ROSE BUDS.

BY MISS SARAH SOWELL.

Wreath a wreath of snowy buds
For the fair young bride;

When she breathes her solemn vows
At the altar's side.

Weave a crown of crimson buds
For the happy child,

Playing in its lawn-like grace,
In the woodlands wild.

Lay fresh buds upon the brow
Of the early dead;

Let them pour forth their fragrance,
A glow of beauty shed.

Bring them to the mourning one,
Sitting sad and lone;

They will gently speak to her
Of the Holy One.

Who hath taken her flowers hence
To a world of light,

Where they blossom evermore,
All untouched by blight.

THE GREAT CHANGE.

Death is the universal doom. The flourish of the valley springs up and blooms for a while in variegated loveliness, but perishes as soon as the gray livery of Autumn is thrown over the face of nature. The oak of the forest, through whose branches the winds of heaven have whistled for centuries, and which has alike been the retreat of bird and beast, is at last prostrated by the resistless tornado. Man himself, whom God has distinguished above all the works of his hand, and who stands the proud lord of creation's realm, has within him the seeds of death, and finally yields to that stroke which severs him from his friends, and consigns him to quiet oblivion.

We look around. Everywhere we are admonished of mortality; the monuments of the grave stand on every hand. We gaze, we sigh, we look around; "we sink lamenting, or lamented, all the same." How true, yet how beautiful the language of the inspired writer—"Man that is born of woman is of a few days, and full of trouble—He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down. A man wasteth away; ye man geth up like the grass, and withereth as the grass; as the flower of the field, so flourisheth he; for as the grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away; so shall the grass wither, and the flower thereof shall fall: because the breath of the Lord is kindled against him, and he shall surely die."

There is not a spot where human footsteps tread, that does not, in the fleeting history of its inmate give the lesson of mortality. Is it the household? Death enters, spares neither the bright nor the beautiful, and how much we mortals owe to the Church! They who promised much, whose lives were those of purity and usefulness, are the first called away. Is it anywhere? Every month, yes, every day, we hear of some one of our fellow mortals, whose pilgrimage is finished, whose race is run, and whose names are destined, ere long to fade from the remembrance of all living. Yet, men live as though they were to live forever. They carry on their designs, and are so intent in their projects, that death seldom seems to intrude itself upon their thoughts. The stream of time still hurries onward, but where are the inhabitants who dwell on its banks?

We have towns and cities—we have wealth and genius and art, but where are the founders of the former, or the designers of the latter? Our fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live forever? Where is the glowing cheek, the open brow, the eagle eye of youth? Where their busy hands, their burning hearts, their melting voices? Alas! that many brow has mouldered in the dust, that eagle eye is quelled; those hands, those hearts, those voices have ceased to move, to burn, to melt.

There are those who, when they are called to leave this world, are called to leave it as though they were to live forever. They carry on their designs, and are so intent in their projects, that death seldom seems to intrude itself upon their thoughts. The stream of time still hurries onward, but where are the inhabitants who dwell on its banks?

For the West Jersey Pioneer.

WEST JERSEY ACADEMY.

This permanent institution of our flourishing town, was called into existence by the educational wants of West Jersey. No school of a high grade was in all this region. The friends of education long had felt the necessity for establishing one to which they might not only send their sons, thus freeing themselves from the extra expense attendant upon placing them in schools at a distance, but it would also be bringing the means of an education within the reach of those in moderate circumstances, who would otherwise be compelled to spend their days with only the small amount of knowledge acquired in the common school.

The first steps toward its foundation was taken in 1850. At a meeting of the Presbytery of West Jersey, a paper was read before that body, the import of which was, that the establishment of an Academy had been projected by the citizens of Bridgeton, and that they were willing to merge their local plan into the more comprehensive one of a Presbyterian Institution. By bringing it under the supervision of a corporate body, it was thought that this important end would be accomplished, namely, its connection with a permanent body like the Presbytery, would be likely to secure perpetuity to the school itself. Experience has proved that the continuity of Academies whose life depends on mere private enterprise, is very liable to be interrupted by causes which seldom affect Institutions under the care of permanent or corporate associations.

We find, that, at the first regular meeting of the Board of Trustees, its venerable President, WILLIAM B. EWING, M. D., the oldest living graduate of Nassau Hall, with one exception, (Governor Bibb, of Kentucky), made a feeling address on the educational wants of this section of our state, and, also gave a history of the various short-lived classical schools that had been, from time to time, established during the past seventy years.

The zeal of his friends is manifested by the fact that the foundation was commenced August 5th, 1852, and on the 8th of the same month the cornerstone was laid with appropriate ceremonies. Various causes somewhat delayed its progress, yet it was completed and the school organized in 1857, articles of incorporation had been secured in 1852.

A gentleman who had been on a tour through the southern part of New Jersey, after a visit to the Academy thus speaks of the Building and its surroundings, in an article furnished by him, to one of the city papers. In the centre of a lot of fourteen acres, with a shady grove, in the rear, stands on the very pinnacle of the hill, is that imposing, four story stone edifice, the West Jersey Academy. Externally, the appearance of the Building is very striking. For a moment, on first view, we know not whether to admire or despair of it. Plain and rectangular with its modest cupola, it has no pretensions to architectural beauty. It is built of native stone—the iron red brick is frequently found in the recesses and portion of this part of the State, but of unusual firmness and durability, and of a strong reddish chocolate color; mottled with whitish spots and streaks. As soon as we had assured ourselves that it did not belong to that class of things called imitations, the effect became highly agreeable. Within the Academy is admirably arranged; the ceilings are high from base to attic; ventilation ample; classrooms convenient, and the dormitories, whether single or double bedded, are among the very best we have seen. All the necessary conveniences of such an establishment, even to the gymnasium seem to have received careful attention. From the outside, such a school is not to be distinguished from the ordinary school of the country. From its connection with an ecclesiastical body, it may be inferred that it is not a secular school, but a school of the Church. From its opening, it has been patronized by members of the various religious denominations, no less than five being represented by its present members.

Though in the early stages of its existence, as is the case with nearly all similar institutions, it met with some reverses which for a time, it is to be feared, will be a hindrance to its progress, it is nevertheless a school of the Church, and its success is a matter of course. BRIDGETON

Monday Morning, March 19.

The Pioneer has a LARGER Circulation than any weekly Paper in this State!

Only $1.00 per Year!

JAMES B. FERGUSON, Editor.

LECTURES.

The Lecture in Bridgeton this (Thursday) evening, and in Millville on (Friday) evening, by Rev. Thomas Street of Philadelphia, will doubtless be one of much interest.

FEMALE SOCIETY.

We know of nothing that conduces more to the social and moral improvement of young men, than the wholesome influence of female society.

An Editor in Luck. Our contemporary of the Salem Sunbeam, has just been elected by the people of that city to the dignified office of Justice of the Peace.

We have received the first copy of a new paper, entitled 'The Gloucester Co. Times,' published at Carpenter's Landing, by Mr. S. C. Ashbrook, late publisher of the Signal, at Bordentown, N. J.

SEAD.—A fine specimen of the finny tribe was caught "down the creek" this week, by Levi Bond, and brought to this market.

The Schooner Blate, arrived at this port a few days since, with 110 tons of Gunpowder, for Dare and Mulford, having made the run from New York, in thirty-six hours.

FARMERS are advised to give them a call, and procure a good supply of the fertilizer.

THE CHINESE. In another column we may find the advertisement of the Chinese family, who intend to give an exhibition of their various manufactures in this place on Wednesday evening next.

Contemptible. On Wednesday night last, some unprincipled fellow, not satisfied with defacing the front of a new brick building on Commerce street, by smearing it with a thick coat of paste, and painting a bill thereon, actually had the impudence to besmear the front door of a dwelling in the same neighborhood, with the vile composition.

The Legislature. One of the most important weeks of the session is now fairly under way, and it has been the general understanding that the joint meeting for the appointment of U. S. Senators and other state and county officers, will be held on the 14th inst.

For the West Jersey Pioneer. Extract of the report of the town Superintendent of the Township of Downe, for the year 1858, published by request of the Town Meeting.

In a republican government based upon such liberal principles as that of the United States, where no despotism is permitted to create any privileged orders, nor constitute the power of the executive, where no standing army supports the authority of its existence, whose constitution recognized no particular form of worshipping the deity, nor gives any favorite support to any particular branch of the christian church, but allows a large freedom of sentiment to all where public science is freely discussed from their stand and the press, there is conceded that a community should be placed in the best circumstances for affording mutual aid in providing the necessities of life, where advancement in private and public virtue, can constitute the only safeguard of such a government, observation and experience have sufficiently proved that in order it may be maintained in security, the masses of her population should enjoy the advantages of general education.
