CHOICE POETRY.

OUR FARMERS.

BY THE BARD OF TOWER HALL.

We sows of the Farmers, but did not get through—
The system are scarce in a six-penny sieve.
We don't mean to say that we are not your best;
We trust that the reader our meaning divines.
That fact, like the water, in every stream flows
When served on a cooler, in a limited mode.

The sows of our genius, no matter how (drift)
Are drained it by love, and that number is fifty.
Exceeding that number, sometimes but a few—
The time, being wasted, we strike it through.
For the sake of farmers the subject, forthwith,
Requires a volume for every day.

The Farmer, with all the pretensions he makes,
Quite often is found a companion of asses.
The earth is his mother; it is his constant food,
That often, when he will, it will swallow his bread.
And knows in their making he had a strain
The cows, without mercy, he takes by the tail;
And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.
And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

And when he is in the field, he is never afraid
To tread on the feet of the oxen, and to tread
On the nose of the horse, and to tread on the tail
Of the pig, and to tread on the ear of the lamb.

PROGRESS.

Progress is a striking characteristic of the age in which we live, and progress of the right kind is always commendable. We had the pleasure a few days ago of visiting and enjoying the salubrious breezes of one of the little villages located a few miles below us, called Newport; and if we are not greatly mistaken, the people of that place are making progress, and that of the right kind. During the last few years, they have built three neat and commodious churches, a large handsome two story school house, and about fifty very respectable dwellings.
Their yards and yard fences present a very different aspect from what they did some years ago. We were also pleased to see the people turning their attention to the improvement of their farms. There were almost no marks of improvement. That place, once so noted for its intemperance, is now inhabited by a sober, industrious, and virtuous people. On Saturday evening we attended their debating school, and found there a large and intelligent audience of men and women. Mr. David Campbell was in the chair, and Dr. S. Bacon, Secretary.
The subject for the evening was ably discussed, and a more quiet and attentive audience is seldom met with. Another mark of the intellectual and moral improvement of that place, was the removal or discussion of those gross and unwholesome places, called groggeries, and half dozen of these establishments, and stores, standing on the common, and on the Sabbath, using profane and improper language. Mr. Campbell's progress continue to visit until lately by Newport, but all quarters of our six-circled earth, shall become like unto the garden of the Lord.

C. ALBERTSON.

From the "Patriarchal Age."

The Old Major; or Then and Now.

BY OUR EL.

It is related of M. de Tequerville, author of "Democracy in America," that, being one of a party assembled a few years since in Paris, to celebrate the Anniversary of American Independence, he gave the following sentiment, touching one of the New England States, which he had discovered as "a little yellow spot on the map of the Confederation."—"Connect-de-coot, the yellow spot that make de cloak peddler, de schoolmaster, and de Senator. De first, give you time; de second tell you law you do wish him; and de third make you law and your civilization."

Poor de Tequerville is dead now, and we have no record of a like incident, to associate his memory with that of New Jersey, or to link his praise with that of our native State. However, little Jersey has her distinctive characteristics. On the maps, and in the memories of all her sons, she is the same true blue as of old—a little spot that has furnished the quota of good and great men—men who are to be found in every clime and condition of the civilized world.

Our little story pertains to one of her sons, good, if not great, although it may sound somewhat paradoxical to qualify him thus.

The writer had but just made adieu to a party of five, including the better half of his own family, and the Major aforesaid, when, in turning his footsteps from the depot, into the shadowy streets of the city of C. The following train of reflections occurred to him:

Thirty Years! what changes have they wrought! In 1829, my old friend the Major, left our native state to penetrate, or to locate in, the wilds of Western New York.

THE RAILROAD.

We alluded last week to the efforts now making to secure the engagement of a sufficient amount of stock, to build a railroad from Woodbury to Bridgeton.

Some of our most energetic men have the matter in hand, and if only seconded by those directly interested in the matter, in proportion to their pecuniary interest in the success of the undertaking, the road will be put through, without any unnecessary delay.

By Divine permission, Rev. Dr. Jones will preach at the Alms' House on Sunday afternoon the 22nd, at 3 o'clock, P. M.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE. Hostilities Actually Commenced.

THE CROPS. As far as we have observed, the crops are now growing finely. Notwithstanding the warm, open winter, the Spring has been rather a backward one.

lokwarm, would be to get them to travel on them, and see the marvels they have achieved in other places.

The present movement is under the guidance of some of our most enterprising and active men, and with proper degree of encouragement along the route, will be successful.
