A GENUINE POEM.

The annexed genuine old poem, says the "Home Journal," has the ring of the true metal, and is as applicable now as when it was written-for the philosophy is sound, and therefore universal:

Who shall judge a man from nature? Who shall know him by his dress? Paupers may be fit for princes, Princes fit for something less. Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket May beclothe the golden ore Of the deepest thought and feeling-Satin vest could do no more. There are springs of crystal nectar Ever swelling out of stone; There are purple buds and golden Hidden, crushed and overgrown. God, who counts by souls, not dresses, Loves and prospers you and me; While he values thrones the highest But as pebbles on the sea.

Masters-rulers-lords, remember That your meanest hands are men! Men of labor, men of feeling, Men by thought and men by fame, Claiming equal rights to suashine There are foam-embroidered oceans. There are little weed clad rills, There are feeble inch-high saplings. There are cedars on the hills; God, who counts by souls, not stations, Loves and prospers you and me; For to him all vain distinctions

Man upraised above his fellows,

Oft forgets his fellows then;

Are as peobles on the sea. Toiling hands alone are builders Of a nation's wealth and fame; Titled laziness is pensioned, Fed and fattened on the same: By the sweat of other's forelieads, Living only to rejoice, While the poor man's outraged freedom Vainly lifteth up its voice. Truth and justice are eternal,

Born with loveliness and light; Secret wrongs shall never prosper While there is a sunny night. God, whose world-heard voice is singing Boundless love to you and me, Sinks opposition with its titles, As the pubbles on the sea.

THE UNLUCKY MAIDEN.

Tis very strange I cannot find Some one to marry me inclined: I've tried each plot, and scheme and plan, To captivate proud hearted man: But all alike have proved in vain-I fear I single must remain. There's Flora B----, has just come out

A proud young Minx with lips that pout; Gay lovers she has three or four, I see them daily at her door; While here I set the long dull day, And fret the gloomy hours away. My chance is o'er, I really fear; I'm twenty-three this very year; My cheeks already seem to fade, And none have yet an offer made: What I must do, I cannot tell,

I feel unhappy and unwell. 'Tis six long years since I came out, I know not what I've been about-My gay companions all are gone-Married and left me every one; The Browns and Baileys, Sharps and Greens E'en some of them while in their teens.

THE BACHELOR.

A bachelor sat by his blazing grate. And he fell into a snooze, And he dreamed that o'er his wrinkled pate Had been thrown the nuptial noose And a rosy boy came to his side, And bounded on his knee, And back from his beaming face he shook

Fair curls in childish glee. Then clear rang out his merry voice, He shouted aloud, " Papa, I don't like anybody else

But you and dear Mamma!" Oh! the bachelor's heart o'erran with joy, So long by love unlit, And from his unseen depths poured out

Affectionate infinite. Quistretching arms of strength unshorn, He hugged-nis old ton CAT,

Which, as 'twas wont, when master snoozed He leaped into his lap.

My client assured me that he had no hand in robbing the mail, but that he tried to dissuade his companions. But they would not listen to him. One of them slipped up behind the carrier and knocked him off the horse. Then they bound and blindfolded him, and having tied him to a tree they took the mail bag, and made off to a neighboring field, where they overhauled it finding some five hundred dollars in various letters. He as much as to say, "trap me if you can!" went with them, but in no way did he have any hand in the crime. Those who did it fled, and as the carrier had recognized him in

I called Mrs. Naseby back to the stand.

"You say that no one, save yourself and the Prisoner had access to your room," I said. "Now could Naney Luther have entered that room if she wished?" She was pale and frightened, and the moment my eyes rested upon her, I pitied her. She had been weeping profusely, for her bosom was wet, but as she found so many eyes upon her, she became too much frightened to | Elizabeth's misery. ween more.

The complaint against her set forth that she had stolen one hunned dollars from Mrs. Nuseby; and as the case went on, I found that Mrs. Naseby was her mistress, a wealthy widow, living in town. The poor girl de-clared her innocence in the most wild terms, and called on God to witness that she would rather die than steal. But circumstances were hard against her. A hundred dollars in bank notes had been stolen from her mistress's room, and she was the only one who had access there.

At this juncture, while the mistross was ipon the witness stand, a young man came as bold and defiant as ever. and caught me by the arm. He was a fine "They tell me you are a good lawyer!" he

Here he hesitated again.

In my soul I knew that the girl was innocent; or at least, I firmly believed so - and perhaps I could help her. I arose and went to the girl, and asked her if she wished me to defend her. She said yes. Then I informed the court that I was ready to enter into the case, and was admitted at once. The loud murmur of satisfaction which ran through the room quickly told me where the sympathies of the people were. I asked for a moment's cessation, that I might speak to my client. I went and sat down by her side, and asked her to state to me candidly the whole case. She told me she had lived with Mrs Naseby nearly two years, and that during all that time she had never any trouble before. About two weeks ago, she said, her mistress lost a hundred dol-

They then went to my trunk, and they found twenty-five dollars of the missing money there .-But oh, sir, I never took it, somehody else put that money there."

I then asked her if she suspected any one. "I don't know" she said, "who could have done it but Nancy. She has never liked me, because she thought I was treated better than she was. She is the cook, and I was the chambermaid.

She pointed Nancy Luther out to me. She was a stout bold-faced girl, about two-andtwenty, with a low forehead, small grey eyes, pug nose, and thick lips. I caught her glance at once as it rested upon the fair young prisoner, and the moment I detected the look of hatred which I read there, I was convinced that she was the rogue. "Oh, sir, can you help me?" my client asked in a fearful whisper. "Nancy Luther, did you say that girl's name was? "Yes, sir."

For the West Jersey Pioneer.

Upon the evening of the close of April. I had seated myself where the plowman was so gracefully turning down the green sward, watching the purple grackle and the blackbirds as they circled and trailed in the furrow. With the exception of the songs of the birds, all was still, and there was a softness to forget where he was, for he flung his arms in the air only to be enjoyed occasionally, at farmer's wives, as they come together to look around her, and she laid her head upon his this season of the year. On the 22d, after the Senate had adjourned, and while Mr. Sumner was sitting at his desk writing, Mr. Brooks made an assault him over the head with his cane, and so set though there is something so eozy about verely wounding him that he has been confined to his room. We have not space to give a more full account of the assault; but we regard it as our solemn duty, as independent Journalists to enter our earnest protest against all such contemptably disgraceful, cruel and cowardly exhibitions of Ruffianism on the part of the public servants of this mighty nation.

Let the freemen of the North ponder well this whole subject, and ask themselves the question whether it is right for them to tamely submit to such outragous treatment of their public servants, by Southern ruffians, sings and banging of boxes, and tossing of sent to congress by the Slave dealers of the South, to bully into subserviency to Slavery ("the sum of all villianies") the conscientious representatives of the freeman of the North-Are we prepared to have our representatives in Congress, treated before the world, by Southern slave drivers as they treat their human chattles? are our Senators the property of the slave owners and slave drivers of the South? Too long already have Northern men submitted to Southern dictation, tyranny and bullying, so long indeed, that Southerners seem to regard it as their privilege, if not their duty, of hearing Henry Ward Beecher. Accomto treat Northern men with the same contempt and cruelty with which they treat their slaves. Witness the attack upon Mr. Greeley, some months ago-the asssult upon Mr. Sumner, and the unprecedented cruelties exercised towards the free state men of Kansas-God of Our Fathers! Are the desendents of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, and the Children of the Revolutionary fathers, who rather than submit to pay a paltry tax on tea, armed and marched to the battle field and poured out their blood most freely to secure liberty for their posterity, to quietly surrender that liberty so dearly purchased for them, and tamely submit to be slaves to men who are their superiors in nothing but ruffianism? No! Never! If Northern men must be slaves, or Southern men will split the Union, then we say emphatically, in the name of the blood and toil of the Patriots of 76 " Let The Union Slide."

Passed by the citizens of Bridgeton, N. J. at the termination of Dr. HARVEY's second course of Lectures, delivered in this place.

Resolved, That our thanks be extended to DR. HARVEY, for the clear and able manner in which he has delivered both this and the previous course of Lectures-and that we feel indebted to him for the many useful hints which he has thrown out, and for the general practical information which he has, at all times, so happily conveyed.

Resolved, That we believe Dr. HARVEY'S mission is to do good—inasmuch as he elucidates the Anatomy and Physiology of the human system—exposed the many faults of required wants of our natures.

Albany, May 23, 1856. MR. EDITOR:-After much journeying I find myself in the capital of the Empire State. If not the largest, Albany is in many respects the most desirable city in this beautifully classical part of America. I have a temporary home here under the hospitiable roof of one of my father's earliest and best friends. I write to you from a literary centre being surounded by upwards of ten thousand volumes in one of the finest private libraries I have seen on this side the Atlantic. The state li brary I visited yesterday, thr ugh a personal introduction on the part of my esteemed host who was Mayor of Albany in 1848I, had access to the literati of the city. I found them what men of erudition almost invariably are, persons of gentle manners, liberal views and generous feelings. The librarion, a modest and retiring spirit took great pains to overhaul the rare manuscripts, books and wormeaten documents of by-gone conturies. I was not a little elated to find that in sacred literature my own little library could furnish more ancient specimens. My Elizabethian Bible and Cromwellian Testament would have been unique in their midst, if taken from the old made a powerful speech in the Senate of the dusty box in store and placed on their shelves. Passing through Philadelphia I found that stately city the same after their drownings and burningsand no person seemed to dread either fire or water, though from servants they had recenty become such destructive masters. Both elements were employed with their wonted force. Puff and dash and splash all the way to New York! What changings and crosluggage and pushing of passengers before you find Amboy and all the etcetera of that zigzag route in the rear! But, Mr. Editor, I and ribbon in car and saloon and waiting room told their own tale; as a nation, we should learn what "all right" means as well as what "go ahead" signifies. In New York they got a little better, yet I felt myself well off in getting safely ensconced in the house the hack by the carelessness of the driver and my English hat in the same predicament by scuffling to see all right in one of the filthy back ways through which I had to pass with family to reach our destination three miles

Of course I had to pay the parson's tax and preach in the city on the Sabbath, but 1 took care to reserve to myself the privilege panied by a friend, I reached his church at Brooklyn by 10 o'clock. the pew belonged to them, and they could do what they pleased with their own, but I did not envy a lady her position who sat next to them. At half-past 10 o'clock, the organ played a voluntary, and the "man of mark" showed himself in perfect composure, (O, how I admire the coolness of your Yankees!) and which a lengthy discussion took place, touchsat himself down in a cushioned arm chair ing the subject of Slavery. The voluntary lasted for 10 minutes, then the choir struck up in fine articulation a chant containing the words "We are His people and the sheep of His pasture. He then offered a short prayer with thoughts in it to this effect-" we do not our present social life—and plainly shows the come here as though there were no temple elsewhere-God's temple is everywhere and his presence always with sincere worshipers." Our country! We as Americans are very apt in believing that we have a great country, and indeed we have, if extent of Territory is the Ne Plus Ultra of our greatness. When we give loose rein to our imagination and permit it to roam our vast domain, and take a bird's-eye view of our possession, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Lakes on the icy North to the Gulf on the sunny South, embracing in this area the sterile and rocky hills of Maine, the everglades of Florida "the land of flowers," the deep, almost impenetrable cypress swamps of the Mississippi valley; the rich prairies toward the setting sun covered with luxuriant herbage and variagated with flowers of a thousand different hues, and over which Buffaloes in countless numbers roam, the Rocky Mountain of the far West looming up into the very Heavens, their tops covered with eternal snows where stern winter sullenly reigns upon fields of ice. When the iron monster from the Mississippi valley panting yet not fatigued with his long journey shall awaken these solitudes with his demon whistle, which have almost remained isolated since the morning that Jehovah spoke them into existence; when the magic wand of emigration shall have converted those plains over which the red man hunts the deer and beaver in his primeval pride-into smiling fields; when those wild, impetuous streams shall have become subserleap from their bosoms, when genius wields the magic pen and does justice to those noble

The Camels in Texas. - The correspon dent of the New Orleans Picayune writes as follows, from on board the steamer which took the camels recently imported from Symma, from the store-ship Supply, at the mouth of the Mississippi, to Matagorda:

"Towards evening the dreary mud banks of the mouth of the Mississppi came in view, the land all the time sinking lower and lower. The camels were on board the United States store-ship Supply, by the side of which we were soon fastened, and ready to receive the animals. It being late, we did not transfer any of them that day. We went aboard the ship Supply, however, impelled by curiosity, to see the wonderful beasts. They were lodged below, well sheltered from the bad coarse boots, Ladies wear of all kinds. weather, and had three Arabs and two Turks to attend to their wants.

"The ship had brought them a long vovage from Smyrna, consequently the pror animals had been confined in a very narrow place for over three months. They numbered fanoy shees at the shortest notice. thirty five, including several young ones, one of which was born on the voyage, in the vicinity of the trade-winds, in consequence of which the jolly tars called it "Trade-Wind." The others had various Arabic engineers but it is intended to name them after the States of the Union, which would be highly appropriate. The Supply is a fine specimen of our navel management, being an extremely neat vessel, a fast sailer, and the officers and erew of the best. She is commanded by Captain Porter, and could not be in better hands, for he regards the United States' interest as his own

"The next day the camels were installed on their new home; but not without some difficulty, for their natural timidity rendered will give you good satisfaction. Having been a them difficult to manage.

"The animals being all safe on board, and every thing in perfect order, we bade adien to the Ship Supply, both fired a salute, and our ponderous wheels striking the water soon bore us out on the sea, in full speed for Mat- Hats of the city manufactory, as well as his own,

Unequal Distribution of Wealth in the British Dominions .- We find it stated in Bowen's Political Economy, that "the incquality in the distribution of wealth in En gland, is greater than in any other civilized nation; and her nobility and gentry are wealthier, more intelligent, more highly cultivated, more influential, and more secure in the possession of their power and property, than the corresponding classes now existing, part of shirts, collars, cravats, stocks, suspenders, or that ever have existed, in any country in the world. Five noblemen, the Marquis of Breadalbane, the Dukes of Argyle, Athol. Sutherland and Buccleleugh, own perhaps one forth of Scotland. Lave already quoted the assertion of M. deLavergue, that 2,000 proprietors possess among them one third of the land and total revenue of the three kingdoms of England, Scotland and Ireland. It is admitted that, up to 1848, there were not more than 5,000 Scotch and 8,000 Irish land owners; and good reasons have been adduced for the opinion that there are only 46,000 who should be classed as landed proprietors in England. About 60,000 families, then, own all the territory which is occupied by over twenty-seven millions of inhabitants."

These facts are sufficient to show why the laboring classes in England are less wealthy, facilities to perform all operations pertaining to less intelligent and less influential than those his profession as heretofore. in this country. They have not, and cannot have, the incentives to effort, that give a spur to the native energy of our farmers and artizans. They must remain tenants, or hired workmen, and consequently have no higher aim than to carn day by day their daily bread. The hope of independence caunot be theirs. Their lives are little else than a monotony of toil, uncheered those considerations that give a vigor to muscle, and nerve the will in its determination " to labor and to wait."

Loss of Life in the Late War. - Since the commencement of the war, England has lost 19,584 gallant men by death in action, wounds and diseases; and 2,873 have been besides discharged from the service on account of the two latter causes England has sealed her declaration of unflinching devotion to the cause of national independence by the sacrifice of 22,157 gallant soldiers. Of these 4, 995 fell bravely in action, about 1,678 sunk under their wounds; 4,279 died of cholera, and 11,451 of other diseases. England has lost in all 22,457. The losses of the French, so far as they have been ascertained, amount to 60,000. Count Orloff has admitted in Paris that the Russian loss has not been less ris that the Russian loss has not been less well lighted, well ventilated HALL, seated than 500,000. The loss by the Sardinians with settees capable of accommodating 500 perhas not been stated, and the loss sustained by the Turks never will be ascertained.
