The very sunshine in the grass Burned up his feet-he saw, alas!

Darkly, as men see through a glass. The broad heavens wrinkled like a scroll Above him, his deluded soul

Sank down so far from love's control. When night shut up, forlorn helay, Faint, and his morning dress of clay Sorrowfully spoiled, and torn away. The other, slowly and wisely trode, And at the first fork of the road Stopt, where a good old man abode,

Who gave him a most levely book, Wherein for guidance he must look, He told him, if the path should crook.

He lifted up his hands and prayed, And read the sweet book undismayed. So over pit-falls traveled he,

And past the gates of harlotry, Safe, with his heavenly company.

Just as the evening splendor fled, A shepherd at the roadside said Where an inn was, with wine and bread.

And further said he, "Thou, my friend, Hast found a comfortable end, Yet one thing lackest thou, to mend "Thy faith and hope with charity. That grace divinest of the three,

And hither, to abide with thee. "Bring in thy neighbor, gone astray, And perishing beside the way, Because he knew not how to pray.'

"My name is Patience," said she. "The Lord's will be done with me! I shall willingly help poor Misery to bear his cross; nor do I require any bridal present, so as I do but get enough stubble to feed my sheep." "It shall be granted thee," returned the

Then Patience smiled, and took both her bridegroom and his beavy cross on her shoulder, and carried bim a long, long, weary way through the world, while her sheep followed, and found sufficient nourishment; but when she reached the spot where her cottage once stood, she found that Presumption had burnt it down amongst the fireworks with which he had celebrated his marriage with Worldliiess; and the wedding quests langhed at Pr sence, and said:

"Get away with you, you silly creature and do not disgrace our merry-making. How dare you come before us in such a ridiculous plight, and with such a heavy load? Cast away your burden - do!" Patience answered:

DYING RICH. An active business man is a rational man and a great blessing to the community. He keeps in exercise the talents confided to him making them a blessing to himself, and a score of good to those by whom he is surroun-ded. He thrishes employment for the industrious, which is far better than bestowing alms upon the unemployed. Herein are the legitimate and rational results of active business pursuits and wealth getting - the employment of the gratification of the active powers, and the reward of industry. But the slavish toil of accumulation merely for the sake of possession, the lust of cupidity, the remorse less desire of growing rich solely or principally to die rich, is one of the most foolish and debasing intentions which find lodgement in the heart of man.

What can the praise, if praise it be, have

What can it profit one, when he is lower and more insensible than the sod, to have it sounded can fail to see among us much, also, that is above him, "how rich he died ?" The Progress of Life.

Men rejoice when the sun is risen; they rejoice also when it goes down, while they are unconcious of the decay of their own lives .-Men rejoice on seeing the face of a new seas-on, as at the arrival of one greatly desired.— Mevertheless the revolution of one season is the decay of human life. Fragments of driftwood meeting in the wide ocean continue toother a little space; thus parents, wives, children, friends, and riches remain with us a short time, then separate-and the separation is inevetable. No mortal can escape the common lot; he who mourns for departed relatives, has no power to cause dem to return. One standing on the road would readly say to a number of persons passing by, will follow you, why, then, should a person grieve, when journeying the same road which has been assuredly travelled by all our forefathers? Life resembles a cataract rushing down with irresistable impetuosity. Knowing that the end of life is death, every right minded man ought to pursue that which is connected with happiness and ultimate bliss. -Dublin University Magazine.

On the Fertilizer for Fruit Trees. BY M. P. WILDER.

In relation to appropriate fertilizers for rees a diversity of opinion prevails. All agree that certain substances exist in plants and trees, and that these must be contained in the soil to produce growth, elaboration and perfection. To supply these, some advacute the use of what are termed "special manures." others ridicule the idea. I would suggest whether this is not a difference in inguage, rather than in principle; for in special fertilizers, the first make simply those which correspond with the constituents of the crop; but are not the second careful to select and apply manures which contain these elements? and do they not, in prac tice, affix the seal of their approbation to the theory which they oppose? Explode this doctrine, and do you not destroy the principle of manuring and the necessity of a rotation of and carcless. crops? Trees exhaust the soil of certain ingredients, and, like animals, must have their appropriate tood. All know how difficult it to make a fruit tree flourish on the spot from which an old tree of the same species have been removed.

The great practical question now agitating he community is: How shall we ascertain replies are rendered. Some say, analyze the crop to teach us its ingredients, and that of of the constituents of the pear, the grape, and the strawberry consist of potash. This abounds in new soils, and peculiarly adapts hem to the productions of these fruits, but laving been extricated from soils long under ultivation, it is supplied by wood-ashes, or otheb, the value of which has of late greatly crersed in the estimation of cultivators.

Among the arts of modern cultivation. universal experience attest to the great advantage of "mulching" the soil around fruit trees, as a means of fertilization and of presrvation from drought and heat, so common with us in midsummer. In illustration of this, experiment has proved that on dry soils. where the earth has been strewn with straw, the crops have been as large without manure as with it, where evaporation has disengaged Office Reports.

THE FRIGATES TENDER, OR THE RUSE.

It was early on a sunny morning, during the progress of the last war with Great Britain, that a young naval officer, walking on the Battery at New York, had his attention drawn to a group of persons carnestly engaged in watching two vessels that were just visible

"It would be a blessing," observed a manof-war's man, who had not yet spoken, "if that craft could be caught napping. It ain't safe for a sloop to put her nose out of the harbor, beyond the cape; but while the frigate was there alone, they could slip along the coast in light water, and show her their heels. But now everything that ventures out is brought to by the long gun of the tender."

"That's a fact, Ben," responded another seaman. "She has taken or driven back into port no less than twenty-six craft in the last three weeks. I shall be glad, for one, when the Euglish frigate outside, and pick our, teeth with the tenter." All these remarks were heard by the young officer, who all the while continued to look through the spy-glass at the tender and her chase.

"There goes a gun!" cried several of the spectators, as a flash and jut of smoke came from the tender's bows.

"That is bold enough," observed the young officer, as if speaking his thoughts aloud, "the impudent tender is almost up with the fort, and dares to fire at the chase in the very face of the batteries."

"It's only to try and do her mischief, sir," said the master's mate; "for she finds the fore and after will escape her, so she fires a gun to cut away something."

"You are right, my man," responded the officer, "for she has put about and stands scaward again." He continued to watch the retiring tender

A HARD PHILOSOPHER.

Some years ago a sailor named Gerrisb was amusing himself by going across the spring stay of a schooner lying at the head of Ferry wharf, when his feet slipped from the rope, and, unable to regula his position, or hold by his hands, he called out, " Stand from under, and let go." He found himsel sitting upon the hatch, with one leg fractured, but not att all damped in spirits, and apon being taken into a wagon to be conveyed home, he quietly remarked: "This side (the unburt) came down like a man; the other held back, and see what it got by it." Some of his friends, thinking that a man must die by such a full whether he showed evidence of it or not, sent for the parson, who began to tell him of the mysterious ways of Providence. "Ah," said the old tar, "no use to tell me about that; Providence would have had nothing to do with it if my foot hadn't slipped."

A Curious Calculation.

The citizen of Gotham are said to consume annually 150 000,000 of eggs, which at a cent each, would cost $1,500,000. Assuming the resident and transient population of the city at 550,000, and these eggs to be equally distributed among them, each indihundred and seventy-two eggs for his share, being at the rate of one a day for more than two thirds of the year. To pick up these eggs singly and place them one at a time in a basket, allowing a second of time for placing each, would require a man to work four thousand one hundred and sixty-six working days, or thirteen years, and ninety-nine days, omitting Sabbaths. If packed in barrels for market, one hundred and twenty-five thousand barrels would be required, each containing one hundred dozen eggs, To draw them to market with single horse teams, and twelve barrels in each wagon, would employ ten thousand four hundred and seventeen horses, and as many wagons and men; and these placed in a single line, would form a all become too stale to refresh the inner man and should be used as missiles for offensive warfare, as they are cometimes employed in ridding the community of obnoxious members; an army of three hundred thousand mon could be supplied with five hundred cach. A quantum sufficient, one would think, to purge all christendom of rogues and give something of a perfume to boot.

To lay this number of eggs, one million of hens would be required, each to lay one hundred and fifty eggs a year. This army of hens placed in single file would extend two hundred and eighty four miles, and in marching order would be a month in passing a given point. And a few months since. scores of those ships of commerce which are now laden with fruits of peace and prosperity, were either freighted with the instuments of death, or were left to rot in their harbors.

In the proportion in which the commercial interests of nations increase, will those navidual, babies included, would have two tions be opposed to war. During the first thirty-five years of our national independence, our commerce with England has become quite extensive. The merchants and business men of the United States, were deeply interested in the continuance of peace between the two countries. It was for this reason, that we suffered England to impress more than seven thousand of our seamen, and to commit other depredations of the grossest nature, before we declared war against her; and when that declaration was made, signs of the deepest | cable will bury itself in the same way. If thus far, commerce has often proved too wack a barrier to procure the peace of nations, it is because its mighty influence has not yet been fully exerted. Compared with what in may yet be, it is in its infancy. The vast commercial resources of our western states and territories, are almost 'wholly undeveloped. Our Pacific coast, with all its advantages for fereign trade, has scarcely yet attracted the slightest attention.

Melancholy Accident .- A melancholy case of suffering, resulting from roughdess in play, is related in the Boston papers. It seems that some six months ago a bright intelligent one excels in her agricultural resources, the little fellow, some fourteen years of age, son of a respectable mechanic in East Boston, was playing, after school, with a boy some what larger than himself, when the larger boy run against him violently, and struck the toe of his boot against the outer ankle joint of the smaller boy. The wound was at first apparently a slight one, but soon it began to grow serious, and the little fellow was confined to his bed There he has remained for six or seven months, suffering the most extreme agony, and the bone of his leg to above the knee having decayed; rendered it at last neeby which his life can be saved.

> Guano Poisonous - Great danger, says the handling of guano. Transatlantic Telegraph -- The official report of soundings for the Atlant e telegraph will probably soon be published. It has been stated in England that the survey is remarkably favorable, and for more than 1300 miles in a direct line, in mid-ocean the bottom is found an almost unbroked level plain. Not a single rock or a particle of gravel or sand was found over this large surface, but the bottom consisted of minute, microscopic shells, soft and yielding as a snow bank, and into which the souding lead burried itself ten or fifteen feet deep. Of course the telegraph about two and balf miles. We find the above 1600 miles, it follows that this level bottom occupies all but three miles of the entire egraph line, which from the point where it connects with the Nova Scotla line to St. John. N. F., is about 600 miles, the distance across from Ashby Bay, Cape Breton, to Cape Ray cove, in Vewtoundland, being 85 miles. No doubt, next summer, the attempt will be made to lay the cable across from Newfound land to Ireland. SUCCESS UNPARALLELED!! A Tale of the Great Dismal Swamp!

By Harriot Beecher Stowe. Netwo volumes, 12 mo. price 31 75. Certain politicians, interested in the support of the peculiar institution," have endeavered to pertade the public that Mrs. Stowe's last work i artistically a failure, and that it has produced no profound impression on either side of the Atlantic. But the publishers are happy to state, that if the many hundreds of American notices which hey have received, the vast majority have been lecidedly favorable, most of 'them' enthusiastic, and the sale thus far has exceeded that of any work of fiction ever published, the SIXTY EIGHTH THOUSAND Set of two volumes each, being now in press. In England the success has been even mor wonderful. The press there, with but one or two exceptions acknowledge the genius and power of the author, and in terms of which any living writer might be proud. And during the twelve days succeeding its publication no fewer than 60,000 Copies were sold. The universal voice of literary men, now places Mrs. Stowe among the foremest authors of the age, and neither the partisanship nor the austere religious bigotry, can ever deprive her of the laurels she has so nobly earned.

Brewster's Cholera Mixture, AS gained great celebrity throughout the country, for the cure of diatrheea, calolera morbus, pains in the stomach and cholera. Also, in the first stage of dysentery, which if tal en on the first attack of disease, will invariably give relief—every family and traveller should keep a bottle on hand. Read the following certificate from Rev. B. B. Hotchkin, late Paster of the Presbyterian Church, Fairfield, N. J.

MB. F. G. BREWSTER: Dear Sir,-I have found in your cholera mixture, a very valuable medi-cine in all attacks of diarrhoa, which have been experienced either by myself or family for more than two years past. I believe it has never failed to cure us, and in the use of it we have, in a great measure, essaped the usual unpleasant after effects of anodynes. I have found it especially useful when abroad. The change of usual diet and wator for a day or more, is almost sure to effect me injuriously, and the use of your cholera mixture has proved of the greatest service on such occasions. It was when abroad and in need of relief from painful diarrhoea, that I first became ac quainted with it, and I have since very seldom suffered myself to be found abroad without it. Respectfully, yours, &c., B. B. HOTCHKIN.

The State Savings Fund, OFFICE-Next Door to the Post Office No. 83, Dock St., Philadelphia, 1854. INTEREST FIVE PER CENT.

All sums of money returned on demand. THE State Savings Fund, No. 83 Dock Street next door to Third Street, and adjoining the Post Office, receives money on deposit daily, from) in the morning until 3 in the afternoon; also Monday evenings, from 7 to 9 o'clock. Interest is allowed on depesits at the rate of five per cent.
per annum. Deposits will be returned in whole or in part on demand, without notice.

The popularity of this office with all classes o he community, both in town and country, and its onsequent success, may be ascribed, in part, to he following substantial reasons: 1st. It offers a convenient, responsible, and profitable Depository to executors, administrators, assignees, collectors, agents and all public offices, to attorneys, trustees, societies and associations, whether incorporated or otherwise, to married or single ladies, to students, merchants, clerks and business men generally, to mechanics, farmers, minors of either sex, and all who have funds, much or little, to deposit, where they may be had at any time with five per cent. interest added.
2d. Depositors receive books with an abstract of the by-laws and regulations, in which is entered their deposits, which books serve as youchers. They may designate, in case of sickness, death or the intervention of executors or administrators.

Any one or more persons may deposit in his, her, or their name, or for any other person or persons. 3d. A report is made each year to the Legislature and councils of the city. 4th, The officers are sworn before they enter upon their duties, in addition to giving bonds with sureties. 5th. The State Savings Fund is a REAL Savings Fund-Nor an Insurance and Trust Company .-Our large list of Depositors and the Philadelphia ublic have been careful to observe that the charer avoids the business and risk of insurance. 6th. In order to afford every reasonable facility o depositors who reside at a distance from the office, their deposits are permitted to be withdrawn by checks, after the manner customar with the Banks. Check books will be furnished to depositors without charge. The popular patronpge bestowed upon this of fice by a proverbial, cautious and discriminfiting community, and where the character of the insti ution is best known, is a gratifying fact to which he Trustees desire to call attention GEO. H. HART, President.
