LINES, ON THE BURNING OF THE STEAM FERRY BOAT NEW JERSEY.

A wail came o'er the waters, Of the struggle deep, with death, In silence held their breath. For the loved of many hearts were there,

In the fearful battle strife; And the tender babe and mother, Were to struggle for their life. A sound came o'er the waters-

'Twas a loud and thrilling cry, Of woman in her helplessness, And man in agony. For, oh! the strife was fearful, Above, the fire-fiends breath:

Beneath the burning bark there lay The treacherous waves of death Then the frail and strong together, With one sad, despairing cry; One strong appeal to Heaven-

Gained courage thus to die. A heavy stroke of sorrow Upon our city came,

When tidings of the burning barque, Enveloped deep in flame, Came looming o'er the waters-

Came to each happy hearth, And told them that their "household gods" Had perished from the earth. The husband in his manhood's prime-The wife and infant dear,

The dark and icy waters Had claimed, and never here, 'Mid friends on earth to mingle, With loved ones kind and true: For the deep, deceitful waters,

Has hid them from our view. Yet, the sun looks bright and joyous, And the waters gently lave The banks, but tell us nought of those Who sleep beneath its wave. Still in the silence of the night,

The path our Saviour trod, Comes o'er the soul in whispers sweet: "Be still, for I am God."

O! a wail from many a hearthstone, Comes sadly to our car, And bids us, in God's name, go forth,

The "stricken ones" to cheer. To point them to the Healer-The ever good and wise-Who, in His mercy, thus has call'd, From out the starry skies:

"Whom most I love I chasten" To lead you home to rest; Then bow in deep humility, To One who knoweth best. Let stricken souls seek comfort

In the quiet hush of even, And strive, in humble hope and trust, To meet their lost in Heaven. CAMDEN, March 17, 1856.

MORAL.

THE SCOTCH. A people whose education and habits are such, that in every quarter of the world, they rise above the mass of those with whom they mix, as surely as oil rises to the top of water; a people of such temper and self-government, that the wildest popular excesses recorded in their history partake of the gravity of judicial proceedings, and of the solemnity of religious rites; a people whose national pride and mutual attachment have passed into a proverb; a people whose high and fierce spirit, so forcibly described in the haughty motto which encircles their thistle, preserved their independence during a struggle of centuries from the encroachments of wealthier and more powerful neighborssuch a people cannot be long oppressed.

From the Saturday Evening Post. THE GARDEN IN MARCH.

"It is the first mild day of March, Each minute sweeter than before, The Redbreast sings from the tall larch That stands beside our door."

So sang Woodsworth, the poet-lover of Nature, in praise of the soft genial March of seagirt England. But even in our harsher clime amid the lingering storms of winter, come balmy days that set our fancy affoat upon a sea of delicious expectation, while the new life of Spring runs riot through every vein. For Hope is sweeter than any fruition that carth affords, and all the bloom of Summer and the ripe glory of Autumn thrills us not as do the boundless possibilities that like a vision oversweep the soul with the first breath of Spring. It is the rising from the deadthe miracle of resurrection typified yearly before our eyes, and endless repetitions cannot

How happy the birds are this morning!-The sunshine and soft air set them all atilt with rapture. That must be a bluebird singing so sweetly in the tall tree. Bluebirds love to be near the dwellings of men. And this little brown creature hopping on the ground, with a breast as white as the snow beneath it-Really we must brush up our ornithological knowledge, and learn of our dear old frieds Wilson and Audubon the name of each pretty flutterer, that we may call them as familiarly as we do Harry and Fred, the little loves of our nursery.

Children, especially babies, are very like the birds, with their innocent, endcaring ways, their bright glances and quick movements. that cannot, by any chance, be other than Then turn thee away from this earth's hopes & joys graceful. The first warm sunshine sets them to fluttering, and singing, too. They plan summer playhouses, and chatter of summer sports, while over their heads the tree-tops are all alive with similar discussions among the busy little housekeepers of the air.

How it amuses the children to interpret the baby talk of the birds! They smile and nod assent at once, and the sweet, shy creatures seem henceforth more than ever like playmates. Their perfect freedom seems an especial luxury to little ones not yet let loose. Cora looks longingly after them, and pleads to run all around the garden, but the soft snow forbids. In his " Advice to a Father" he gives a very pleasing picture of his own home-life. "We lived in a garden of about two acres, partly kithen garden with walls, partly shrubbery ond trees, and partly grass. There were the peaches, as tempting as any that ever grew, and yet as safe from fingers as if no child were ever in the garden. the firmament.—Ruskin. It was not necessary to forbid. The blackbirds, the thrushes, the white-throats, and even that very shy bird the goldfinch, had their nests and bred up their young ones in great abundance, all about this little spot, constantly the play-place of six children; and one of the latter had its nest, and brought up its young ones in a raspberry-bush within two yards of a walk, and at the time that we were gathering the ripe raspberries. Each child had his flower-bed, little garden, plantation of trees; rabbits, dogs, cits, horses, pheasants and hares; hoes, spades, whips, guns; always some object of lively interest, and as much carnestness and bustle about the various objects as if our living had solely depended upon them. I made everything give way to the great object of making their lives happy and innocent. I did not know what they might be in time, or what might be my lot; but I was resolved not to be the cause of their being unhappy then, let what might become of us

Such is the life that children would instinct city have no attraction for them in comparison. Give them country air and country sports, ample room and encouragement to grow up intelligent, practical, and happy human beings, and you have a solid foundation for mental culture. Through the natural play of a healthy mind they will be always unwittingly acquiring knowledge, so that at any time they can quickly surpass the weary students of a city school. The general exercise of the faculties is what the city cannot afford. "Such a poor place to live—not a stick to be found!" said a little boy, who was brought back to town after a summer of the largest liberty in the country.

Winter retreats this season with reluctant steps, showering down occasionally from the selectest treasures of the frost, such lavish beauty that we more than forgive his tardiness. Such was the snow fall of the 19th .-In the darkness and stillness of night it transformed the garden into a scene of enchantment which vanished with the sunrise like a fairy wonder.

" The snow had begun in the gloaming; And busily all the night Had been heaping field and highway, With a silence deep and white.

Every pine, and fir, and hemlock, Wore ermine too dear for an earl; And the poorest twig of the elm tree, Was ridged inch deep with pearl. From sheds new roofed with Carrara,

Came Chanticleer's muffled crow;

The stiff rails were softened to swan's down,

And still fluttered down the snow." Early that morning we looked from the vindow that opens upon the garden, and exclaimed, "Was there ever anything more beautiful?" It was all embowered as if the trees were in full leaf. The snow had descended noiselessly as a dream through the quiet air, and the nakedness of wigter was there no spectacle the morning ldin's garden, where .id's hung like autumn fruit, and liamonds flashed and rubies glowed and flan through the green branches, was not a more bsilliant sight.

These are compensations for a late season But we shall probably have it somewhat as they do in Russia and Sweden, where on a sudden all signs of winter disappear with incredible rapidity, and Nature rises up some fine morning and puts on her Spring attire, as mortals do, all at once.

Kircher and the Atheist.

The famous astronomer, Athanasius Kircher, having an acquaintance who denied the existence of a Supreme Being, took the following method to convince him of his error upon his own principles. Expecting him upon a visit, he procured a very handsome globe of the starry heavens, which being placed in a corner of the room in which it could not escape his friend's observation, the latter seized the first occasion to ask from whence it came, and to whom it belonged. "Not to me," said Kircher, "nor was it made by any person, but came here by mere chance." "That," replied his skeptical friend, " is absolutely impossible; you surely jest." Kircher, however, seriously persisted in his assertion, and took occasion to reason with his friend upon his own atheistical principles.

"You will not," said he, "believe that this small body originated in more chance; and yet you will contend that those heavenly bodies of which it is only a faint and diminutive resemblance, came into existence without or-der or design." Pursuing this chain of reas-oning, his friend was at first confounded, in the next place convinced, and ultimately,

Do not think, that because you are a farmer's daughter, you connot be a lady; that you must of necessity, have coare, hard hards, and unrefined mind, and be rude and inpol ished in speech and manners. You can be just as lady-like while skimming milk, churning butter, or sweeping, and dusting, as if you lived in a splended parlor, painting, embroidering, and playing on the piano, with a regiment of servants to do your bidding. No young girl, is one whit the less a lady, because she works, whatever silly creatures-who are too lazy and proud to earn their bread-may say to the contrary. And do not, for a moment think, that to be a lady, you must have a face Such is the life that children would instinctively choose. Give me a rosychecked, bright-eyed, well developed, independent farmer's daughter, in preference to il the pale, delicate, consumptive-looking city ladies that ever went into the country nleasure seeking.

Being a farmer's daughter, need not debar you from enjoying the refinements and elegancies of life. Even if your father is not rich enough to buy a piano, and pay a music teacher, you can cultivate your voice, the finest musical instrument in existence; and you can embroider too, slippers for father and prothers, collars and sleeves, and et cetera for mother, cushions for chairs and footstools; and you can make home beautiful with flowers and vines, a yard and garden glowing with them in spring, summer, and autumn; and the setting-room cheerful with them in winter; and all these things will make you more ladylike, and refined, and gentle; will shed graceful beauty over every household duty, and help to make home a charmed circle to the father and brothers.

TRIMMING TREES.

" As soon as having is over, fruit trees of all kinds may be trimmed. Now is the time to expect the wounds to heal rapidly, as the trees make wood fast at this season."—Massachusetts Plowman, of Aug. 18th.

If the only thing to be taken into consideration is the rapid healing of the wounds, this season of the year would, most assuredly, be the most suitable of any. If on the contrary of the tree, of all seasons this would be the most improper; for the very reason that "trees make wood fast at this season."

Early spring, before the swelling of the buds, and the active circulation of sap commences, I regard as the most proper and rational time

An unce of corrosive sublimate and an ounce of alum are dissolved in a pint of rain water and this is applied to the roots of the fur with a sponge: and if possible it should be also applied on the inside of the fur. This solution applied to fur capes, victorines, &c., before they are laid past during warm weather, it is said, will effectually provent the attacks of moths. #### SPRING.

Genial spring again peeps forth from be hind the ice-veiled form of rugged winter .-Even fickle March, with all her changeful smiles and frowns, so like to human passion, -now clouds, now sunshine, -now with sweet and balmy airs, so softly fanning the ambient atmosphere, and anon sweeping over the earth with the fury of the wintry blast,-even March, had nearly passed, be fore spring's sweet harbinger, the gentle blue bird, gladdened us with his welcome coming. Soon a thousand merry warblers will follow in his train, making the whole joyous, landscape jouund with their morning songs of praise. Hill side and dale, so long arrayed in drapery of white. Will soon be mantled with its accustomed garb of living green, and budding flowrets and leafy shrubs, bursting their russet sheaths, spring forth to life and beauty, enlivening and decorating the fair face of nature. O'er the "green pastures" and "beside the still waters" the lowing herds and sportive lambkins, peacefully will graze, regardless of the butcher's crimsoned blade, and skip in sportive play. Heartily relished, and gay as the amusements of the past winter has been, no one will part with them with regret or wish them substituted for the soft and pleasing influences of the gentle spring. Pent up within unusual limits by the lengthed severity of the winter, the internal traffic of the entire country will break forth with an unwonted energy, and give to all departments of labor, a life and activty never before exceeded or equalled. The rapid increase in the population and wealth of the country, cannot long bear a restraint upon the freedom of its intercourse. In a country so vast and with a climate so varied, comprising the extremes of the temperate zone, and even dipping into the torrid, whose energetic population, enjoy all the advantages afforded by the utmost civilization yet obtained, nothing less than the elements themselves, could restrict their enterprise and bridle their commerce.

Happily, even in the severest seasons like the past, the embargo of nature is but of short duration, and may afford to trade what it yields to nature, a suspension needed to recruit powers that might otherwise become exhausted. The vast superiority of the inhabitants of the temperate zone over all the others, both physically and intellectually, would seem to prove that these short respite afforded by the winter months was an essential in securing vigor and enterprize. With an indolent and effeminate people it is not to be expected that business could be successfully prosecuted, since however vigorous a population may be, it soon becomes enervated under the influence of a tropical sun. From the necessary rest and inactivity of the winter. people come with a renewed vigor to pursue their accustomed avocations.

BOWENTOWN FARMERS' CLUB.

We have not had the pleasure of visiting this Association, until Monday evening of his week, since August last, at which time vo received a special invitation to attend their festival, and have not yet forgotten the leasant time we enjoyed, nor the abundance of rich products of the soil, such as apples, peaches, poars, melons, &c., with ice ercam, cakes and other delicacies prepared for the occasion. Monday evening last being the time appointd for the Rev. Mr. Gillett, of Shiloh, to deliver an address before the club, on the subject of Agriculture, a large number of males and females were present. The committe previously appointed to report on the farm occupied by Mr. Percival Nichols, handed in an elabaorate and interesting report, giving some historical facts relative to the farm, the price paid for it, the present condition of the buildings, the amount and quality of stock, together with a general description of the place, its improvements, the amount and quality of produce raised, the kind of agricultural implements used &c .-The committee also referred to the hospitable manner in which they were received by Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, and expressed their gratitude for the sumptuous repast of which hey partook while on their visit to the farm. After the preliminaries of the meeting
