For the West Jersey Planeer. Some Remarks to the Children of the Common Length at Cape May Court. House, December 1855.

My Y, und Priends - All of us who have come here to witness your examination have probably been reminded that our day upon this stage of action is gradually closing, and that yours is taking its place. We are warned that our time upon earth must soon terminate; and that in a few more years at mest, you who are now so bloomingly youthful will stand as we now do the bald, and gray haired rien of your neighborhood; and then we refleet that directly you too will have had your day, for like the flowers of spring or the leaves of autumn, your seasons here will be but short at best. We have thought it is from this school, and those like it, the common, country schools of our land, the best men of this nation are to be supplied, that the humble and modest youth who to day has stood trembling before this assembly, who may feel that he is nobody, is just as likely to be one of the illustrious men of America, as any one clse. We expect our great men from just such retired, quiet country schools and our reasons for so expecting is that all history, and observation teaches us, it is here they have generally been founded in childhood. The cradle of poverty, and the country, the homes of the industrious and hard working, have been their habitations when young; and I wish perticularly to impress this fact upon your minds and the minds of your parents, because you are not the sons and the daughters of the rich and grand, who can afford to permit you to grow up in idleness.

Many of you may think you would be better off had your parents more of this world's goods, so that you could live without work, in some large and fashionable city, and have servants to wait upon you, so that you would have nothing to do but put on fine clothes and strut the streets. But my own opinion you energy of purpose, and character. "Difficulties are more important in the formation of minds than what we call assistances." It made no lies ten plate store to be roughly as therefore it is well for you that you are poor, that you have obstacles to the scatts were without backs, and learn you to detail things make you strong, and learn you to detail to the scatts were without backs. #### A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

We attended church last Sunday, where the minister by mistake, turned over one leaf too many and made a very funny reading of the scriptures. It reminded us of the wellknown story of a clergyman who while reading to his congregation a chapter in Genesis, found the last sentence to be: "And the Lord gave unto Adam a wife." Turning over two leaves together, he found written, and read in an audible voice, "and she was pitched without and within. He had unhappily got into the middle of, a description of Nozh's ark.

DR. KANE.

With deep regret we learn that the health of our esteemed fellow citizen. Dr. Kane, has declined rather than improved, since his srrival in London. His physicians are apprehensive that his disease is settling into the character of consumption; aud, with the hope that milder skies may arrest the progress of the insidious destroyer, and reinvigorate his wasted constitution, they have decreed that he should pass the winter in the West India Islands, whither we understand, he has already gone. Through the blessings of Providence. we trust that this change of climate may effect the desired restoration of his health, and that he will live long to wear the clustering honors that are already entwined around his name; and to gather additional honors for

To the Thinking Public. For some time past, we have had such an increased amount of advertising, job printing and other business to attend to in our office, that it has been impossible for us to give that attention to the editorial columns of the Pioneer, which otherwise would have been devoted to that department. As we do not profess to have "paid writers" to do our writing (and thinking too) for us, (as some of our gassy cotemporaries admit they have,) we shall be under the necessity of deferring until due time. a series of articles (called for) in which we propose to treat some subjects in a manner which will put a quietus to their harping.

TRUTH AND ERROR.

As is beautifully said by the Newark Mer cury, Truth and Error have ever prevailed in the world, alternately victorius. Since Creation ost her beauty, the one has sown the seeds of civilization and progress; the other has la bored to thwart every plan, which genius or wisdom has devised, to restore man to hi original condition of happiness. Truth, with noiseless tread, has held on her course, though through empires decaying, until every vestige of their greatness and glory has been lost in the long lapse of years. She has witnessed the struggles of contending races, and has ever made ambition subserve her purposes. Her progress has been onward and upward, till achieving new triumphs, and urging the minds of men to greater energy in her service, and the development of new eras.-When false systems of religion have arisen, when whole countries have been subdued to furnish them votaries, and the world has trembled at the sight, all these have not been able to withstand her progress. In every crisis, civil or individual, Truth, the child of God, has been victorious. Though prejudice may have retarded her victories, and diminished their influence upon the world, yet, whatever has opposed, she has at last prevail-

When we visit the land, once so noted for greatness, what lessons are taught by those massive structures, those crumbling monuments of former glory! Here thousands of miserable beings hove toiled in vain, not for Truth and the improvment of the race, but to gratify the ambition of some haughty king, who sought future fame and a monument to perpetuate his memory, not the good of his subjects. But where now is that foolish king and wretched people? Their very names have perished, but Truth will survive, when those pyramids shall have crumbled to their native dust, and be forgotten forever.

When Luther rescued the light of the gos pel from the night of Papal darkness, how mighty were the conquests which he achieved. With Truth emblazoned on his shield, he encountered and routed the forces of error, which for centuries had ruled the world, and he secured the blessing of freedom to worship threatened ruin. But she triumphed.

Again witness her, spreading her genial influences in every land, and extending her sway, until the very empire of Rome acknowledged her sovereignty! Her simple eloquence prevailed over the learning and refinement of ancient cities, and overthrew the error, which for many ages had borne away. Who could have imagined that, weak as they were, the little heroic band of diciples could have maintained those principles, which in future time were to battle with all the passions of the human heart, and finally overthrow error? Idolatry could not silence them, persecution did not weaken them.

John Burr of Dividing Creek raised a rig this season that weighed six hundred and hirteen pounds. This is a fair specimen of the porkers that grow in Lower Jersey. We totice that some of our exchanges from other States are bragging about their big pigs, six. teen months old, weighing five hundred lbs., (and some less). What a crowing time there would have been if this six hundred and thirteen pounder had been raised in the United States, but as it is in Jersey, scarcely a grunt will be heard from those living outside of Spain." How Things Grow. It is surprising to see at this season of the vear how some things will grow.
