Fathers Address to his Eldest Son, on his arriving to the age of 21 Years.

My eldest son, my early hope and joy. Whose weal my anxious, pleasing hours employ; Through infant days and boyish years you ran, This day your country hails you as a man. This day its laws declare you wholly free, No longer legally controll'd by me. Your life, thus far, seems short in the review, (Much shorter, I presume, to me, than you;) What yet remains will shorten every year, Till vast eternity alone appear. This day, to me, breaks no paternal chains, A parent's tenderness through life remains; My rule o'er you has long been reason's sway, And still, when reason dictates, you'll obey. My care for you will not with this day cease, Yours for yourself will probably increase; How through a crafty, vicious world you'll steer And keep your name, your purse, your conscience

Have a good home, a competence, and friends, Enjoy this life and find a happy end,-Such thoughts as these no doubt your mind en gage, While passing on from youth to manly age. O! could my pen to you such counsel give, That you through life's short changing scene might live Prudent and virtuons—by the good beloved

The wise respected, and by Heaven approved, And after death eternal pleasures gain,-Then should I neither write nor live in vain, But feeble my advice, as well you know, Yet I'll attempt, and some short hints bestow;-First, then, to Him who governs all repair. And true allegiance to his sceptre bear: Whate'er you see his rightful laws require, Faithful obey, and nothing else desire, And what those perfect rules forbid to men. Beware and shun, beyond the serpent's den; Since for our good, not his, those laws were made In all good conscience let them be obey'd: Opposed to him who scans each thought and deed No scheme of happiness can e'er succeed: In all your acts be upright and sincere, And then no human face you need to fear; Whatever case may seem a friend to need. Be without guile, " an Israelite indeed!" And though you cannot charm the assemble throng

Nor make grave senates listen to your tongue-Nor Newton like, all nature's laws explain, Nor rival Milton's high poetic strain, Nor Casar like, the fate of nations wield, Nor like Napolcon thunder o'er the field,-Act then a nobler part, be what you can, Be virtuous, honest, kind and useful man! Whose virtuous fame no sordid views can stain, And e'en vile slander may attack in vain; Whose mind above this world sublimely soars, His Saviour honors, and his God adores, Acts well his part, "on this dull stage of clay." Changes the scene, and soars in endless day.

Another Blow at the Hoops.-A few days since, as a Roxbury friend, at the close of his labors of the day, was enjoying a comfortable ride home from his office in this city, an omnibus party filled with ladies, a gentleman unon the side signalled the driver to stop, and throwing open the door, sprang into the vehicle. His first step towards a scat, nufortunately, influenced somewhat by the sudden motion of the coach, brought his right fool in confact with the lady's dress; and as, with a hasty expression, he strove to extricate it from the embrace of the boop, he was ling found his left foot in the same unfortunate connection with a boop on the other side. THE LAMP. A youth once walking along in the obscure passage of an ancient building. The place was rough and dark, and in some parts he could hardly discern the objects around him. Several times he ran against the stone pillars of projections that came in his way, and severely wounded his flesh. In one instance he was plunged headlong down a flight of steps, and at last be fell into a pit. From this he extricated himself with much difficulty and he was so disheartened that he burst into tears.

Whilst he stood weeping in the dark passage, a door opened in the floor, through which a flood of light burst fourth, and immediately a lovely female was before him. She had a winning smile upon her face, and asked in gentle tones what he desired? Give me a lamp-pray give me a lamp,' said the boy, to guide me through this la-

TOPSY'S WORD TO HUSBANDS.

Husbands, do you love your wives? Then take care of them. I'm sure I take care of my wife, says one. When she is sick, I get the doctor; I give her enough to eat, drink and wear—do not dictate to her about the management of her domestic affairs. All this is very well, so far as it goes; but woman wants something more than merely a supply rally believed that she has a soul, and that soul must be nourished, sustained, and ta ken care of. Without sympathy, woman can their sweetness, without aunshine. Dark, gloomy, and hopeless will be her life. How sud to live on, day after day, enduring toil and hardship, fitted only to a robust frame, without one look of sympathy, one kind or encouraging word of love or approval from her husband! She is little better than a cloistered nun, surrounded, by a large family, with all their wants to attend to, their food to prepare, clothing to make and keep in order, besides a whole catalogue of never-ending things to be done, which come into and make up the sum total of houskeeping. Really, what time can she have to call her own? what time has she for recreation, to improve her health and rest her weary body and barrassed mind? Do not wonder, then, that her face not always wears a smile. She has been immured in your kitchen five, ten, fifteen, perhaps twenty years; has spent the best and largest half of her life there, shut up, body, and soul, from all the sublimities of nature, the beauties of science, and, it may be, from all the sweets of social life.

No wonder the bloom which tinged her bridal cheek has faded. No wonder the with his chisel he made little lines, then deep furrows, then bold and bolder strokes, till the bloom of girlhood and beauty of womanheart, too, take care of her. Let her go free a few days or weeks to enjoy the fresh air and sunshine. Manifest a little more anxiety in regard to her health, ease, comfort, and enjoyment. Take care of her! We speak to those husbands whose wives have to work with their own hands, and let this class romember that their wives have quite as much claims upon their care, time, and attention, as has the public. Nor have the husbands alone all the right to attend meetings, lectures, lyceums, etc., while their wives remain at home, toiling to keep their garments in repair, or nursing sick children, when they themselves should be nursed. "Charity begins at home," and we would give very little for that man's charity, or religion either, who spends his evenings at meetings for benevolent objects, making speeches to reform the world, while his wife sits lonely, desolate, and half sick at home, with no eye to pity, no voice to cheer, and no hand to help. Such man justly merits the rebuke of John Randolph-Sir, "the Greeks are met at your

If you would have your wife to journey down the declivity of life with you, to watch over you and cheer you as well as she can in her old age, to remain a centre-point, around which your children, and grandchildren shall be attracted, take care of her. If you do not this, you will never taste the sweetest sweet of wedded life; your wife will seal up the richest treasure of her heart; she will never cast a pearl before swine, and you will go down to your grave ignorant of the priceless jewel you possessed, because your harshness and neglect could never unlock the casket which contained it. Husbands, take care of your wives.

BEAUTY.

Personal charms call out the love of the beautiful in man—they appeal to those sentiments which appreciate physical perfection and the dazzling splendor of outward show; but there is an element of beauty within that far surpasses the mere gratification of passion: it is the noble soul that yearns everlastingly after that which is holy and good, the pure mind whose aspirations are elevated far above the sordid vulgarities of vanity and pride, and the genuine sympathy of a manly or womancome of such as sheepishly shout, no North, reason blown out in the haste and violence of ly heart. Physical beauty and perfectioncombined with those divinities of the soul, is capable of developing the most exquisite eniovments, and the most refined appreciation of the charms of human nature; but on the other hand, if coupled with that low and degraded condition of mentality which is ensive golden ornaments of the stage which

This must be most encouraging to all friends of the Agricultural Interest, demonstrating as it does that our New Jersey farmers are assuming a higher rank than they have hicherto occupied in the Agricultural annals of the country. A few years since there was, perhaps, no State north of Mason and Dixon's line where Agriculture was more unfavorably regarded, and carried forward with less intelligence and zeal than in our own-but recently, there has been a general rousing up to the importance of maintaining and advancing this great interest which constitutes the basis of our prosperity as a peoole, and as a consequence, advancement is armer. In at least half the State, Agricultural Societies are in vigorous operation, and in Middlesex and some other Associations are being established which will prove effective for good in a short scason.

The most noted pair of elegant driving horses in the Philadelphia Exhibition were the prize pair of the two former Exhibitions of this society, owned by David Sanderson, of Somerville. They were not entered for premium, but merely to show the people specimens of what all admire-real good horses. Edwin Harris, of this State, had on exhibition a splendid specimen of the Norman breed of horses. The dam of this horse was imported from France by Mr Harris. His weight is 1,290 pounds, and for pulling heavy loads no better animal need be desired.

Brewster's Cholera Mixture, AS gained great celebrity throughest the country, for the cure of diatrheea, caolera orbus, pains in the stomach and cholera. Also, in the first stage of dysentery, which if tal en on the first attack of disease, will invariably give relief-every family and traveller should keep a bottle on hand. Read the following certificate bands, gimps, cord, &c., &c. from Rev. B. B. Hotchkin, late Paster of the SHEPPARD & VANHARLINGEN, Presbyterian Church, Fairfield, N. J.

MR. F. G. BREWSTER: Dear Sir .- I have found in your cholera mixture, a very valuable medicine in all attacks of diarrhea, which have been experienced either by myself or family for more than two years past. I believe it has never failed to cure us, and in the use of it we have, in a great measure, essaped the usual unpleasant after effects of anodynes. I have found it especially useful when abroad. The change of usual diet and wator for a day or more, is almost sure to effect me injuriously, and the use of your cholera mixture has proved of the greatest service on such occasions. It was when abroad and in need of relief from painful diarrheen, that I first became ac quainted with it, and I have since very seldom suffered myself to be found abroad without it. Respectfully, yours, &c., B. B. HOTCHKIN.

The State Savings Fund, OFFICE-Next Door to the Post Office. No. 83, Dock St., Philadelphia, 1854. INTEREST FIVE PER CENT.

All sums of money returned on demand. The State Savings Fund, No. 83 Dock Street, next door to Third Street, and adjoining the Post Office, receives money on deposit daily, from 9 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also londay evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on deposits at the rate of five per cent. per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole or in part on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this office with all classes of the community, both in town and country, and its consequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to the following substantial reasons: 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depositovy to executors, administrators, assignces, collectore, agents and all public offices o attorneys, trustees, societies and association whether incorporated or otherwise, to married or single ladies, to students, merchants, clerks and ousiness men generally, to mechanics, farmers minors of either sex, and all who have funds much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time with five per cent. interest added. 2d. Depositors receive books with an abstrac of the by-laws and regulations, in which is enter ed their deposits, which books serve as vouchers the intervention of executors or admiristrators. Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons

3d. A report is made each year to the Legisliture and councils of the city.

Ath, The officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving bonds with sureties. 5th. The State Savings Fund is a REAL Savings Fund—nor an Insurance and Trust Company. Our large list of Depositors and the Philade public have been careful to observe that the char-ter avoids the business and risk of insurance. 6th. In order to afford every reasonable facility o depositors who reside at a distance from the office, their deposits are permitted to be withdrawn by checks, after the manner customary with the Banks. Check books will be furnished o depositors without charge. The popular patronpge bestowed upon this of ice by a proverbial, cautious and discriminfiting community, and where the character of the insti tution is best known, is a gratifying fact to which the Trustees desire to call attention GEO. H. HART, President. CHAS. G. IMLAY, Treasurer.
