THE WEST JERSEY RAILROAD,

By reference to the legislative proceedings it will be seen that the charter of the West forbear. Jersey Railroad has been amended so as to allow the cars to run to Woodbury. The original charter requiring that twenty miles should be completed before the cars were to be allowed to run on the road. The senator from this county carnestly, but vainly insisted that an amendment should be added compelling the company to build the road to Cumberland within a reasonable time. The think, be taken as an indication that the moare not disposed to give any farther aid to the construction of this road. The reply of the friends of the monopoly is quite significant of this fact. If the road was wanted by the people of this section, they contended that no restrictive measure ought to be passed unless coupled with a proposition that Millville should be obliged to raise three hundred thousand dollars towards its construction. If Bridgeton and other towns along the route should be compelled to subscribe in the same proportion, it will be easily seen that the endire read would be built at the expense of the public, and yet its control be placed in monopoly hands. When this air line bill was before the house, with a good prospect of its becoming a law, and the votes of Cumberland in the same proportion; the Steambest pick- where so large and varied a stock of Carmembers were needed to extend the monopoly privileges, the language of the menopoly and its friends were very different, no matter what their ultimate intentions might have been .-Then we did not hear a word about the amount subscribed in South Jersey. There could hate been no reason to suppose that the subseription would be large. But if there was, those now engaged as Captains, Stage drivers his store may be relied upon as what they ing posture, with his stiff, cold, loy hand amount secretained, then, was the time for the monopoly to have backed out if the construction of the road was in any manner dependent upon the amount nubscribed in the lower counties. But so far from entertaining an unusually large number of people water last. About the only business of interest to during the dreary night the engine belt and any such design, a law was passed authorizing apparently "on the move." The u the monopoly to endorse the bonds of the was one of the most delightful of the season, West Jersey Company. Was this telling the and wagons, carts, wheelbarrows, &c., were at Millville, the exection of the County of people to build the road themselves if they ont in profusion, all filled with various kinds Union out of a part of Easex, and the final wanted it? The probable reason for this move, of merchandisc. A few weeks since we gave our readers to understand that there was a strong probability of the Steamer Express coming to this place about the first of April, to commence regular trips between here and Philadelphia. Since then many inquiries have been made throughout the county relative to the adaptability of the boat, and the reliability of the company who propose running her to and from this place. These questions have been answered satisfactorily. Those who are ac. quainted with the subject have informed us 1847, by KateBarelay. that the Express has at present but few superiors on the Delaware, for qualifications needed in running on this route. As to the reliability of the company who own the boat, it is sufficient to say, she belongs to Reybold and Co., Mr. Reybold is well known to the traveling community, and the Co., consists of three of his sons and two sons-in-law, so that the objection formerly urged against the Steamer Cohansey, that the company was composed of too many of varied interests can-
