Night is the time most favorable for crime, when the surrounding darkness hides human actions from all view, save the all seeing eye of God. It is but natural that the actions of which men are most ashamed, should be performed under its cover. It is therefore of all seasons that in which the conduct of youth should be most carefully guarded. The home restaint is too freely relaxed when it oughs be the most carefully tightened. It is painful in traversing our streets in the evening, to hear the amount of rude, obscene and profane lan-

In all manufacturing towns where children's labor is valuable, there are always a large number who are able to receive but very little education, or none at all. The necessities of many families in towns, require that their children should lend a helping hand in obtaining a livelihood, and this necessarily occupies their time through the day, they have no opportunity afforded them for obtaining an education. These seem to be without the pale of our present school system. And yet they are the very ones who ought especially to share in the benefits of an enlightened and just system of instruction.-Philadelphia has very wisely appropriated a portion of her school funds to the support of evening schools, and we have every assurance to believe with the most gratifying success.

In all manufacturing towns, particularly evening schools ought to be established by law during the winter months of every year. From the first of October until the first of March, the evenings are of sufficient length and coolness to be very profitably used, five nights in each week, for the instruction of except where the stairease interferes, are show those who are unable to attend school during the day. The manufacturing interest of our State is rapidly increasing, and consequently an increased number of children are annually engaged in them.

We are not of the number of those who continually cry out against the employment of children in these industral pursuits. On the contrary, if they are not too much exposed or unreasonably worked beyond their physical strength, it is a good thing for them, because it inures them at an early age to habits the entire height, is a spiral staircase, of of industry. And if with the acquirement of these habits, they can also obtain the necessary amount of school instruction, they will be all the better fitted to become valuable and useful citizens. While the additional habit not believe can be witnessed at any other weak, his assailant had to use a bludged thus acquired of improving their leisure moments, would be of incalculable value to them in all the social and domestic affairs of their after lives. The ends of an enlightened government are much better obtained by pre venting, than punishing crime. And that influence that can be exerted in keeping children and youth out of the streets, and under a proper restraint during the dangerous hours of evening, is no mean agent in a system of reform. When it is reflected that our large towns, are the nurseries and hot beds of much that is bad, and that the surrounding country must be more or less tainted by its influence it becomes obvious that all are interested in any measure that promises to counteract | and military. the evil. The only apentire front from the fifth story is another balcony, differing somewhat from the first, and still another on a line with the main cornice; and between the parapet, which protects the roof, the angles being flanked with turrets. The tower above the roof is in two sections-the first is rectangular, about twenty feet high, and capped with battlements and turiets on the angles; the upper section, of thirty feet, is an octagon figure, capped also with battlements. A light spiral stair leads from the fifth story up intofthe tower.

Upon entering one of the three main doors of the front entrance, the visitor finds himself in a vestibule of Gothic style, laid with marble flagging and beautifully ornameoted. A few additional steps lead to the main room of the building. The first thing that strikes attention and compares favorably with the usual darkness of such establishments, is the abundance of light that falls through three openings in the upper floors, through three enormous skylights. Upon either side of the main room, running the entire length of the store, cases, divided with tripple columns, with rolling glass doors. In the semi-circular tops of these are busts of distinguished statesmen and pocts. The front part of this room is used as a salesroom, and that fronting on Minor street as the cutting department. Highway Robbery and Attempted Murder. On the night of Friday last, a daring robbery and attempt at murder was perpetrated in the vicinity of this town. As a man named Jacob Hookey was proceeding from Salem to the house of Mr. Richard Cook, a short distance out of town, where he had been laboring for some time past, a man came from a field bordering the road, and asked Hookey if he wanted company, to which he replied that he didn't care, and when the stranger got alongside of him, he knocked him down A scoffle ensued, and Hookey not being very quite freely in order to overpower him. At length Hookey became insensible, from the wounds he received and the loss of blood; and consciousness did not return until daylight next morning, when he became aware that in each with heavy mahogany railing and besides being badly wounded, he had been robbed of his watch (a silver one, and nearly Sun. floor under them is laid with plate glass, so He crawled along to Mr. Cook's residence, where he presented a frightful appearance: In its details the second floor equals if not his head wis cut in several places, his face bruised and bloody, and his neck marked as ous. SINGING MOUSE.

We were shown this morning a living en riosity, in the shape of a mouse, which possessed and exercised musical powers, somewhat similar to a Canary bird. It was eaptured a few weeks since, at No. 339 Broad st., near Fair, by a gentleman, who, while siels, made it quite tame and was accustomed to hear it sing every day, sometimes for hours without ceasing.

It is in appearance similar to a common ouse mouse, and was first heard on the shelves in the store, and subsequently appeared in the gentleman's sleeping room. sure all who purchase matches of him. that The sounds produced are of varied characters, and denote most distinctly the presence of not only fear, distress, but contentment and pleasure. Its voice was not very loud nor powerful, but still possesses considerable compass, and the transition from one note to another are made with remarkable grace and acuracy. When hungry it generally sings the loudest, in a somewhat plaintive tone, as if asking for food. It is quite tame, and may be seen at any time at No. 339 Broad st. -Newark Advertiser.

Death of Senator Clayton -The telegraph announces a fatal termination of the protracted illness of Hon. John M. Clayton, United States Senator from Delaware, which occurred at Dover, on Sunday night. He was a native of that state, and has always been intimetely connected with the public offairs of that State. He has been elected three times to represent her in the U. S. Senate -first from 1829 to 1836, secondly from 18-45 to 1851, and the last time from the term beginning March 4, 1853, which would not expire until March 3; 1859. Mr. Clayton A. O. Read the following certificate from Rev. B. B. Hotchkin, late Paster of the Presbyterian Church, Fairfield, N. J.

MR. F. G. BREWSTER: Dear Sir, -1 have found in your cholera mixture, a very valuable medi-cine in all attacks of diarrace, which have been experienced either by myself or family for more than two years past. I believe it has never failed to cure us, and in the use of it we have, in a great measure, essaped the usual unpleasant after effects of anodynes. I have found it especially useful when abroad. The change of usual diet and wator for a day or more, is almost sure to effect me injuriously, and the use of your chelera mixture has proved of the greatest service on such seculiars. It was when abroad and in need of relief from painful diarrhoea, that I first became ac quainted with it, and I have since very seldom suffere I myself to be found abroad without it. Respectfully, yours, &c.,
