WINTER.

BY A. J. SHAMPANORE. Cold Winter with his icy breath Hath nip'd the verdure from the trees, All nature wears the marks of Death-

The brooks and streams begin to freeze The hills which bore the winter green Now sparkle with the glittering snow; The timid deer leaps from his lair, And in pursuit the sportsmenigo.

The feathered tribes that used to chant Their carols in our summer bowers, Have left, to dwell in southern climes,

And warble mid their orange flowers. The husband nears his winter fire, And gazing on his doting wife, Peruses tomes of literature,

Forgetful of the cares of life. Some jolly youth and blooming maids, To enjoy their steigh-rides are inclined While others who envy them not, Prefer their time to improve their mind.

Then, while cold Winter's blustering winds Are howling dismal round our door, Let those who are with plenty bless'd, Deal kindly with the suffering poor. Bridgeton, Jan. 1857.

THE PASTOR'S DAUGHTER.

BY GEORGE P. MORRIS.

An ivy-mantled cottage stood. Within the sound of torrent wild, Where dwelt in sylvan solitude, The village pastor and his child. Proud suitors paid their court and duty To this romantic rural beauty; Yet none of all the swains who sought her,

Was worthy of the pastor's daughter. The town-gallants crossed hill and plain, To seek the groves of her retreat; And many followed in her train. To lay their riches at her feet. But still, for all their arts so wary,

A maid without a heart they thought her, And so they left the pastor's daughter. One balmy eve in budding spring A bard became her father's guest, He struck his harp, and every string To love vibrated in her breast. With that true love which cannot faltar,

From home they could not lure the fairy.

And faithful was the heart he brought her, To wedlock and the pastor's daughter. How seldom learn the worldly gay, With all their sophistry and art, The sweet and gentle primrose way To woman's fond, devoted heart! They seek, but never find the treasure. Revealed in eyes of jet and azure.

To them, like truth in wells of water,

Her hand she gave him at the altar,

A fable is the pastor's daughter. For the West Jersey Pioneer. EFFECTS OF EXTRAVAGANCE.

BY C. H. THOMPSON.

"Shall we visit the Falls of Niagara, or simply spend a few days with our uncle's family at K-?" said William Watson as he fondly gazed upon her who had now become his partner for life.

"I shall be perfectly satisfied, dear William, o go to which ever place you may prefer." These words passed between William Watson and his fair bride, a few hours after they had assumed that new relation, the beginning of which constitutes so important an era in the history of every young person. William was sion of the Legislature for an extension of a young man in possession of many noble qualities. He had been taught from his boyhood to reverence everything which was sacred in its character. It is somewhat remarkable that while he remained subject to his parents, he was seldom, if ever, known to be absent from the house of worship. Nor was he more remarkable for his reverence for religious observances than for his respect for Truth and Honesty. During the early part of his life, these noble qualities shone forth so conspicuously that his friends and associates were induced to overlook, in a measure. those faults which they considered as merely incidental to a young man of his temperament. Although Watson by no means possessed wealthy parents to gratify his desires yet from his early youth he had a strong deand engaged as an apprentice in the Jewel- niture. er's trade. COLD WINTER.

Only 81 00 per Year!

As we sit quietly by our warm stoves, and hear the winds howling, without, we are forcibly reminded that cold winter is "about," and old Boreas is a regular blower-all the time trying to "raise the wind," like some "fast" young men we wat of. Everything that meets our gaze-beauty, as its delicate foot-patter is heard upon our frezen walksthickly enveloped in furs and warm broshas -Gallantry, as it wrays its mantle and shawl around it-the sturdy yeeman and his hardy spouse, as they "come to town" with the good old fashioned wearing apparel that our great grand parents were not ashamed of-the crystal ice, as it sparkles like diadems in the noonday sun-the sparcely falling snow flakes, though few and far between-the leafless boughs of these stately old maples and clins, beneath whose spreading branches we have oft reposed when summer's sun has poured his burning rays-the absence of robin redbreast, whose morning matin was wont to call us to our daily toil, and the non-appearance of the blue bird, whose carel fell so sweetly on the ear-all remind us that Winter, with its joys and serrows, is now in our midst-joy to these who have plenty and comfort at their command; sorrow to those who are "short" of life's blessings.

This, above all other seasons of the year affords an opportunity for Philanthropy, Charity and Mercy to "show their hands," and in Theophilus Harris, the great "game" of life, to "deal" fairly and Lewis McBride, generously with those who, by some means are deprived of the necessaries of life. ICE! ICE!! ICE!!!

For some weeks past there has been a boun tiful supply of Ice in this region, placing an embargo upon navigation in our creek thus preventing merchandize from being brought to the town in vessels, as is customary when the creek is navigable. We learn from one of the captains, that there were a few days since, about twenty vessels at the mouth of Cohansey Creek; among the number were several small steam tugs and the Steamer Virginia. A schooner of four hundred tons burthen, loaded with coal, was in a dangerous condition on False Ben Davis' Beach, about five miles below the mouth of the creek.

One of the regular packets that usually harber in this port during the winter season. is now locked up in "natures cold embrace" in the port of Brotherly Love, and from present appearances will remain there until the genial rays of sol shall melt the frozen heart of cold nature and bid the ice-bound captive, threaten to leave their families to be main "go free." The ponds in this vicinity are pained by the city, township, or county, or to covered with a thick and heavy coat of ice, affording a fine opportunity to those who have the time and inclination to enjoy themelves by indulging in the healthful and exhilarating vide for themselves or families; and all persport of skating.

In this part of the town the horse's hind feet became entangled in the front part of the carriage, giving the firighted animal the choice either to "go it" on two fore feet, or not go it at all, which was soon decided, when a strong arm got hold of the bridle. The front part of the carriage was demolished by the horse's hoofs and part of the quiler lost. The latter was soon re-placed by the harness maker who was on hand at the time of the runaway-just in time to get a job. The harness had been in use upwards of twelve years.
