From my turretted palace with dome of snow, For in its lone chambers all dim and cold. I have stored vast treasures of shining gold. But a sound unknown to these solitudes s echoing loud through the dark nine woods The trampling of feet, and voices, and song-Like the rush of a tempest 'tis sweeping along! They come! they come! the gold-seeking train, They are urging their way over valley and plain, Through the desolate desert all silent and lone, O'er rivers swift flowing with murmuring moan. They come from after o'er the treacherous deep, Where wrathful storm-spirits their wild revels keep; From all nations and races they are pouring along, To the halls of the Gold King-a wild motley throng. There is youth with strong limbs and keen flashing eyes, Lefore whose hold spirit bright visions arise, And age with his forehead all furrowed by care, With the tottering footstep and silvery hair. Never shall peace and quietness reign In these louely mountain wilds again— The sounds of labor shall ring out free, And the valleys and forests resound with glee. By the singing streams in each grassy glen Shall string, as by magic, the homes of men, and woman's clear song, and childhood's glad shou

> For the West Jersey Pioneer. WHAT IS LIFE?

Shall ring from these dim old solitudes out.

"Life is even a vapor, which isfor a little time, and then vanisheth away." Many mispend life, and can only look back to it as time wasted; and the future they care not about. In looking around us, we see men striving to gain wealth, and in hoarding up money at the expense of their life; but this is not right. Man should not spend his time in seeking wealth alone; he has something better to live for. It is true that man thould carn his living by the sweat of his brow. God has placed him in the world, and set him over all things, next to angils, and endowed him with a noble mind; but how few there are who do justice to themselves and their Creator.

The miser, in the delirium of the fever, moulding to dust," and as his money grows before him a "creature of beauty" lie sits unwearied, while the hot fever of his mind is consuming his life blood. The merchant too. in the ide of times, hurries on swiftly to fulfil the important sphere of what is termed a business man, forgetting too often, that from the soft skies above him, gentle eyes looked reproachfully upon him, and when in silence and solitude, the voice of conscience would still be heard. The me chanic often boasts of his genius, and is ready to worship the work of his own handsthe grand ideal of his soul-with a wild idolatry. Such are the feelings of man when in health and prosperity. How very sinful is this indifference. How deficient in dignity and reason, as creatures destined to immortality, must we be if we ever neglect such wondrous love. Why do we start when we contemplate the gloom of the doubtful future? Away with such desponding and unworthy thoughts. We have nothing to do with the works of our life but to submit ourselves to them, sustained by the positive assurance that all things shall work togother for our good. May we rise above the cheerless world and turn to thee, the mighty Jehovah; so shall we find peace and love and joy forever. Life seems a blank to many. I would not live alway. Life is but a troubled dream, a tale of sorrow. While we are so gay and joyous, death comes over us like a cloud. Muny are snatched away by the rude hand of death without one moment's warning. They either enjoy everlasting bliss, or suffer eternal punishment. The consolations of the Christian are too rich-too solacing, to be given up because sometimes clouds may intervene between

I was not a little amused, as every one who is acquainted with this section of our State must be, at some of the remarks of your correspondent, "J. S. R.," who writes from Newton, Oct. 1st, respecting "Warren County Fair," as well as the country over which he passed in his journey, thence to Hackettstown.

Many thanks for the stretch of benevolent generosity manifested, when he magnanimously tells your "readers" of the overwhelming attendance there must have been at the "Fair," from the fact that there were over two thousand tickets sold during the Fair." Now, the facts of the case show even a greater attendance than "J. S. R." tells of; for there were sold during Thursday alone, twelve thousand, eight hundred and sixty eight tickets, beside those drawn as free tickets by the Stockholders, of which each holder was entitled to two during the day. "There were over twenty thousand tickete sold during the Fair."-We do not claim that the sale of intexicating drinks, of which there was abundant. adds anything to the high reputation in which all Agricultural Fairs should he bold by the citizens of our country. This is the first Fair ever held in Warren ; yet the spirit of rivalry and enterprise munifest ed by Agriculturists and Mechanics, was highly commendable, and will compare very favorably with any Fair held in the State during this year. There were some specimen: of superior cattle and horses that cannot be beaten in the State. For be it remember. ed, that Mr. A. G Vansyckle, who born off the palm for best milch cows at the State Fair, is a citizen of this county and had some of his premium stock on exhibition

Your correspondent also makes, we think, some unjust criticisms concerning the land over which he traveled it in private ance," to Hackettstown.

He says: "The chief productions, as far as I could see along the route, were Corn thinks his money is his god, and in his wild and Pumpkins, principally raised upon side fancy, forgets that his "tenement of clay is bills." He does not tell you, as he might in truth have done, that this very land is the most valuable land in the State for this staple crop-Corn; that it will produce, year after year, one-third more bushels to the acre, than the land "in the vicinity of Bridgeton," of which he says he would not give "100 acres for 300 acres among these ills." Many of the farms over which your correspondent must have passed, could hot o day be purchased of their owners for $175 per acre.

> There are large farms in the vicinity of Hackettstown, toward which place this extensively traveled correspondent of yours wended his way, for which the owners have efused the handsome price of $200 per IAGO. For the West Jersey Pioneer. EDUCATION-No. 2. In defining education, we made it the development of the moral as well as the intellectual faculties. It is a common opinion and the practice of the great majority of our schools is in complete conformity with itthat if the intellect is well trained; if the mind is stored well with knowledge, and abundant exercise given in the use of that knowledge, then education has served its great end. And if to be a splendid linguist; a profound mathematician; a ekillful reasoner and fluent orator is all that is required to make a man-in the fullest sense of that term-a man pure in principles and devoted unselfishly to the good of his kind; man on whom will rest the fervent bless. ings of all who have known and felt his influence, and who will be known in eternity as the honest defender of right and true virtue, then such a training would be sufficient. But when it is remembered that the youth, now in our schools, will be soon called upon to take their place in the world as the arbiits dark mantle over our whole country, and that infidelity, by the conferein of those most carnest in their warfare against it, is growing apace amongst us. When it is emembered that men of the most powerful intellect are engaged in dissemminating such seed as can only bring forth a harvest of fearful doubt and uncertainty among those not firmly grounded in the truth; in unsettling their minds in regard to the truth of the grand, cardinal points of christianity, and throwing them out upon that shoreless sca, where the soul of man can find no resting place for itself. DIGNITY OF CHARACTER.

The word dignity is often falsely apprecia ed. It is by many persons supposed to relate to that which is grand and lofty, and is associated only with the characters and actions of those who occupy clevated positions in society. But true dignity, which is the opposite of meanness, belongs to no one condition of life exclusively, and is to be found in the cottage as well as in the palace, among the humble and laboring classes, as well as mong the titled and wealthy of the land. It is not to be denied, however humiliating may be the admission, that many women-and it is especially to young women we address these remarks-pay but little regard to true dignity of character, that their estimate of dignity is at variance with truth, frivolous in its nature, and destructive in its tendency. Entertaining the idea that to be dignified one must be proud, that to excite admiration in others one must make a display of what is not commonly possessed, the unhappy victims of these ephemeral desires neglect substantial qualities, and exhaust the best energies of life.

To make a display of learning, virtue, religion, generosity, wit, originality, money, property, or rank, is incompatible with true dignity of character. Faithfully to discharge the duties which devolve upon us, conscientiously to recognize and fulfill every obligation of our position, to do our duty in the monotonous and quiet scenes of practical life, constitutes one claim to true dignity. It is only by seeking in youth to develop habits of industry, order with them. Wonder if their board bills ters of the destiny of their age. Robbery in Greenwi

On Sunday night last, while the family. were at church, the house of Ephraim Bacon was entered and robbed of about six dollars in money, this being all the spare change handy. The villians, however, ransacked the house in search of more money, breaking open drawers, without obtaining upper window, by means of a ladder.

Death of Washington Irving. There should be nothing startling in the news born in the city of New York, April 3, 1783, died November 28th, 1859, at his residence, Sunnyside, near Tarrytown, N. Y. Thus closes a life as remarkable for its purity, its gentle-ness and its command of the love of the human race, as it was for its length, and its worldly prosperity. There are no great events in the personal career of Washington Irving. He was never in any active, conspicuous employment, which required great and emphatic actions, or bold dashes of genius. He was born to be a literary gentleman, and all his habits, thoughts, actions and associations were those of the literary gentleman. He was the youngest son of William Irving, a Scottish merchant, married to an English lady, residing in New York. After law at the age of sixteen. When only twenty ears old, he was a contributor to the Morning Chronicle, a paper published by nis brother, Peter Irving. His articles were on the drama, literature, and town topics, and his signed himself "Jonathan Oldstyle." Twenty years afterlished, without the author's sanction, in a pamphlet. In 1804, when he was threatened with pulmonary disease, Irving was sent to Southern Europe for his health. He remained abroad for two years, traveling extensively, and at used most happile and was 1806, he resumed the study of the law, and was admitted to the bar, but never practiced his pro-

The death of Mr. Irving was sudden; for his health has been remarkably good for a man of his years, and only a few days ago we read an account of a visit paid to him by parties who found him cheerful and active as usual, able and willing to entertain his visitors hospitably and heerfully. The quiet close of a life like his, a life of duties well-performed and works finished, is not a matter for lamentation. But the American people will affectionately do honor to the it. The entrance was effected through an memory of a man who has done at least as much as any other to exalt the American name abroad in the estimation of the world.

New Phase in Congressional Oratory. The next Congress will have an opportuof showing who its eloc When the members used to sleep behind benches, or write letters to divert their minds from the tediousness of their Congressional labors, it was little matter what kind of specches were being made. Nobody listened to them, and hence, every dull fellow had an opportunity to make a speech, with the certainty that its errors of style, or of argument would not be detected, while it would weigh just as much in the mail bags, as if it were a constitutional exposition from the brain of Webster. Now al! this is to gress, who talk, merely that they may send such speeches upon men compelled to listen to them, will soon produce a remedy against thrown out, and for the general practical infor- them. They were seconded in a short speech | and those who are ambitious to figure as deoric will be of no avail; they must be con vincing in what they say, and to be convincing they must be accurate in their facts and logical in their deductions. This kind of training cannot be practised long without greatly improving the character of Congressional oratory. There will be less declamation, but more argument, fewer words, but more matter, the remarks will be pertinent to the subject, and the embellishments will be such as come warm from the fancy, the imagination or the wit of the speaker. This s just what the American mind requires .-It is a little curious that a people who are so promp, quick and direct in all their busibury Constitution of this week, is so appropri- ness movements, should be given to such intolerable verbosity in their public speaking. For the West Jersey Pioneer. HOME.

What tender associations cluster around the thoughts of Home.

The seaman, as he glides over the briny deep, while keeping his silent watch at midnight with the Moon's rays flickering thro' the clouds. All is silent except the roaring and dashing of the angry waves. The poor sailor is sad and lonely, but amid the monotony of the hour, his thoughts fly across the surging billows to the little home he left, and for which he is directing his bark, and his sad heart is revived, and impulses of joy and hope notive him up for duty. He often thinks of the friends he left at home—the many other kindred ties that were sundered on his departure, and he thinks of the time when he will be reunited with those friends "within the quiet Home," he is willing to spend time, comfort, and money for the sake of his home and loved ones there.

Again-look at the soldier as he struggles upon the field of batcle, exposed to danger and death at any moment. Many times he feels almost discouraged, and nearfaints by the way-but he thinks of the home that he will be permitted to enjoy when the battle is over and victory won, and his great spirit fired with the hopes of home, urges him on to victory.

The traveler, also, who has been traveling for months, and perhaps years—away from his native country and home, sees many things to attract his attention-visits many different climes - mingles with many different nations and tongues. Among them all he finds no place like Home .-With what anxiety he awaits the arrival of the Mail that will bring him news from Home. He forgets many things that have transpired on his journey, but he never forgets his home and friends. He rejoices R. Wheat 1 30 " when he shall again return to his native Old Corn, country-his native state; and as he nears the cherished spot where his friends reside, ed with that Home. He remembers the little cottage, the waving trees, the little brook near by, where he with brothers and sisters has spent many pleasant hours.-They are dear to him. He also thinks of his aged Father, whose raven lock again see age and desolation are longs to again see again that covers the remains of his mother, who, though buried many years, is year of his age.

He remembers how often the preacher urged him to prepare for (not an earthly home,) but a home where parting will never be-the home of which the Christian, even in this life receives an "earnest"_" a foretaste." It is pleasant to visit our earthly Home-but how changed. Our joy upon seeing home, changes into grief in finding friends have passed away from earth, while far away we could often Fenale Society.—To a young man, nothing is so important as a spirit of devotion (next to his Creator) to some amiable woman, whose image may occupy his heart, and guard it from the temptations that beset it en all sides. A man ought to choose his wife as Mirs. Primpose did her wedding gown, for qualities that will "wear wolt." One thing at least is true, that if untrimony has its cares, ceilinacy has no pleasures. A Newton or a mere scholar may find enjoyment in study; a man of literary lasts can receive in books a powerful auxiliary; but a man must have a bosom friend, and children around him, to cherish and support the dreariness of old age, and to bring about such a happy consummation it; so nly necestary to wear the elegant, graceful and hecoming styles of Granville Stokes, the celebrated clothier, No. 607 Cnestnut street.

"Fanny Fern" on Window Washing. BY THE BARD OF TOWER HALL.

Fanny Fern, the funny Fanty. Known to all who papers read, Wrote, this week, for "Bonner's Ledger," Something startling-yes, indeed! "I'll not have a window pane washed" (This in black and white she wrote) "Till, by our elective frauchise, Women are allowed to vote."

Much respected, matchless Fanny, Dirty will your windows grow Ere you greet the time you dream of When a ballot you can throw. Panes of glass, with dirt upon them, Will not be your only pains

In a mansion, having windows Only washed by falling rains. You will sigh to see your neighbors, When, upon the street, they pass; But your glance, however piercing,

Will not go through airty glass. You'll desire to break the windows, So that you the street may scan; And, no doubt, will tell your hasband You have thought of such a plan. Then, of course, he will oppose it,

And will plainly tell you how You may keep from breaking windows, By your breaking of a vow. Mrs. Fanny, though it almost Break your heart to break your word, I believe that by your servant Your sweet voice will then be heard

Shouting "Biddy, get some water, Soap and water, in a trice; And, then, scrub the windows, Biddy, Till you make them clean and nice?" When the servant makes transparent Ev'ry pane in ev'ry sash; You will say, (soliloquizing)
"Well I know my yow was rash;

And while I can rule my household. And its happiness promote In my proper sphere of action, Though I'm not allowed to vote, I shall be a wife and mother Happier far than any queen;

And, in duty, keep my consoi

Women should not do the voting-Men alone should do it all. In the nicely fitting raiment Sold at Bennett's Tower Hall! If such clothing, all the voters Bought and wore—the truth I pen— Fanny, to our bold assertion,

And my windows ever clean."

Cheerfully would say: Amen! A full and complete assortment of Pall and Winter Clo-ing suited to every market, now on hand, to which the tention of Wholesale buyers is invited. We won't par-cularly call attention to the style and make of our gar-tents at Bower Hall Clothing Baran, No. 518 Market REST, Philadelphia. BENNETT & CO.

SALESMAN WANTED The Subscriber having purchased the Interest MACHINERY AND CASTINGS.

We having entered into co-partnership under the name and firm of B. Ayars & Co., in the mathe name and firm of B. Ayars & Co., in the machine and foundry business, we are prepared to manufacture horse power, threshing machines, clover hullers, sugar cane mills, ploughs and plough castings, Owen's Peacock's Beaches, and the noted Moore plough. Also casting dome to order. Barber's improved Combined Mowing and Reaping Machine, to which we invite particular attention. This machine, as improved and made by us, has been fairly tested the last season, by practical farmers, who testify that it is of lighter draught for team, than any others that they have draught for team, than any others that they have used, and has given entire satisfaction. It was also awarded the first premium at the mowing match held at Bowentown, in July 1858; it doing its work equally as well as any other; with less draft. Manny and the corn power were in competition at the time. We are manufacturing a number of these machines. Farmers in want of a good machine, are requested to give us an early call. Machines repaired at the shortest notice.
