From the Woodbury Constitution. THE LAST GOOD-NIGHT.

Gently part the golden ringlets, Smooth them softly o'er her brow; Close the drooping, blue-veined eyelids, Leave her to her slumbers now. On her bosom pure and holy, Meekly fold her hands so white, Kiss the marble brow, and whisper, Once again, a fond good night.

Open now the easement widely. Press the clustering vines aside; And across the darkened chamber. Let the moonbeams gently glide, See with what a crown of glory, They invest our Nellie's brow, Ours? hlas! she's ours no longer,-

Nellie is an angel now. Mother pale, why art the weeping? Wouldst then, couldst thou call her back? We are glad her feet no longer Tread this straight and thorny track. We are glad her Heavenly Pather Took her while her heart was pure;-Glad because he did not leave her

We are glad he did not take her, Ere she'd learned the love and power Of the Earthborn, meek and lowly, To protect in death's dark hour. We are glad-and yet the tear-drops Quickly fall, for well we know That our hearth-stone will be dreary, We shall miss our darling so.

All life's sorrows to endure.

When the twilight shadows gather, And our hearts are filled with gloom, We shall miss her silvery laughter, Stealing through the darkening room .-We no more shall feel the pressure Of those arms so soft and white; Or the oft repeated kisses, Ere she whispered her "good-night."

When the morning sun is beaming, They will take her cherished form-Bear it to the silent church yard, Place o'er it a marble stone. Seatter flowers upon her pillow, Gentle flowrets pure and white; Kisa her marble brow, and whisper Once again, a last good-night. EVELYN.

AGRICULTURE.

Influence of Agricultural Pursuits on Health.

While much has been written and published in Agricultural periodicals, in regard to the best means of prescriving the strength of the soil, the preservation of the health of the domestic animals, and of the various fruit trees and plants that the farmer cultivates; who averaged only 41.33 years, showing that and while very beneficial results have followed they who follow these occupations, although these efforts, there has not, apparently, been as much attention paid to the health of man, clemencies of the weather, and as a general of the farmer himself, and his family, and thing, with less hours of labor for a day, are those in his employ, by conductors of and nevertheless obnoxious to other causes, which writers for agricultural periodicals; as the subi et demands.

It is not to be supposed that this want of farmers, attention to the subject of the health of human animality is owing in any degree to want odicals devoted to the interests of these engaged in these pursuits; but it is doubtless mainly owing to the fact, that physicians seldom write on these subjects except for journals specially devoted to the interests of their profession.

If a farmer cannot reasonably expect either profit or pleasure from unbealthy domestic animals, much less can be anticipate that disease either in his own person, or in the members of his household, can be conducive to his or their happiness, or to the advancement of their interests; and it may be well, from time to time, to ask attention to these matters.

All those who are engaged in agricultural pursuits, are subject to certain influences unfavorable to health, and those who are active laborers, are particularly exposed to the vicissitudes of the weather - more so, probably, than any other class of people who reside in the country, except perhaps the physician .-The farmers are under the necessity of caring without regard to the state of the weather, and they are therefore particularly liable to lived, gould be correct. suffer from colds, coughs, fever, rheumatism, ague, &c.; and they are likewise liable to exhaust their system by over exertion, either from too severe labor continued for a few bours, or from that which is too long continu-

As a contrast between the salubrity of different occupations, or to show the influence occupation has upon the health and life of those engaged therein, it may be well to prereports. During the year 1850 there were reported the deaths of 263 shoemakers, whose lives averaged 44.37 years, and 26 tailors laboring under shelter, unexposed to the in years less than that attained on an average by

One of the most prominent causes of this exemption from disease is the fact, that farmlabor is performed where the lungs are well supplied with pure air, and the whole body is allowed to enjoy the direct rays of the sun. With a pure air for the lungs during labor, when the inspirations are deepest and most frequent, and with the blessed sun-shine to warm and vitalize the whole frame-work and all the fluids of the body, a man becomes prepared to resist the ordinary injurious impressions that would otherwise produce sickness

ThE EYES.

The eye, when in health, requires very simple attention; bathing with cold or tepid water is all that is needful. It is, however, so delicate an organ that external causes easi ly affect it, and impair its beauty. Too strong night-watchings are equally injurious to them. Inflamation of the eyelid, accompanied by irritation, may be speedily reduced by holding it over the steam of boiling water.

There is also an inflamation. often constitutional, that occurs in the membrane which covers the globe of the eye; this may be remedied by bathing it with warm poppy water. It sometimes happens that the glands of the eye secrete too abundantly, and become glued together during the night, in which case the following preparation will be found useful: number of hogs in the States of Ohio, Indi-Chamomile tea, moderately strong, with a little brandy, in the proportion of a table-spoon-full of the latter to a small cup of the tea; the at 10,943,334, which, at $3 a head, a fair eye should be bathed frequently with this average value of the stock, amounts to $32. mixture, and at night, before retiring to bed, 830,002. The eyeslashes contribute greatly to the beauty of tha eye; in early youth they are generally thick and long, but owing to neglect they soon break and wear off. As they not only impart a soft and pleasing expression in the eye, but protect and preserve it, their growth should be encouraged. For this purpose they should be clipped every four or five weeks; by this means, they will acquire strength, and will soon bocome long and luxurient. One or more cyclashes sometimes grow inward, and irritate the eye; it may be possible to train them in a proper direction with a camel's hair pencil dipped in gum water, otherwise geon. The eyebrows have a great influence on the character of the face. De Brun regarded them as the most certain interpreter of the sentiments. Their shape may be improved by judicious management, but artificial applications always give an unnatural and disagreeable effect; they may be rendered soft and compact by smoothing them closely together with the fingers. The hairs should never be plucked out nor destroyed by depilatories, unless they meet across the nose, which imparts so fierce and sigister an expression that it is permissible to remove them; in every other instance it is better to leave the eyebrows as nature made them, for any artificial shape given to them will not harmonize as well with the rest of the features. A wellclosed, the almond shape is the most beautiful. The Chinese have a method of elongating the oval of the eye, by drawing out or extending the eyelids at the external angle; which they esteem essential to beauty.

UNCLE BEN'S SERMON.

Not many hours ago, I heard Uncle Ben discussing this matter to his son, who was complaining of pressure.

Closing Exercises of the Millville Public School.

The Millville Public School closed its session, on Friday the 25th inst., triumphantly It was not our privilege to be present on that occasion, but we are informed by an eye witness, that it was a scene of interest, making lasting impressions, for good, on the minds of all present. The School commenced its Afternoon session, at two o'clock, one half hour after the usual time. There were no "cut and dried" exercises, indeed the pupils knew not, until they were called on, what would be the nature of the exercise or the particular branch which would first occupy their attention. Classes recited in mental and the practical part of written Arithmetic. The exercise in Grammar, consisted in a rehearsal of the definitions and rules; without entering into the notation, analysis and structure of language. There were several classes in reading, some of which, manifested marked and rapid improvement. The introduction of phonetiss into the primary as well as in the intermediate and junior departments, by the retiring Principal, has worked a complete revolution in the clearness and distinctness of articulation. The Elecutionary Normal Chart is coming to be an indispensable part of school furniture. all monotony. The singing was in good taste, lively and refreshing. The compositions embracing a variety of subjects, written in various styles, indicated a good degree of progress in the science and art of that most difficult of the branches pursued in our Public Schools; yet, when properly taught and the art once acquired, it becomes a pleasing and profitable

Whatever may be thought of the mode of teaching and the manner of disciplining a School, and however great may be the diversity of opinions on this subject among teachers themselves, there can be but one rational opinion as to the flattering success of the retiring Principal, in this department of teaching. He started right. He made his pupils love him, and when this was obtained, the mental and moral soil was open and ready for the reception of those seminal influences which take root, spring up and bear fruit abundantly. It was truly pleasing to witness the lively workings of conscience among the scholars, as was seen on that occasion, in the conduct of the pupils, but more particularly as it was seen in the expressions which found their way in almost every composition these productions were a credit to the pupils whose names they severally wore, satisfactory to the parents and gratifying to the teacher.

After the conclusion of the exercises of the school, the Principal made a few valedictory remarks, in which he said. "he came among them one year ago, he came among them as seed in the morning, and he had not withheld his hand in the evening. He had engaged in teaching because he loved to teach, because them. He would like to remain with them another year, but his duty called him in another direction and he must obey. He had written their names in a book, had partly life or their deaths. Thus pleasantly the week closed, and I had concluded that education was much more easily acquired than it used to be, when I began to tember my favorite theory of compensation. Now it occurred, if these important branches of education are so easily acquired, will they not be as readily forgotten? We will have directly, many pretty fair scholars, but will there be many great scholars? Will not the method now used to develop the mind have a tendency to weaken rather than strengthen it? What a Woman Can Do.

As a wife and mother, women can make the fortune and happiness of her husband and children; and even if she did nothing else, surely this would be sufficient destiny. By her thrift, prudence and tact, she can secure to her partner and herself a competence in old age, no matter how small their beginning and the Washington from Southampton on or bow adverse a fate occasionally be theirs. By her cheerfulness she can restore her husban I's spirit, shaken by the anxieties of business. By her tender car she can often restore him to health, if disease has seized upon his overtasked powers. By her counsel and her love, she can win him from bad company, if temptation in an evil hour has led sell's motion for an inquiry as to the course him astray. By her example, her precepts, and her sex's insight into character, she can mould her children, however diverse their dispositions, into good and noble men and women. And by leading in all things, a true and beautiful life, she can refine, elevate and spiritualize all who come within reach, so that with others of her sex emulating and assisting her, she can do more to regenerate the world than all the statesmen or reformers that ever legislated. She can do as mucu, she choose to do it. Who can estimate the evil that woman has the power to do? As a wife she can ruin her husband by extravagance, folly, or want of affection. She can make a devil and an outeast of man, who might otherwise have become a good member of society. She can bring bickerings, strife and perpetual discordtrusted to her charge, into vile men and even viler women. She can, in fine, become an instrument of evil instead of an angel of good. She can lower the moral tone of society itself, and thus polute legislation at the spring head. Instead of making flowers of arrived here this evening with European truth, purity, beauty, and spiritualtiy spring up in her footsteps, till the whole earth smiles with loveliness that is almost celestial, she can transform it to a black and blasted desert, covered with the scorn of all evil passions, and swept by the bitter blasts of everlasting death. This is what a woman can do for the wrong as well as the right. Is her mission a little one? Has she no "worthy work," as has become the cry of late? Man may have a hardier task to perform, a rougher path to travel, but he has none loftier or more influeatial than woman's .- Woman's Advocate.

Congressional Duels .- There have been but twenty-five Congressional challenges to fight ducls since the organization of the first Congress, and the greater number number of these originated in quarrels, which, though political, had no reference to matters which occurred in Congress. Ebrewster's Cholera Mixture, AS gained great celebrity throughout the country; for the cure of diatrhœa, cholera morous, pains in the stomach and cholera. Also, in the first stage of dysentery, which if taken on the first attack of disease, will invariably give rehottle on hand. Read the following certificate from Rev. B. B. Hotchkin, late Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Fairfield, N. J. Mr. F. G. Brewster: Dear Sir, —I have found n your cholera mixture, a very valuable mediine in all attacks of diarrhort, which have been experienced either by myself or family for more than two years past. I believe it has never failed to cure us, and in the use of it we have, in a great measure, essaped the usual unpleasant after effects of anodynes. I have found it especially useful wnen abroad. The change of usual diet and wator for a day or more, is almost sure to effect me injuriously, and the use of your cholera mixture has proved of the greatest service on such occaious. It was when abroad and in need of relief from painful diarrhea, that I first became ac quainted with it, and I have since very seldom suffered myself to be found abroad without it. Respectfully, years, &c., B. B. HOTCHKIN. Cedarville, N. J., July 25, 1849. Prepared only by F. G. Brewster, and for sale in most of the stores in South Jersey-25 cents Bridgeton, July 10, 1856.
