

The West Jersey Pioneer.

A Family Newspaper: Devoted to Morality, Education, Science, Arts, Amusements, Mechanics, Agriculture, Temperance, Domestic and Foreign News, &c.—Independent of Party or Sect.

$1.00 IN ADVANCE!

BRIDGETON N. J. SATURDAY, MAY 28, 1859.

VOL. XI—NO 586

HAIR JEWELRY,
Charles Neher,
Artist in Hair,
No. 612 Arch Street, above Sixth, PHILADELPHIA.

WEST JERSEY R. R. CO.
SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.
ON and after Wednesday, April 28, 1859, the Cars of the West Jersey Railroad Co. will leave daily (Sundays excepted) as follows:

LEAVE PHILADELPHIA,
Walnut street Wharf, at 8 and 11.15 A. M., and 2.45 and 5.00 P. M.
LEAVE BRIDGETON,
at 7.55 A. M. and 1.45 and 4.0 P. M.
For Philadelphia and Camden, on April 9, 1859. RICHARD L. DEFFEN, Agent.

Henry Neff,
SURGEON DENTIST,
COMMERCIAL ST., a few doors east of the Presbyterian. Season Room and directly opposite the Baptist Church, still continues to practice Dentistry in all its various departments.

AMERICAN LIFE INSURANCE & TRUST CO.
CAPITAL STOCK, $300,000.
COMPANY'S Building, Walnut street, S. E.
Corner of Fourth, Philadelphia.
Life Insurance at the usual Mutual rates, or at reduced rates, at about 25 per cent less, or at Total assistance rates, the lowest in the world.
A. WILLIAMS, President,
J. C. SIMS, Secretary,
W. M. S. HOWEN, Agent, and Medical Examiner, Bridgeton N. J., 8-11-59.

D. H. SMOCK,
Attorney at Law and Solicitor in Chancery, BRIDGETON, N. J.
Office in the brick building S. W. corner of Commerce and Pearl sts. Ap 10-11-59.

PEDRICK & CHEESMAN, DEALERS IN
IRON, STEEL,
AND
BLACKSMITH COAL,
BRIDGETON, N. J.
SPRINGS, AXLES, RIFLES,
BELLOWS, &c.
ISAAC PEDRICK, JOHN CHEESMAN, JR.

THOMAS P. WILLIAMS, ELECTROPATHIC PHYSICIAN,
BRIDGETON, N. J.
Commerce Street, West of the Bridge.

J. R. HOAGLAND,
Attorney at Law,
Solicitor, Master & Examiner in Chancery, BRIDGETON, N. J.
Office on Commerce St., over the Chronicle Office.

BECK & LAWTON,
MUSIC PUBLISHERS,
AND
DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF MUSICAL MERCHANDISE
No. 622 CHESTNUT STREET,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

C. P. VANDERVEER & ARCHER, WHOLESALE
GROCERS AND TEA DEALERS,
N. 3 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.
March 14, 1857-58.

C. S. MILLER & CO.
CROCKERY AND FANCY DRY GOODS AND TRIMMINGS STORE, GROSCOPPE BUILDING, CORNER OF LAUREL STREETS, BRIDGETON, N. J.

O. S. BELDEN,
Practitioner of Medicine,
OFFICE SITUATED ON LAUREL ST.
Opposite the First Presbyterian Church, Bridgeton, June 12, 1858.

A CARD.
J. C. KIRBY, SURGEON DENTIST, (successor to J. D. Harbert) respectfully offers his professional services to the inhabitants of Cumberland County and the public generally.

S. B. WOODRUFF,
No. 26 Commerce Street
DEALER IN
Clocks, Watches, Jewelry and Silverware.
May 23,

WALTER DINMORE & CO.
Gallery of Photography, 730 Chestnut Street,
PHILADELPHIA.
WALTER DINMORE, CHAS. W. WARNICK.

EDWARD R. MORGAN & CO.
Photography and India Ink Gallery,
No. 1024 Chestnut Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.
The Public are respectfully invited to call and examine specimens.
April 23, 1859-17

F. S. MORRIS,
GENERAL AGENT
COMMERCIAL MERCHANT,
No. 11 MARKET STREET, 2d door below WATER ST.
PHILADELPHIA.

Constantly receiving, and on hand, an assortment of E. B. Ames' Detective, Reseive and Fancy Socks, Bed Cords, Coil Ropes, Clothes Pins, Baskets, Brushes, The Yarn, Lamp Wick, Wrapping and Sewing Paper, Brooms, Buckets, Pans and Saw Blades.

CHOICE POETRY.

For the West Jersey Pioneer.

A LOVER'S DREAM.

BY APPOINTEE.

Being wearied and worn by the cares of the day, I retired to my pillow to slumber to-day.
When the Angel of Sleep sped his way from the skies,
And hung a hazy lock to the lids of my eyes.

Then the Angel of Dreams sought my lonely retreat,
And laid fair pictures of love at my feet.
He showed me sweet prospects which fancy, unaided, Might seek for forever, and then he degraded.

He led me away to old Arab's bowers—
The land of sweet song, and the land of bright flowers.
And there, while her hair and her eyes were gold and fair, I drank in her perfumes and trod her fair ground.

I walked o'er her plains, and delighted in her glens,
I sailed o'er her waters and hunted her fens.
For pleasure I sought, and having found my whims, I sought for repose to my wearied limbs.

While gazing on me for a long-looked seat, I saw a green locust—a sylvan retreat,
Which honey gates and measuring my length,
I saw that I'd never, to reach it, strength.

But when I saw my back press'd to the green mossy bed,
When I saw that I had been fast asleep to my head, Then I awoke—and finding me a thinking of it,
I sprang to my feet and hastened back to my cot.

But, as the ray that shone from the dream's dwelling,
When I saw the spot that was nothing but a wall, So when I awoke the delusion was banished, I saw that I had never been fast asleep.

For the West Jersey Pioneer.

EARLY EDUCATION.

Youth is the season in which impressions prove the most abiding. It is the time for reaping as well as getting; for remembering as well as learning; for retaining as well as acquiring. Years may pass away, and the head blossom for the grave, and the eye grow dim, and the hand tremble, but the seeds of early life recur with the freshness of yesterday. Whatever you are now you will be when you become men and women.

If you are industrious, and improve your time you will make your mark like you will, but if you are indolent and lazy and care nothing for your books, you will look back upon it in after years with sorrow and regret. To reason logically and arrive at wise and safe results, requires a sound judgment, and such a judgment is usually the fruit of deep experience and large opportunities of comparing one thing with another.

But to collect the materials with which a riper understanding can work out its conclusions is the special province of youth. Every one who expects to make his mark high in the world should begin early to form a collection of valuable facts, and not a day should pass without adding to their number. Volume upon volume, bringing the richest secrets of art and science within your reach, lie open before you. A very few skillings, easily saved from the bar-room or the oyster saloon, will put you in possession of a fund of information to which many of your parents and older friends had no early access. Only use well your advantages and you make acquisitions, in comparison with which houses and lands are as nothing.

It is sufficient here to say that no youth who feels the workings of a single noble aspiration, need be discouraged at any apparent difficulties that lie in his path. The highest idea of education is the training of the mind to surmount obstacles. Many a man has continued to engrave his name very legibly in the temple of Fame, with fewer opportunities for improvement, than often in our day, falls to the lot of the humblest laborer.

When Erastus could devise no other way of getting his name into history, he set fire to the temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Knowledge is power. It is the philosopher's stone; the true alchemy that turns everything it touches, into gold. It is the scepter that gives us our dominion over nature; the key that unlocks the store house of creation, and opens to us the treasure of the universe. The road to health, honor, usefulness, and happiness, is open to all; and all who will, may enter upon it with the most certain prospect of success. In this free community there are no privileged orders.— Every man finds his level; if he has talents, he will be known and estimated, and rise to the respect and confidence of society. Look at men of eminence in the world, and you will generally find that much of the foundation of that eminence, was laid in the associations of early life. Luther was only 20 years old when he gave the Papal Hierarchy its first deadly blow; and Calvin but 25 when he wrote the immortal Institutes. Buonaparte was a mere stripling when he accomplished his glorious campaign in Italy, and the dew of youth was still on the brow of our beloved Washington, when he distinguished himself on the day of Braddock's defeat.

The time of action will not always continue. The young ought always to have this consideration present to their mind that they must grow old unless prematurely cut off by accident or accident, and they ought to contemplate the certain approach of age and decrepitude, and consider that all temporal happiness is of uncertain acquisition, mixed with a variety of alloy, and in whatever dis-gree attained, only of short precarious duration. Every day brings some disappointment, some diminution of pleasure, or some prostration of hope, and every moment brings us nearer to that period when the present scenes shall recede, and future prospects cannot be formed. During the first twelve or fifteen years of one's life, the science of numbers and distances, opening the door to mathematics, geography and astronomy may be fairly entered upon, and their grand principles mastered. Especially is this the season to have the mind stored with the great events which fill for us the pages of ancient and modern history. Acquisitions which cannot be gotten for gold, and for the price of which silver cannot be weighed, may be, and often are, made while one is still young and tender. E. F.

THE CLERGYMAN'S ADVENTURE.

A CAPITAL PRUSSIAN STORY.

On a dreary day, in the reign of Frederick William, a heavy travelling carriage was slowly lumbering along the road from Potsdam to Berlin. Within it was one person only, who took no heed of the slowness of the travelling, but leaning back in a corner, was arranging a multiplicity of papers contained in a small pocket book. Since he was dressed in a plain dark military uniform, it was fair to suppose that this gentleman belonged to the Prussian army, but to what grade of rank he could determine, as all today of rank had been avoided. A chilly November evening was closing in, and though the rain had ceased, yet dark masses of clouds flying through the sky gave warning that a "sweeping" darkness was at hand.— The road grew heavier, at least so it should have seemed to a foot-traveler who was plowing his way through the mire; and so doubtless it did seem to the carriage horses, who floundered along so slowly, that the pedestrian who they had overtaken, kept easily by the side of the coach, the occupant of which looked out of the window, and perceiving the stranger, called out in rather an authoritative tone of voice:

"Halloo! young man, whether are you about this story looking night?"

"That is more than I can tell you, not being of home in this part of the world. My wish is to reach Berlin; but if I find a resting place before I get there, that I am bound, for I am weary."

"I should think you must have two hours' walk before you," was the unsatisfactory reply that followed.

The young man made no reply, and after a short pause the stranger said:

"If I please you to rest on the step of the carriage for a few minutes, you are welcome so to do. Herr, what's your name?"

"My name is Heinrich Meyer," replied the young man, "one of those who wisely never returns the small benefit because the larger one is not obtained."

From inside the window the next question put to Heinrich was:

"What are you going to Berlin for?"

"To hunt for some cousins," was the answer.

"And pray who may they be?" asked the unknown.

"Well, to tell you the truth, I have not an idea who they are, or where to look for them. Indeed, it is very doubtful whether I have so much as an acquaintance in Berlin, much less a relative."

The questioner looked amazed, and he said:

"Surely there must be some other motive for your going to Berlin, or what could have put this idea into your head?"

"Why," replied Heinrich, "I have just become a clergyman, without the smallest chance of getting anything to do in my own neighborhood. I have no relative to help me, and not quite money enough to find me in necessities."

"But," said the Prussian, "what on earth has this to do with cousins in Berlin?"

"Well, you know! Many of my fellow students have got good appointments, and whenever I ask them to let me know how it was done, the answer always is, 'A cousin gave it to me,' or 'I got it through the interest of a cousin who lives in Berlin.'"

Now, as I had none of these useful cousins in the country, I must go, without their help, or hunt them in Berlin."

"This was said in a comical, dry way, so that his listener could not refrain from laughing, but he made no comment. However, he pulled out a piece of paper, and began to write upon it. When he had finished, he turned round to Heinrich, saying that he had observed he had been smoking, and that he felt inclined to do the same, but had forgotten to bring tinder with him. Could Herr Meyer oblige him with a light?"

"Certainly, with great pleasure," was the prompt reply; and Heinrich, taking a tin-box out of his wallet, immediately began to strike a light. Now, the evening was damp, so damp, that there seemed little enough prospect of the tinder's lighting; moreover the wind blew the sparks out almost before they fell.

"Well, if your cousins are not more easily to be gotten than your light, I pity you, young sir," was the sole remark to which the stranger condescended, as he watched Heinrich's laborious endeavors.

"Nil desperandum is my motto," answered the young man; and when the words were scarcely uttered, the light had been struck.
In his delight of succeeding, Heinrich jumped up on the carriage step; and leaning towards the window, thrust the tinder early in the direction of the gentleman's face.

"Hurrah, sir, puff away!"

After a short pause, during which time the stranger had been puffing at his pipe, he removed it from his mouth, and addressed Heinrich in this way:

"I have been thinking over what you have been telling me, and perhaps, in an humble way, I might be able to assist you, and thus set the part of the cousin you are seeking.

At all events, when you get to Berlin, take this note," handing him a slip of paper on which he had been writing; "take this note to Marshal Grumkow, who is somewhat of a friend of mine. But mind! Do exactly as he bids you, and abide strictly by his advice.

If he says he will help you, rely upon it, he will keep his word; but he is rather capricious, and the way he sets about doing a kindness may perhaps seem strange to you. And now," he continued, "as the road is improved, I must hurry on the horses, and so bid you good evening, hoping you will prosper in your new career."

As Heinrich began to express his thanks for the good wishes of his unknown friend, the signal was given to increase the speed of the horses, and before he had time to make any acknowledgments, he found himself alone again. The young man was not a little astounded at what had taken place; and as he gazed on the slip of paper, he could not help wondering whether any good would come of it. These were the only words on it.

"Dear Marshal!—If you can forward the views of the honest Heinrich Meyer, you will oblige your friend. Let me know the result of the interview with him."

"Time will prove this, as it does all other things," thought Heinrich, as he proceeded on his way. Somehow or other the road appeared less wearisome, and he felt less tired and foot-sore since receiving the paper.— Hope was stronger within him than when he had been for many a day; and quickening his pace he reached Berlin by daylight.

The noise and bustle of the capital was new to him, and he had some little difficulty in making his way to an inn. He found one at last, and after a frugal supper, he returned to rest. After breakfast he spent some time in searching for the residence of Grumkow. The house was, however, at last found, and having delivered his missive to a servant, Heinrich awaited the result in the hall. In a few minutes the servant returned, and requested him, in a most respectful manner, to follow him to the marshal's presence.

Arrived there, he was received most courteously; and the marshal made many inquiries as to his past life and future prospects; requested to be told the name of the village or town in which he had been educated; at what inn he was living in Berlin, &c., but still no allusion was made either to the note or to the writer of it. The interview lasted about twenty minutes; at the end of which time the marshal dismissed him, desiring that he would call again on that day fortnight.

At last the time appointed for his second visit to the marshal arrived. His reception was again most favorable. The marshal asked him to be seated at the table, at which he was seated, and proceeded at the same time to business. Unlocking a drawer and bringing forth a small bundle of papers, he asked Heinrich, as he drew them forth by one, if he knew in whose handwriting the various superscriptions were.

Heinrich answered that, to the best of his belief, one was that of Herr Muddel, his former schoolmaster; another that of Doctor Van Hulmer, the principal of such a college as he called.

"Quite right," remarked the marshal,
"and perhaps it may not surprise you, to hear that I have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he
said these words, the marshal fixed his eyes
on Heinrich, to see what effect they had, but
the young man's countenance was unshak-
able, and he answered, in a calm, collected
and cheerful manner, "I am glad to hear
that you have written to these different
gentlemen; to inquire into your character,
and to let them know with whom I have to deal,
and not working in the dark." As he

