BY MRS. SARAHIS, SOCWELL,

Land ahead? I see it rising Through the tossing billows' foam; Calm, and beautiful and peaceful, Bright and glorious hand of home!

Land ahead! now o'er Life's ocean My frail bark shall drive no more; Soon, secure from every danger, Twill be moored on youder shore.

Now behold the quiet harbor, See! we're floating on its breast; Now my weary toil is ended, I have reached the port of Rest. Quick! let go the faithful anchor-Now my stormy race is run; Tossed no more by occan tempests, , Strife is o'er and Heaven is won!

For the West Jersey Pioneer. REFLECTIONS ON THE PAST.

Life of my life! oh, hast thou gone Fur, far beyond these distant spheres? And am I left to tread alone, This weary solitude of years?

Oh! would that I had perished too, By the same belt that leveled thee: But I must linger on in wee, A severed, scathed and ruined tree!

On me the sky, the air, the earth. Their blended powers vainly shed; For I can know no second birth, Life of my life, since thou art dead!

I look around me, and beheld Forms that appear as once did thine; But, ab! their hearts are strange and cold, They cannot echo thoughts of mine.

I mingle with the tide of life, The young, the rich, the gay, the fair; But crowd, or silence, peace or strife, The solitude of soul is there.

I see the friends that ones were dear, When thou wert by to cheer and bless; But all are changed, and even here

My spirit dwells in loneliness. For where's the form that always press'd That vacant scat? Al! far away; The eye that warmed, the voice that bless'd,

The face that spoke-oh! where are they? Where they have gone to I must go, For here no promised pleasures bloom; Al, all is pain and tears below-

IRISH RIOTS.

One of the most extensive and ferocious riots that ever disgraced our State, occurred at Hudson City on Saturday afternoon and on Sunday at the Bergen Hill Tunnell between two factions of the Irish laborers, the Fardowners and Corkonians, who had brought their old feuds from Ireland. There are about 1200 men employed on the Tunnel, half of whom were at work, and they have built their shanties upon patches of ground near by.

There had been recently an accession of Munstermen, who in erecting their shanties, had trespassed upon the territory claimed by the Connaugt men, or Fardowners. Saturday being monthly pay day, the men all had a spree, and the free use of whiskev aggravated the feeling excited by this tresspass, and soon gave rise to a fight, which became general, and at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon some 400 or 500 Irishmen of both parties had collected, and armed with pieces of iron bars, knives, pistols, guns, stones, brickbats, &c., pitched into one another, shouting like madmen. The women also slipped stones into stockings and joined in the fracas.

The military had to be called out; and soon after their arrival, and when several arrests had been made, the rioting ceased; but on Sunday afternoon it was resumed, the attach this time being on the Sheriff and his residence, both of which were injured. They soon, however, got to fighting among themselves again. The bloody scenes of 1844 are not vet forgotten, and if they are ever repeated --- but we shudder to contemplate. But forbearance must and will cease to be a virtue, and woe betide those who are feeding the flame which is about to spread from the centre to the circumfrence of this mighty nation!

OPENIG SPRING!

The last days of Winter are swiftly gliding by-soon the approaching Spring with all its charms will be ushered in upon us, even now the balmy breezes are fanning vegetation into new life, the maples along our side walks are "budding and blossoming like the rose," and the songsters make melody in the groves which have so long been stripped of their foliage. All nature proclaims the joyous tidings that dreary Winter is fast passing away, and the delightful Spring time is near at hand. What effect this premature budding and early putting forth of blossoms will have upon the fruit of Summer and Autumn remains to be decided by the state of the weather during the coming month. We trust it may take a "favorable turn," and a fruitful season be realized to replenish the stores of the producer and supply the demand of consumers at reasonable rates.

The past Winter has been unusually sewere, and (if ended) quite brief. It will long be remembered as a winter when the mercury fell so far below zero, that for a time its rising was despaired of-when snow banks towered so high as to astonish the "oldest inhabitant"-when ice grew so ithick that are requested to send us their true name (not monuments of it were exhibited along our for publication unless they wish) but for streets as one of the wonders of the age.
