The Wanderer's Dream of Home BY LOUISE LIFFORD.

I dreamed I was at home. 'Neath the amaranthine bowers: Where my childhood footsteps oft had been Culling life's sweetest flowers;

And a change came o'er my heart, And the long years that had flown, Had passed away—again I stood A child, in my simple home. I dreamed I was at home. And a gentle mother's voice. Came swelling on my ear in tones.

Which made my heart rejoice, And she took my hand in hers. And she kissed my childish brow. And she lulled my childhood cares to sleep, With her voice of music low. I dreamed I was at home,

And my father too was there; He had returned from the spirit land, And his brow was free from care; And he called me "noble boy," And he banished all my fears, I was his prop for declining age, His hope for future years. That dream was too bright to last,

For when the morning dawned. I was the same poor friendless boy, A wanderer far from home. No friend alas, have f. Save him who rules above,: But He'll guard me with his watchful eye,

Power of Early Associations. The power of early associations is displayed in a story of early Texan hunting life. Dave Harris went to Texas when quite young, and became renowned for his break-neck daring exploits, with savage beasts of prey and men more savage still than they. When his father settled in Harrisburg, under a grant from the Mexican Government, the buffaloes were ranging over what is now the populated part of Texas. Dave and a party like him were out one day on a buffalo hunt. Riding madly into a herd, they blazed away promisouously, hoping to bag a fine lot of this noble game.

The gallant leader of the herd was badly wounded, and, turning upon Dave, charged furiously, and sent him and his horse flying for dear life over the plain. The sudden bound of the frightened steed threw the rider out of the saddle, but he clung to the neck of the creature and rode on, chased by the maddened bull, and the whole herd pressing after. Dave's friends could only stand and anxiously behold the stampede. It was a race for life or death. Perched on the neck of the mustang with the grasp of despair, Dave held on, but his situation grew more desperate, and, for the first time in many years. Dave bethought himself, as he was sure to be killed, that he ought to pray. But when did Dave Harris ever pray? Why, when he was a little boy, at his mother's knee, as he was about to go to bed; and now the only words of prayer the wild Texau rover could recall were the child's evening petition, "Now I lay me down to sleep." and this prayer he put up over and over again, as, Mazeppa-like, he was whirled over the plain, with a troop of mad buffaloes thundering in his rear. While thus engaged in praying the horse undertook to leap hole and struck his fore- feet on the other side, which accident dropped Dave into the saddle; and, once more in his seat, he managed to clude his pursuers and make good his escape. Dave often told the story, but never omitted to confess that he was frightened, and wished with all his might that he knew how to pray. But, like a great many other Dave Harris's, he was mighty willing to say his prayers when he thought the devil was after him, and quite as ready to live without them when he thought the danger was

THE WHEAT CROP

The Wheat crop has been harvested throughout the country, and a careful estimate of the well as important for future reference, In regard to aggregate production of Wheat, this year there is less diversity of opinion than usual among those who are in a position to know anything about it, From a careful survey of the returns that we have received, through the country press and other sources, we deem the following observations substantially reliable:

The aggregate yield of Wheat in the several Western States is from three-fifths tothree-fourths of the average of former years. The freshets, the rust, and the general unfavorableness of the season, have operated disastrously upon this important staple. It should be remembered that a larger area was put in Wheat than ever before, and that the actual decrease in the crop is perhaps hardly one-fourth. The Winter Wheat has been successful wherever raised, and the Spring Wheat almost an entire failure. In the Eastern and Southern States the crop has been generally estimated at about an average one, so that in the aggregate the Wheat crop of this year may be put at about 80 per cent.

of last year's As regards Oats, there is a falling off in the crop of this year as compared with that of last year. It has been almost totally ruined in some States by the rust-a disease which has never before been known to afflice Oats.

The production of Wheat in the several States for 1858 and 1859 may be stated as follows:

In 1858 158,500,000 bushels, and in 1859 180,000,000, bushels. The surplus in the Wheat producing States, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, added with that rags and straw which supplied the place of remaining of last years crop, may be see down at 34,000,000 bushels.

The transportation of this at 40 cents per bushel will give nearly fourteen mil-lions of dollars to our canals and our railroads. It will probably be stated that this estimate of 158,000,000 of bushels is a large one for the present Wheat crop, but we think it is not. In 1855 the Patent Office returns gave the Wheat Crop at. 165.000.000 of bushels; and it is considered as not a large return for that year. In 1855 California was put down as producing only 20,000 bushels; last year it produced over 4.000.000.-The amount of land under Wheat cultivation this year is 33 per cent. greater than in 1855—and the decrease per agre to the production cannot be greater.—N. EXAMPLES FOR THE YOUNG.

There are but few things in the history of our country, as one of the great political nations of the earth, more encouraging to the young, than the bright examples of men, who, by their own personal application and unaided industry, have arisen from obscurity to posts of honor, and who, after having enjoyed a just fame, and the respect of their fellows, have left behind them reputations, unspotted by the contaminating influences of vice and immorality, as a rich legacy to the youth of all coming ages.

None will doubt but the high moral character sustained by our Washington, surrounded by circumstances where others have fallen, and the just reputation he won for truth, honesty and uprightness, in all his dealings with men, and nations, has had a salutary and restraining influence on those in authority, and the youth of our land, who have endeavored to emulate his virtues. Examples, in the lives of eminent Americans, are numerous which should stimulate young men to unceasing and persevering efforts, to carve out, by unceasing toil, a fame which shall be as lasting as the annals of their country's bistory. Examples which plainly teach that without labor -arduous labor-no lasting honors will be won; without honesty and uprightness, no honors can be gained which are worthy the notice of beings of so high a grade of intelligence as man.

Do we wish examples of men, who, by patient, hard-working perseverance, have arisen, mainly, by their own unaided efforts, from obscure positions to fill eminent stations in the history of their country, we may set before us such men as Benjamin Franklin, who, though the son and apprentice of a poor tallow chandler, surrounded by adverse circumstances, and deprived of advantages for early improvement, having set his mark high, and maintaining with proof against a back-biting tongue, which is Johnston, and the Celebration, under the said he would have relieved the fort had they not and untiling labor, won the respect and confidence of his nation; stood before kings; contracted alliances; dictated to them terms for settling differences: and by his research into science, brought to light the principle, and laid the foundation for that greatest of all works, lately so successfully accomplished, in uniting in bonds of strengthening brotherhood, the two great maratime nations of the present age. Or we may take as a sample of successful industry, Elihu Burritt; who, from the humble occupation of a Blacksmith, by his indomitable perseverance in the study of languages, arose to places of honor and distinction, and left, for our encouragement, a bright example of what perseverance, when aided by a fixed determination in the right, will do in overcoming all opposing obstacles to a happy success in life. Another thought which should encourage young men to renewed effort in fitting themselves for great usefulness in life, is, the interests and welfare of the nation will soon rest entirely upon them. It is a duty they owe posterity but poorly able to bear the loss, for Mr. S. to keep inviolate, the great principles of free government, and remit to their descendants closed and ready for plastering. No one all those inalienable rights and privileges, bad been at work on the building during the to secure which, our Fathers so freely shed their blood, and gave up their lives.

THE CROPS.

The dry "spell of weather" du ring the month of August, has had the effect of very materially shortening the corn crop. We have lately made a tour through some of the hest agricultural districts in the county, and we do not think there will be an average of more than two thirds our usual yield.

In many places we noticed fields. where we have been accustomed to see from fifty to Mr. B. loses about five hundred dollars by seventy-five bushels to the acre, so parched up by the drouth, as to promise a yield of only twenty or thirty bushels to the acre. We hope enough will be contributed to In others, where the stalks were nearly of the usual size, the ears were very short and of the mischief will be caught and properly but poorly filled. The fine rain we had on last Saturday and the Saturday before last, will do much towards filling out the ears, but it is too late to bring corn up to an average. Potatoes have suffered less than we expected, and if not affected with the rot we hope will yield nearly an average crop.

CALUMNIATORS. What an important position have we as ing through this life of anxiety and cares .tainly there are, and they are givenfreely to all. The destructive and contaminating influence of sin has gained its victims, and they have become robbers of the just, the joyful and the truly virtuous.

It is said that the most cruel, despotic and tyranical slave-driver in the rice awamps and sugar plantations, is one appointed to that office, who is a slave himself. We have often noticed that if a person should make a misstep through the influence of temptation, or the inexperience of youth, that as soon as it reaches the cars of certain ones in the neighborhood, they commence the tirade and chastisement with an untiring zeal, pursue them night and day, wishing to be informed of all the particulars, as though they were the judge and jury, and even capable of setting wrong right, and of overseeing and regulating the business, the character and the morals of the community. You may be assured that with some honorable exceptions, they are those whose lives have been checkered with meanness of the lowest and the basest kind .-"Charity covereth a multitude of sins."-It does not compass sea and land, and canvass the neighborhood to find them out.-"Charity thinketh no evil." The enjoyment of life consists in its associations. How much happier are we to think well of our friends and acquaintances, than when we think ill of them. And whenever we suffer ourselves to be robbed of this by evil designers we lose a valuable earthly treasure that our heavenly father intends us to enjoy. Such calumniators often justify themselves by say ing that "it is the truth, and only the truth." Suppose it is the truth, are you doing any one any good in promulgating the truth; will it benefit him, yourself or the community?-"Truth is not to be spoken at all times."-We are acquainted with a minister who has served one year in a States prison, a fact that is not generally known. Would it be doing justice to him, or to the community where he lives, to go throughout his parish and

HOUSE BURNED.

A few days since an unfinished dwelling house at Shiloh. was burned under circumstances that render it highly probable that it was maliciously fired.

The building was erected by contract, by Mr. Hezekiah Bonham, a very worthy and industrious mechanic, who has a large family dependent upon him for support, and is Randolph. of Shiloh. Jones Meeting-Broke Jail. DEAR PIONEER .-A week or ten days ago. I want you Bridgeton folks to know We went 'out for "huckleberries"-Found them nearly large as cherries-Proceeded our things to fill, And very much against our will, Just picking out the very best, We ran against a hornet's nest. We bolted-better think we did-And in the nearest swamp we hid: But when the birds began to settle We found ourselves minus a kettle, A sting upon our dexter digits, That put us into painful "fidgets;" Another just beneath our coat, With one aside our little throat. Determined not to be outdone, At the expense of some "fun." For the berries we made a dart, Snatching kettle and borries in part. Not quite of reason now bereft. We gathered up our feet and left. The next part of our little story Crowns the whole with swampy glory.

Of sleeping in the wood that night; But toiling till the close of day, We found at last the "good old way" That led through copse quite romantic, To the home of "Yours, ATLANTIC." Now here right in our cosey "study," Pantics yet a little muddy, As sure as lives a single sinner, And-I never get a dinner-As sure as you now hear me speak,

Around the "spung" we 'gan to roam,

Thinking of our dear old home;

But the more we walked about,

The more could we not get out.

ATLANTIC.

For the West Jersey Pioncer. Mr. Epiron:—This being a most beautiful afternoon, I started in company with some friends to comply with an invitation given us to attend a Sunday School Pic Nic, held in the grove belonging to Louis Woodruff, some three miles out of that day, not one is known among the livtown. The school is connected with what is ing. commonly called Woodruff's Church, and from appearances, I should think that it was a thrivschool in which the more advanced in years take deep interest. So we will call him, for he war just enterlug his one handredth year. I refer to the The visit was made about a year since. In our party were my grand-aunt, my father, weeks. Years ago the most rapid printing tives of five generations. His greeting press was worked by hand power—now was cordial; and having ascertained the name and person of each of us, he was ready for

It was my desire to hear him speak of his early days, of times and events of which so few cun now bear personal witness-which come to us for the most part only as written history. And I did not doubt that this would be pleasant to him, and that slender and uncertain as might be his recollection of recent things, the remote past, in its origiinal impressions, was vividly and accurately before bim.

A soldier of the Revolution had been this aged New Jursey pastor, and I desired most especially to hear him speak of Washington and the war: -

"My native place," said he, "was Litch-field, Conn., I had been at New Haven, but studied at Dartmouth, N. H., under President Wheelock, with about ninety others .-The college was broken up early in the war by an invasion from Canada, and I went home and collisted in a company from Litch-

This was in the spring of '76, just after the evacuation of Boston, when Washington was hastoning to secure and defend New York and Hudson river.

"I was in New York city," he continued, "early in July. One day there was a great firing of guus, and when we asked what it meant, they told us that the Declaration of Independence had been made. We had fine times after that for a while-plenty of gingertread and wine! That summer we were over in New Jersey, first at Bergen, and then at Bergen Point, opposite to Staten Island, where the British lay. We could see the smoke of the battle of Long Island, and trace the progress of the fight to the north by the smoke. My father was Captain of a company of militia posted in New York city, and was ordered across to Brooklyn, as if to years. reinforce our troops; and the British were expecting to renew the fight; but by a mas terly stroke Washington brought off his troops through the night-every company

Bradley's associate in command was Col, Magaw, from the South." According to the best historical accounts. Col. Magaw, of l'a., had full command of the fort, and bravely defended it. Washington had advised its avacuation, but yielded to the views of others. He watched the attack from the opposite bank of the river, and, fearing the surrender, sent in word to hold out for a time, promising succor. It was too late, however, and Washington was moved account of the extreme heat of the weather. The prisoners sent down the river suffered the horrors of confinement in sugar-house and prison ship. "Well," said he, drawing his hand across his throat, "I can't believe yet that this throat was made for a halter." I never had occasion to speak personally to Washington. He often rode near me when we were on our march. He commonly had a number of officers about him. Once when the ranks were somewhat broken, I remember he spoke to our officers

> This last remark was made about a simple occurrence of eighty-one years ago, with a tone which would have suited an occurrence of yesterday. I almost involuntarily looked down at the old gentleman's boots, to see if any of the mud yet remained.

De Quincy compares the mind to one those old classical manuscripts from which the early writing has been obliterated, to make room for a more modera record—a monkish legend, perhaps, of the middle ages -this later record giving place, it may be, to a third-a knightly romance of feuda times. Modern chemistry has succeeded in bringing to view again the ancient writing in some of these manuscripts, after it had been a long time concealed, and thus, much valuable literature, supposed to have been lost, has been repaired. And so, according to his suggestion, the ancient memories o asked him to prescribe for his complaint, an old man revive and take fullest hold on ever saw." Washington replied, "Madan, you are just as blind as your husband."--Washington's face was too long to be perfeetly handsome. I was not in the army when it re-crossed the Delaware, my time had expired and I had started home. Having finished our conversation about the war, he spoke about his studies and his entrance upon the ministry. Said he. "I read theology with my cousin, Joseph Vail, of Hadlime, Conn., New Haven, and was licensed at Middletown, in the same State. In eighty-seven I came to New Jersey, and was installed over the Fairfield church the following year. Dr. Duffield preached my installation sermon, and Dr. Green was a member of the Presbytery."

At length I asked him after his age, knowng very w 'l what it was reputed to be, but still desiring to have the statement of it from his own lips. "I ought to know," he re-plied, "but I don't" This seemed strange, as his recollection of early dates was accounted remarkably good; so I suggested, "You were born in fifty-eight, were you not?"-"Yes, yes, but what year is this?" he re-plied, showing that his difficulties of recollection pertained to the present rather than the past. When I told him the year, he exclaimed, "O, amezing! am I so near a hunlred years old? I don't feel so old !"

The time arrived for us to leave; but we could not go without first hearing again the old pastor's voice in prayer, and receiving his blessing. He readily granted our desire. It was a quiet summer morning; even the ir was still; the patriarchal trees about the parsonage door stood motionless. In the hush of the scene, the gentle voice of the venerable man of God fell upon us with unwonted solemnity. And how devout, how benevolent, how heaven-aspiring was the spirit of his prayer.

In parting from him, I presented my child o receive his kiss, having endeavored, before the visit, to impress her imagination as vividly as possible with a picture of him. She guzed carnestly into his face as he bent down to her, and I do not doubt that if God should be pleased to spare her to a like old age, she will recount to enildren's children, as one of her earliest and most pleasant recollections that interview with the wrinkled and silver haired man who had seen Washington, and had been her ancestors' pastor for so many

FRUIT CULTURE. Or, a Guide to the Cultivation and Management of Fruit Trees, with descriptions of Household Receipts; fully illustrated. By Thos. Gregg. New York: Fowler and Wells, publishers. Price, by mail, paper, or ware, vicin, or Fruit culture has but just begun to receive the attention it deserves, and we gladly welcome this work as the matter it contains is well calcuated to aid and instruct, and consequently benefit, the fruit grower. Every person who has a tree, or ground enough for one to grow on, should To be successful in fruit culture, as in anything else, you must know how to do it; and his book gives much information one cannot well do without. The price is so small that any one can afford it. There is no doubt but in all tions some fruits can be made prefitable if judi ciously cultivated.

TAVE become proprietors of the White Hall Clothing Bazaar, corner of Fourth and Market Streets, but will not follow in the beaten track. We are satisfied that the only way to build up and keep a large business, is to sell goods cheap, and give satisfaction to customers; (pretence will not answer—and humbug has had its day,) and we intend to sell our goods at 5 per cent advance upon cost, (no more and no less) and no variation in marked prices. This system will sustain itself without puffing. We shall buy and sell exclusively for cash. Our clothing will be made as well as clothing can be made. Our assortment for men and boys the largest in Philadelphia, and our prices much lower than any others. Call once and see for yourself.

MECHANICS. INVENTORS Manufacturers and Farmers.

The Scientific American has now reached its Fourteenth Year, and will enter upon a New Volume on the 11th of September. It is the only weekly publication of the kind now issued in this country, and it has a very extensive circulation in all the States of the Union. It is not, as some might suppose from its title, a dry, abstruse work on technical science on the contrary, it so deals with the great events going on in the scientific, mechanical and insustrial worlds, as to please and instruct every one. I the Mechanic or Artizan wishes to know the best machine in use, or how to make any substance employed in his business—if the House-wife wishes to get a resipe for making a good color, &c.—if the Inventor wishes to know the set of what is going on in the way of improvements—if the Mannfacturer wishes to keep posted with he times, and to employ the best machines in his business—if the Mannfacturer wishes to keep posted with he times, and to employ the best are inities in his business—if the Man of Leisure and Stedy wishes to keep himself familiar with the progress made in the chemical lab oratory, or in the construction of telegraphs, steamships, railroads, reapers, mowers, and a thousand other machines and appliances, both of peace and war—all of these desiderata can be found in the Scientific American, and not claswice.—They are here presented in a reliable and ideresting form, adapted to the comprehension of minds unlearned in the higher branches of-science and art.
