THE LIGHT IN THE WINDOW. .

BY CHARLES MACKAY. Late or early home returning. In the starlight or the rain, I beheld that lonely candle Shining from the window-pane; Ever o'er his tattered curtain, Nightly looking I could scan, Aye inditing-writing-writing, The pale figure of a mani Still discern behind him fall. The same shodow on the wall. Far beyond the murky midnight, By dim burning of his oil, Filling aye his rapid leaflets, I have watched him at his toil; Watched his broad and sunny forehead, Watched his white industrious hand, Ever passing and re-passing; Watched and strove to understand What impelled it-golden fame-Bread, or bubble of a name. Oft I've asked, debating vainly In the silence of my mind, What the services he rendered To his country or his kind. Whether tones of ancient music Or the sound of modern gong, Wisdom hely, humors lowly. Sermon, essay, novel, song, Or philosophy sublime, Filled the measure of his time. Of the mighty world of London He was portion unto me, Portion of my life's experience, Fused into my memory. Twilight saw him at his folios Morning saw his fingers run, Laboring ever, wearying never Of the task he had begun! Placid and content he seemed, Like a man who toiled and dreamed. No one sought him, no one knew him. Undistinguished was his name; Never had his praise been uttered In the orcales of fame. Scanty fare and decent raiment, Humble lodging and a fire-These he sought for, these he wrought for And he gained his meek desire: Teaching men by written word-Clinging to a hope deferred. So he lived. At last I missed him! Still might evening twilight fall. But no taper lit his lattice-Lay no shadow on his wall. In the winter of his seasons, In the midnight of his day, 'Mid his writing, and inditing, Death had beckoned him away, Ere the sentence he had planned

Found completion at his hand.

But this man so old and nameless

Left behind him projects large,

Schemes of progress undeveloped

Worthy of a nation's charge;

Germs of beauty immatured,

To have flourished and endured;

Who shall tell what schemes majestic

Noble fancies uncompleted,

Only needing kindly feeling

Meet reward in golden store,

Perish in the active brain!

Ne'er to be restored again:

What we lose because we honor

Over much the mighty dead,

Or perchance, when kinder grown, Leaving it to dis-slonel

What humanity is robbed of,

And dispirit living merit, Heapig soora upon its head!

To have lived for evermore.

conversation with Uncle Jonathan upon the Present and the Past.

We who live in the country at this gloomy season of the year, are often troubled to find something with which to entertain our minds; books are our chief amusement, but when we have been kept within doors, by ill health, or the severity of the weather for several days; we yearn for more than the society of the dead. This morning I had been reading two or three hours: when I went to the window and looked upon things without. The ground was deeply covered with snow; the trees, and fences were glazed with glistening ice, nothing was stirring, not a whisper of wind could be heard. The storm of yesterday from off the ocean, was now over and save the bellowing of an angry surf, all was hushed. Within my view was a cow quietly feeding under the shed of the barnyard, she seemed too cold to move and I could almost see her stiffened limbs tremble as she walked through the crackling snow. A couple of Shanghai pullets were upon the fence near the window, apparently a good deal chilled, their position was very tottering and evidently they wished o fly; but could not make up their minds where to alight, no doubt they had strange thoughts as they looked upon things about them, for this was their first winter, probably they were wondering while no earth was to be seen, how on earth they were to live .-The boys drove them into the roost, where they were fed, and now I thought my morning's amusements had ended, when who should enter but my neighbour, uncle Jonathan, and I was supplied with entertainment for the day. So it is, let us be where we will, our gloomicst days have their bright spots. The old gentleman's conversation has been so interesting that I have determined to write it out for the benefit of my friends, and that they may judge something of his character, I will with his permission offer a short sketch of his life, and manner of living. Uncle about seventy three or four years of age and in the vigour of health. He is skilled in music, is a good singer and was a fifer in the war of 1812. In his younger days he was foud of shooting, hunting, fishing and trapping, he is weather beaten and inured to storms and hardships. Most of his life has been passed in the still woods, where he has acquainted himself with all our animals and plants. Till in middle age, he was too fond of good company, and good cheer, but for the last twenty eight years he has been, a strong lived. We have a little farm, a patch of bulwark, in the cause of temperance, and so fixed in his principles, as to remind one of the farm; it is enclosed and we have limed and sturdy oaks that surround his dwelling. He

There is a soberness, a grandeur and dignity in trees thus standing so quietly together, very impressive.

I do not wonder the poor as they always do should like the seclusion here found. My memory carries me back thirty years when uncle Jonathan was in the prime of manhood, and to that time and those events of my own life longest to be remembered. I was then a boy and so fond of rural pleasures, that I could not endure those of the city. The sail boat and the fishing line had more charms for me than all other things except the gun. It was now I had just learned to shoot, and manage a boat. While out upon these wild pleasures I often saw the hardy man, and his old dog Pilot, a large white spaniel, with an ugly wooly face, looking so sober that I thought he was wiser than common dogs.-He was tutored to great perfection, and understood the duty devolving upon dogs of his kind, so well that he was the admiration of the whole neighborhood. The Origin of Paper Money. The invention of Paper Money is much more ancient than the establishment of the earliest Banks. The bank of St. George, of Genoa, the most ancient we know, was founded in 1407; but before the thirteenth centu-, Koblat, grandson of Genghis, Khan, the Tarter conquerer, introduced Paper Money into China, and his example was at once followed by his cousin, Kaigation, the sulton of man, unless it is to try his patience, if he is count of the great disorders it produced in their extensve dominions.

A LADY ON BEARDS

A fair correspondent of the Home Journal has the following sensible remarks on the wholesome habit of wearing the beard, which has lately come into the fashion:

"It is astonishing what change a few years has wrought in regard to shaving. Once, everybody shaved, but now, I much mistake, If every gentlemen has not found to shave or not to shave, a question suggested by his morning toilet. Alas for the rozor-strop man. THE STOW

The snow was proverbially called the " poer

farmer's manure" before scientific analysis had shown that it contained a larger per centage of ammonia than rain. The snow serves as a protecting mantle to the tender herbage and the roots of all plants against the fierce blasts and cold of winter. An examination of snow in Siberia showed that when the tempercture of the air was 72 degrees below zero tle temperature of the snow a little below the surface was 29 degrees above zero, over 100 degrees difference. The snow keeps the earth just below its surface in a condition to take on chemical change which would not happen if the earth were bare and frozen to a great depth. The snow prevents exhalations from the earth; and is a powerful absorbent, retaining and returning to the earth gases arising from vegetable and animal decomposition. The snow, though it falls heavily at the door of the poor and brings death and starvation to the fowls of the air and beasts of the field, is yet of incalculable benefit in a climate like ours and especially at this time, when the deep springs of the earth were failing and the mill streams were refusing their motive powers to the craving appetites of man. If, during the last month, the clouds had dropped rain instead of snow we might have pumped and bored the earth in vain for water; but with a foot of snow upon the earth and many feet upon the mountains the hum of mill stones and the harsh notes of the saw will soon and long testify to its beneficence. Bridges, earthworks, and the fruits of engineering skill and toil may be swept away, but the man will still rejoice in the general good and adore the benevolence of Ilim who orders all things aright. The snow is a great purifier of the atmosphere. The absorbent power or capillary action of snow is like that of a sponge or charcoal.— Immediately after snow has fallen melt it in a clean vessel and taste it, and you will find immediately evidences of its impuriy. Try some a day or two old and it becomes nauseous, cspecially in cities. Snow water makes the mouth harsh and dry. It has the same effect upon the skin, and upon the hands and feet produces the painful malady of chilblains. The following casy experiment illustrates beautifully the absorbent property of snow: Take a lump of snow (a piece of snow crust answers well) of 3 or 4 inches in length and hold it in the flame of a lamp; not a drop of water will fall from the snow, but the water, as fast as formed, will penetrate or be drawn up into the mass of snow by capilliary attraction. It is by virtue of this attraction that the enow purifies the atmosphere by absorbing and retaining its noxious and noisome gases and o-

He failed signally with the Fire Annihilator, with the Illustrated Paper, with his Menagerie and Circus, with the Crystal Palace, with the Baby Show, with the Premium Beauty affair, and now, last and greatest of all, with the Jerome Yankee Clock Co., which has made him insolvent .-The Ledger says the public are much interested in knowing all the truth of the alleged failure of the Jerome Clock Company and Mr. P. T. Barnum. Mr. B. has enjoyed the reputation of the possession of great wealth fer years, and has also been esteemed a shrewd business man. The manner in which the alleged failure is said to have occurred, namely, by his leaving his name attached in blank to various liabilities has done much to weaken confidence in his business qualifications. The Hartford Courant publishes a statement of the assets and liabilities of the Clock Co.-The former is set down at $477,159, according to Mr. Jerome's valuation, which is reduced, however, by amount of deductions on various items and by mortgage collaterals, to shells, collected on the shores of Ceylon, and erable and sedate customer not long since who $229, 144. #### THE WAR NEWS.

By the arrival of the steamship Atlantic and Asia from Liverpool, diplomatic relations between the American minister at London Mr. Buchanan, and the Earl of Clarendon, the British minister, are reported to have been interrupted in consequence of a disagreement on the Central American question. A war the English press were discussing the probability of a war with this country, in a manner between the two governments. In the present aspect of affairs we see no adequate cause to change that opinion. While we refer our readers to the foreign news as found in another column, we probably can perform no more acceptable service, than to give some of the most prominent features most likely to involve a war, together with the reasons for believing none will occur. Foremost in the former class may be placed the discontented state of the public mind in England relative to the conduct and probable termination of the Russian War. Vast expense has been incurred, and immense amount of the material of war prepared to crush the rising pretensions of Russia. But after two campaigns, the people find that they have acquired neither aggrandizement, glory or conquest in their military operations, and that their fleet have accomplished comparitively nothing, except blockading a few Russian ports. Disappointed in their expectations of acquiring glory in the East, the public feeling in England is represented as anxious, to get up a fresh war to return the ill success of the last. compelled to submit to it, then a most dangerous enemy to the continuance of peace exists. England is essentially the great commercial a war with the United States a very different men are well aware of this. While Russia could not injure her commerce with other countries at all, because her few ports are so situated as to be easily and effectively blockaded and consequently not injure her revenues. the cruisers of the United States would near ly destroy her foreign commerce and thus in addition to the loss of treasure, also cripple to maintain armies and navies in effective condition. England without her commerce would be shorn of her strength. As this power was sufficiently strong to plunge the nation into a war with Russia, to curtail her naval power, it is but fair to infer that it is also strong enough to prevent a war with the U. States, when its interest so powerfully induce to such a course. The leading British journals are filled with the bombast and self-importance which seem to be the peculiar attributes of an Englishman, with an occasional streak of honest confession. In a late number of the London Times in an article on a war, with this country, the editor compares the size and condition of the navy of the two countries, and imagines the sweeping of the American commerce from the sea as a very small thing for their navy, and profeses a regret that in such a contest there should be such a disparity in force. As the danger of a rupture between the two countries seems more apparent, its tone changes and the editor admits that they " could hardly expect to suffer much less damage than they could inflict."-This admission is significant, and shows that however much they may bluster about being "driven into a war" with us. that such an expedient would be but an extremely doubtful way of settling the difficulty, even with all the advantages of their large navy. However much temporary loss might be inflicted of the "fair sex" into our office-notwith- well-adjusted trickery and fraud, so now they on this country by such a war, there can be standing they found us with our sleeves rolled are made the unconscious victims of the most no reasonable doubt that the effect to England | up to the elbows. - It being one of the most ridiculous impostures, and the most shameless would be more lasting. country there is a class ready for a war it goomust be admitted that there is a much larger class, directly interested in the preservation of peace. The commercial and agricultural interests require for their success a state of peace. And as they are the predominent pursuits, it is safe to infer that peace will be preserved. Besides these, the slave holders are also much interested. Because in any agitation such as war would produce, their peculiar property would be rendered particularly insecure. After speaking an hour and a half, he concluded without showing up spiritualism and other modern isms and delusions, which he designed doing, but time would not permit. The committee has requested it, and we expect to be favored with another lecture from the same productive source. The author has cheerfully furnished us with his manuscript, from which we make the following disconnected extracts: All are familiar with that saying of a mod-

"The proper study of mankind is man." The sentiment contained in this brief line is not less truthful, than the language which gives it expression, is poetic. A full justification of this sentiment is found in the Bible, as well as elsewhere. The history of mankind has been a history of cunning, falsehood, and imposture on the one hand, and of ignorance, servility, and superstition on the other. Never did Solomon utter a sentiment more in accordance with truth, short, almost any loving affectionate "right than when he said, "God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions." These inventions have been employed to dazzle and deceive the less informed and the more unsuspecting portions of mankind, Johnson. from the vile arts practiced by the magicians of Egypt, who confronted Moses, down to the equally vile impostures of the modern "spirit rappers."

> There is a two-fold view which persons are wont to take of the ages that are past, as compared with our own times. In respect to moral excellence, and religious zeal, they are continually extolling the past, and despising the present. They are fond of dwelling upon that passage, a garbled portion of which is-"The former times were better than these." The Churchman, for instance, may be heard lamenting the decline of piety and religious zeal. in his ecclesiastical communion since its organization under good queen Elizabeth; the Presbyterian recalls the strict conscientiousness, and solemn devotion of the Puritans, and the Pilgrims, and with a sigh deplores the present diminished state of these qualities in his denomination; the Baptist turns back his thoughts to the days of Williams, and his compeers, and as he familiarized his mind with the self-sacrificing courage, and far-reaching charity, which then abounded in his communion, may be heard to murmur-Would that it were so now! And the Methodist, as branch of the Christian Church, and beholds the lack of plainness, simplicity, and zeal, which almost everywhere meets his eye, feels constrained to acknowledge-It was not so n the days of Wesley and of Asbury. Such s the fault finding, groaking spirit, which characterizes the present age, in questions relating to moral goodness and religious activity.

After Mr. Killinger's resolution declaring that the Convention would nominate no man who was not in favor of interdicting slavery in the territories north of 36° 30' latitude was laid on the table, Mr. Brownslow of Tenn., moved that the Convention now proceed to the nomination of a President and Vice President. Many speeches were made for and against the proposition in which Sectionalism and Republicanism, were especially denounced, and of devotion to the Constitution and its compromises expressed.

The motion was finally carried and amid much excitement, by 151 yeas to 51 noes. Mr. Perkins, of Connecticut then spoke in favor of restoring the Missouri Compromise as a right due the north, and finally withdrew from the Convention, inviting others of the same opinion to go with him, and take measures to call a Convention upon that basis. A large number of Northern delegates also left the Convention. It was then resolved to call the roll informally, and each member be entitled to nominate. The following was the

WAR WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

One feels, while writing on the present dif ficulties with Great Britain, that his words possess very small power, and will be attended with little or no utility. This dispute, even more than previous ones, demonstrates the value of politeness between ations. Most of our misunderstandings with Great Britain, if not originating in the want of this quality. have been largely aggravated by the patroniz ing, sometimes insultingly supercilious bearing of one nation, and the irrable temper, and sometimes impudent manner of the other. -The predicament in which the two countries now find themselves is the nonsequence, in a great degree, of the discourtesies which have heen mutually practiced from time to time. It is at present a war of the press; but it ought never to be forgotten, that such a quarrel may foreshadow future contests in another field. -If writers on both sides of the water are ambitious, as they frequently seem to be, to see which con brandish the sharpest pen and distill the bitterest gall; which can wound with the most cutting sarcasm, or keep rational animosities from healing up by a constant process of probing them, sometimes maliciously often playfully as a trial of wit; if these habits are indulged, as they have been, there is no wonder that an ill natured or boasting remark may be swelled to an altercation, and that a spark then struck out may be blown into flame endangering the security and happiness of two kindred nations, who have a thousand causes for the maintenance of peace, to one in sively nervous, irritable disposition of a few politicians in both countries, and to the wicked wit of ambitious writers. Perhaps there is a third cause in operation—the interest of Mr. Perry offered a resolution requesting | demagogues, who hope to help themselves to office by uncommon pretensions to public spir-Mr. Plummer offered a resolution to fur-nish to each member 100 letter and 100 blue have brought us to the present pass. These causes have been doubtless aggravated by the sore, at least the feverish state of the English government just at this crisis. should be piqued. They have shown that they are. But even though peace should grow out of the Congress at Paris, it will suffer all the wrath and vaporing which now are at their climax to cool and die away, and afterwards deliberate well, before they will proceed to extremities about a point of honor, or a point of contemptible interest. To some it may seem to be a favorable moment, should peace in Europe be concluded, to use their powerful warlike preparations in the direc-tion of the United States, though intended brightally for another field. We do not think so: In the first place, peace has not yet been made, and may not be. In the next place, whenever it shall be, Britain will find enough employment for her accumulated means near

Peace will give birth to new complications and alliances, and it would not be strange The Belligerent feeling in England against that her most intimate friends in the present the United States. conflict may, by a dash of the pen, become enemies more dangerous than we are.

We her enemy! It is not so. We have no good reasons for hostility. We are naturally allies, certainly in substantial interests, and ought to be, and are to a large degree, in feeling. But we are exposed to the silly bickerings that so often estrange relations .-But should peace, as it may, leave England isolated with combinations threatening her security, she knows very well whither to turn her eyes for sympathy and countenance. Of this, be sure she is never oblivious. The time will come, it may come soon, that Britain will be left almost alone in Europe for the defence of free institutions and the Protestant rights of conscience. In contemplation of his chapter in the history of the future. doubtless deeply reflected on in advance by British statesmen, the majestic form of this Republic, the offspring of her loins, will anpear to their imagination, emerging from the gloom upon her side, unfurling the glorious stars and stripes. The United States will n then be flouted at as colonies, as they were a few days since by the London Times. To them will then be assigned the place of honor -the right wing of the grand army of liberty arrayed against despotism, civil and religious. The friendship of these two liberal powers is of more consequence to themselves and to mankind, than all the territory, rights and jurisdiction for which they ever fough, or are ikely to fight, from the day of Independence to the day of doom. Let those who guide their destinies then raise their eyes, made dim by poring over musty parchments, to the liberal interests and true policy of both countries. Leave the interpretation of a Convention framed by lawyers to the construction of lawyers, who have mostly done it hitherto, with the narrow notions of a special pleader. Abandon this purblind search for its real meaning, if it ever had a definite one, and leave it to the decision of an arbiter, or set is aside, negotiate a substitute, or leave the matter to time. Such is the judgment of the people of both nations, who cannot see how the honor or the interest of either will be asterted by a war, when it can be evidently averted. Let their respective official servants take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

H ly Post for 1856. The terms of our Journals for the ensuing year are-For the Daily Post, $8; for the Press and Post semi-weekly, (Mondays and Thursdays) $4; and for the Statesman and Weekly Post, (Fridays)

These journals are edited by Charles G. Greene and Richard Frothingham, Jr.; employ a large corps of assistant editors, reporters and correspondents; and neither labor and oxpence is spared to make their columns valuable. They have deen published nearly thirty years; have a range of subscription exceeded in extent and aggregate by no paper in New England; and, so largely is their circulation increasing, that A NEW PRESS has been ordered to enable the demand to be The reading matter consists of a great variety of useful and entertaining matter. Its editorials, domestic and foreign correspondenc, reports of lectures, marine department, daily monetary article and weekly financial review, literary notices, poetic contributions and humorous matter make variety designed to meet every tasto. The advertising columns embrace an almost en-from that department of the paper alone can be obtained a correct impression of the character of trade, its facilities and its operations; while the financial editorials give an accurate view of passing events in the commercial world The Press and Post is made from the daily's contents, and published every monday and Thursday morning. It is clearly and handsomely printed on fine paper in clear type, and the subscription is four dollars ayear. The Boston Statesman and Weekly Post Forms a racy and complete record of the times, and contains the news of every description; in fact a brief and comprehensive history of passing events; foreign news in detail, domestic informa-tion, agricultural items, commercial and monetary articles, statements of trade, of the weather, of crops, &c., accounts of meetings, political records, news of every description, poetry, pleasant reading matter, humorous items, epigrams; in fact a complete family Newspaper—a vehicle for every species of useful and entertaining information, among which will be found, in each issue, a pleasing story. The Statesman is printed on the largest sized paper and on new and beautiful type. has a very large circulation and its rapidly increasing list is the best evidence of its popularity. It is supplied at the rate of two dollars a year for single subscriptions. Clubs, taking tens or more copies in one package, will be supplied at one dol-ler and a half a year. THE COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT Of these journals involves a large expenditure; contains varied and occurate reports as to all branches of trade; and is second to that of no paper published in New England.

These journals are carefully conducted, and edited in a faith in democratic principles, but in a spirit of conciliation to all parties. As advertising mediums they are unsurpassed; penetrating as they do, into such a variety of households scat-tered over the whole Union, and read as they are by all classes of the community, they furnish an opportunity for the diffusion of information which car, scarcely be obtained elsewhere,
