. While crowded state of the prison.
this great system of internal improvement is enjoyed in other sections, the people in South Jersey have not been permitted to participate in it, but are compelled to depend on the same modes of conveyance that were used before railroads were introduced. Is it not the province of a wise government to ascertain what portion of territory has been neglected, and give it special attention, to supply the deficiency and restore the equilibrium? that legislative favors may be equally distributed to all parts of the State?

The great advantages of the Camden and Am-hoy Railroad to the section of country through which it passes can scarcely be estimated, pervading all branches of industry and facilitating trade and business. Land in the district which I have the honor to represent, at the time of its construction was valued at fifty dollars per acre, but soon after the accommodations of that road became manifest, it rose to double, and in some cases treble that amount. The same effect has resulted glong the Camden and Atlantic Railroad, which has been in operation but a short time.

Immense tracts of fertile land, which had previously existed as nature had left it, has been subdued, divided into farms, and sold to thousands of different purchasers, who would not locate themselves on it at any price without the convenience of that railroad. The wood abounding there which heretofore had but little value, will now command three dollars per cord on the road, workmen are actively employed in cutting and hauling, grubbing, clearing, and preparing the ground for spring orops where man never planted seeds be-

The argument heretofore used against the Air Line bill cannot with propriety be brought against it this session. Year before last, we were told that by building the West Jersey Railroad and the Camden and Pemberton Agricultural Road, it would in a great measure supply the deficiency ex-isting for the want of railroads, and obviate the necessity of passing the Air Line bill at that time, and the most effectual means of securing their conthe Joint companies to subscribe to the stock and endorse the bonds of other Railroad Companies. The preamble to the bill reads as follows:

WHEREAS in order to induce capitalists to furnish the means, and to seek such investments' it is advisable and necessary to render all the bonds issued by said companies so entirely good that perfect confidence can be placed in their un-

Railroad Company, and also the bonds of any other company, for the construction of any railroad in this State, of which they may hold at the time ne-half of the capital stock."

Although it was not generally believed at that time that their endorsement would give additional confidence and security to a new enterprise, et as we could not have the Air Line bill, we took what was offered, and extended the Camden and Amboy charter for twenty years, and authorized the Joint Companies to subscribe to the stock and en-dorse the bonds of other railroad companies. A year passed around with but little done or Annual Report of the Trustees of the State Normal School, which was read, on request, by Hon. said, except an occasional remark of disappointment School, which was read, on request, by Hon. and the Camden and Pemberton Agricultural Railroad, was not progressing as it had been represen

When we assembled here again last year, we were informed that their endorsement did not give the credit to the bonds that was expected, and in order to make it effectual it would be necessary to have a little more legislation; the word endorse should be interpreted to mean quarantee, otherwise the contemplated improvements could not go on. In order to afford them every facility to redeem their pledges, the required legislation was granted; providing also, that the State should not in any way be held liable for the payment of any bonds, mortgages, or other evidences of debt, issued, enalso, explanatory of certain acts relative to Turn-dorsed or guaranteed by the said Joint Companies. The way seemed again clear for the prosecution of said works, and during the latter part of sumthe Joint Resolutions relative to Com. Stewart, reported the same without amendment. Adj. HOUSE.

Men the people were delighted with the announcement that the Joint Companies had negotiated a loan of $900,000—that the works would certainly go on. A messenger being also despatched to Europe for the money, confirmed the belief that there was some prospect ahead. But, unfortunately, the agent did not return until about election time, last fall, with the information that the war had so unsettled financial affairs he was unable to obtain the funds.

Now if the ability of the Joint Companies to borrow money depends upon the war in Europe, we need not expect their aid in building any more railroads until the Allies take St. Petersburg and peace is restored. But must the farmers in South Jersey be debarred from constructing railroads themselves to carry their own crops to market until that time?

It is well understood that many persons who had subscribed to the stock of the West Jersey Railroad in good faith, having despaired of its completion, have asked and obtained leave to withdraw their subscriptions.

The principal reason why the Camden and Pemperton Agricultural road does not go on is because the Managers of the Joint Companies have it under their control; they subscribed for a majority of the stock, but it is believed have not cashed their instalments; the money by which the faint pretences of future operations are kept up, was obtained from the instalments paid by individual subscribers, who, having confidence in the ability of the Joint Companies to carry out their promises, united with them, but being disappointed, will pay no more money on such terms, and now prefer n independent railroad.

I am ready to show at the proper time that the section of country through which the Railroad is intended to pass is capable of sustaining a dense population, that instead of natives born leaving our State, as they have to a large extent, and sented and acted upon. He moved, therefore, that the message be laid upon the table for the search a for for homes in the vicinity of a Southern or West an Railroad, multitules would come here to participate in the advantages of our genial soil, mild climate and convenient access to the best markets in the Union; that our population would apidly increase, the value of real estate advance, ad the revenues of the State be greatly augmented. For these reasons, I now respectfully ask leave to introduce a bill entitled, "An Act to inorporate the South Jersey Central and Air Line ailread Company." Mr. Dutcher moved that 1000 copies of the cuments accompanying the Governor's Message be printed for the use of the House. Agreed to 3 o'clock P.
