Domestic Happiness - Detested Sport.

Ob, friendly to the best pursuits of man, Friendly to thought, to virtue, and to peace, Domestic life in rural leisure passed! Few know thy value, and few taste thy sweets; Though many boast thy favors, and affect To understand and choose thee for their own. But foolish man foregoes his proper bliss, Ev'n as his first progenitor, and quits, Though placed in paradise, (for earth has still Some traces of her youthful beauty left) Substantial happiness for transient joy. Scenes form'd for contemplation, and to nurse The growing seeds of wisdom; that suggest, By ev'ry pleasing image they present, Reflections such as meliorate the heart, Compose the passions, and exalt the mir Scenes such as these 'tis his supreme delight To fill with riot, and defile with blood. Should some contagion, kind to the pass We persecute, annihilate the tribes That draw the sportsman over hill and daie, Fearless, and ropt away from all his cares: Should never game fowl hatch her eggs again, Nor baited book deceive the fishes eye; Could pageantry and dance, and teast and sor g Be quell'd in all our summer-months' retreat; How many self-deluded nymphs and swains, Who dream they have a taste for fields and groves Would find them bideous nurs'ries of the spleen, And crowd the roads, impatient for the town! They love the country, and none else, who seek For their own sake its silence and its shade. Delights which who would leave, that has a heart usceptible of pity, or a mind Cultur'd and capable of sober thought. For all the savage din of the swift pack, And clamours of the field!-Detested sport,

That owes its pleasures to another's pain, That feeds upon the sobs and dying shricks Of harmless nature, dumb, but yet endu'd With eloquence, that agonies inspire, Of silent tears and heart-distending sighs? Vuin tears, alas, and sighs, that never find A corresponding tone in jovial souls! Well—one at least is safe. One sheltered hare Has never heard the sanguinary yell Of cruel man, exulting in her woes. Innocent partner of my peaceful home, om ten long years' experience of my care lias made at last familiar; she has lost Much of her vigilant instinctive dread. Not needful here, beneath a root like mine. Yes-thou may'st eat thy bread and lick the hand That feeds thee; thou may'st frolic on the floor At evening, and at night retire securo To thy straw couch, and slumber unalarm'd; For I have gain'd thy confidence, have pledg'd Thine unsuspecting gratitude and love. All this was said by little Sammy Halsey on his way from the large front gate, where bis graudfather had taken him in his carriage on his way to the barn. I imagino his surprise when the white-baired old man, whose quiet temper had always been held up as a model for imitation, turned about and said, "I don't know, Sammy, unless you contrive in some way to break every bone in his body; that is the way my father once conquered an enemy." "Why, Grandpa, I thought your father was a minister!" Seeing Sammy's wondering, diseatisfied lock, Grandpa said, "Take hold and help me unharness Bill, and while we are at work I will tell you about it."

They loved each other, but still their high temper sometimes led them astray. After a while, my father became a Christian, and by his godly example, reproved many of the wicked and thoughtless practices of his companions. He refused to accompany them when going to rob an orchard, or disobey their parents, and persisted in reproving their conduct on all proper occasions, so that even his brother was for a time turned against him."

"By-and by,' I have heard my uncle say, ' no couldn't stand Robert's pious ways any longer, particularly as he had told Father of some of our wrong doings, and gos us punished. So one day, I caught bim alone in the orchard, got a horse-whip, and gave him a regular thrashing; and knowing that he would tell my father, and get me whipped in return, I gave him several extra cuts on that account. I came in rather slowly when the horn was blown for supper, for I dreaded father's angry look, and sides, I began to be ashamed of my disgracemun, if you would ascertain the secret of ful conduct. As Robert had not tried to resist me, but had walked away without speaking, I felt sure he would make up for it by telling of me as soon as he reached the house. To my surprise, no one seemed to know about it, and Robert greeted me as kindly as if pothing had happened, though I knew his thek was so sore that he could hardly sit up. Just before bed time, I said in a kind of sneaking way, "didn't you tell father of me, Bob?" "No, Richard, no one but my Father in beaven, and he has helped me to forgive you"

That remark, and the kind look of his face, broke every bone in my body. I begged his forgiveness, alone and before the whole family, and from that day was a changed boy. I never again did anything to grieve him, and before long began, trust, to walk in the straight and narrow path with him. Poor, dear Robert, after

Duty and Inclination:

A few years since a lady was left a widow, with several little sous. She loved them most devotedly. The affliction which she had experienced, in the loss of her husband, fixed her affections with more intensity of ardor and sensitiveness, upon her children. They were her only hope. Sad and joyless as she was, she could not endure to punish them, or to deprive them of a single indulgence. Unhappy and misguided woman!— Could she expect to escape the consequences of such a course? She was living upon the delusive hope that her indulgence would ensure their love. And now, one of these sons is reventeen years of aga; a stout, turbulent, and self willed boy. Ale is altogether beyond the influence of maternal rejustice to put on the tackling. He com- straint. He is tyrant of the family, and his menced the ceremonies by remarking that ufflicted mother is almost broken-hearted by this accumulation of sorrow. The rest of the children are coming on in the same path. Tying the knot, he said : "It was customa. She sees and trembles in view of the calamiry to give the married couple some advice, ity which it is now to late to avert. It would but he believed he would omit that. It he far happier for her to be childless as well lieved be would omit that also." The cer. She is their slave. Hardly any situation oan be conceived more it's customary to give the magistrate five truly pitiable. And what has caused this dollars, but I b'neve I'll omit that?" magnitude of serrow? Simply the mother's reluctance to do her duty. She looked upon her poor fatherless children with all the tender emotions of a widowed mother, and could not bear to throw around them necessary restraints, and insist upon obedience to her commands. She knew perfect ly well that when they were discondingt, they ought to be punished; that it was her duty to enforce her authority. It was not her ignorance which caused this dreadful wreck of happiness; it was the waps of resolution, that fond and foolish and great tenderness, which induced her to consule her own feelings, rather than the permapens welfare of her children. - The Mother at Hints on Training and Choosing Horses Until quite a recent poriod, but little attention has been given to the training of domestic animals. Whilst their services to mankind have been readily acknowledged. there has been quite a manifest disposition to rest satisfied with such capabilities and adaptedness as nature had given them, or as could be taught them with little labor er skill. There is scarcely one person in ten who can form anything like an adequate idea of the increased value imparted to any domestic animal; by a judicious system of training. The cat, through her instinct, will naturally catch mice; yet if she is not sufficiently trained to come when she is wanted, or to stay at such places as she is required to watch, one half of her value as a "domestic institution is lost. Of the domestic animals, the horse is, in this latitude, the most valuable and useful. He contributes more to our comfort and luxury, than any other animal, and has, perhaps, received more care and attention as a general thing. Still, the vast disproportion between the really good and bad, or but indifferent horses, surely indicates either a neglected, or evident to require proof, that all persons, or even all farmers, are not qualified to train horses more than to train children. A person who is hasty and passionate, easily excited and irritated, in fact unable to control himself, is not a competent person to train a horse. Horses, as well as individuals, vary greatly in intelligence, disposition, docility and temper, and require quite as much tact, skill and patience in their management .--Well informed men agree that the number of almost worthless, baulky horses, would be diminished two thirds if they were properly trained when first broke. The knowledge obtained by Rarey, celebrated for his mysterious power over the most vicious and intractable horses, will yet be turned to practical account, and when more fully under stood, be capable of being imparted to othbut comparitively few capable of practicing this knowledge successfully, yet we confidently regard it as an important step in a much needed direction. The loss of time. temper and labor, by the use of a balky. unreliable team, and the risk of life and limb from a vicious horse, are very serious drawbacks on their value; sufficient we should think to make it an object to have suitable persons employed to train them properly .-Teachers for horses should be patronized in every county, and through the instrumentality of clubs and agricultural societies, might be advantageously employed by all parties, at but little additional outlay of capital.

We will suggest a cheap, and perhaps an efficient plan. Let an agricultural society, say the Bowentown Club, select one of their number, judged by the members to be the best qualified for the task, make it his especial business to break and train all the colts belonging to the members of the Club, for which he should receive a compensation according to the time employed; either in readv cash, or in an equivalent exchange of labor in his farming operations, at fixed rates. He would thus be enabled to turn the whole of his attention to this particular branch of agricultural pursuit, and consequently make himself much more thorough in the knowledge of the disposition, management and treatment of the horse, either when well or sick. Such a division of labor has been ful how they venture on the ice when it is found profitable in other branches of indus- weak. try, and will ultimately be acknowledged so in many parts of agriculture. At least we hope some of our farmer friends will give Messrs. R. & J. Dubois, proprietors of the the subject a thought, and let us hear from them. But if they do not, we shall not the manner in which they came to the reswithhold suggestions from the fear of ap- cue. pearing Quixotic.

With reference to the disposition of horses, phrenologists say that the width of the head and face, and the distance between the ears, are the indications of a horse's temper. If the head and face are wide, and the ears of good size and set well apart, the horse is kind docile and tractable in disposition.-While a narrow head and face, with but little space between the ears, are the certain indications of a vicious, mischievous, and intractable temper. Others say that horses with rather small than large ears, not placed time to get a picture. too for sport, erect and quick in motion, indicate both breed and spirit. If a horse is in the habit of carrying one ear back, and the other forward, especially in a journey, he generally possesses both spirit and endurance. By stretching his ears in contrary directions, he shows that he is attentive to everything around him; while he is doing this, he cannot be much fatigued, or likely to become so. The temper of a horse is indicated by both the ear and the eye. If he lays his ears flat back, and keeps them so, and at the same time shows much of the white of the eye, you may expect that he is meditating mischief either with his head or well lighted, and arranged for the accommodation of ninety scholars, that being the number of names enrolled. Seventy six pupils were present the afternoon we visited the school. All of these are taught by Mr. A., without any assistant. The scholars are so well classified, and governed by the law of order and wheerfulness, that everything connected with it, moves along as quiet and regular as clock work. We should be pleased to give a minute and lengthy description ers. And though there probably may be of this model school, but time and space forbid; suffice it to say, the singing of several beautiful pieces was performed in a charming manner; the recitations in Mental Arith. metic, Geography, &c., were highly creditable to the scholars and their teacher. Their penmanship gave evidence of rapid improvement, as it could not do otherwise under the instruction of such a comretent instructor.

On Monday afternoon last George Loper, a lad about 12 years of age, was drowned in Elmer's Mill Pond. After school he got the consent of his grandmother, Mrs. G. Mosier, to go skating. His companion, younger than himself, after trying in vain to get him out, ran home to convey the sad news. He was taken from the bottom of the pond in less than an hour, a lifeless corpse. Some of the Evils of the use of Tobacco. MR. EDITOR: - Having read a well written editorial in the Pioneer, of the 14th inst., on this subject, I offer the following for the benefit of the public:

CRAMPS. These most terrible of pains, says Hall's Journal of Health, arise from the veins press against the large nerves, and thus imsmaller nerves the distention produces neuralgia, which is literally " nerve ache."-The cause of this unusual fullness of the thick, so full of disease, that this abnormal state is indicated by feebleness of the pulse. In cholera patients it is very marked, and existed days and weeks before the attack. The following simple method of treatment

When a person is attacked with cramp, get some hot water quietly and expeditiousy, (for noise and exclamations of grief and alarm still further disturb the nervous equilibrium,) put the sufferer in the water as completely as possible, and thus heat is imparted to the blood, which sends it coursing along the veins, and the pain is gone. While the water is in preparation, rub the cramped part very briskly with the hand, or a woolen flannel, with your mouth shut. But why keep the mouth shut? You can rub harder, faster, and more efficiently; besides, it saves the sufferer from meaningless and agonizing inquiries. A man in pain does not want to be talked to-he wants relief, not words. If all could know as physicians do, the inestimable value of quiet composure, and a confident air on the part of one who attempts to aid a sufferer, t would be practiced with ceaseless ass iduity by the considerate and the humane.

Last July I was attacked by a suiden Cold, which resulted in a Jvery severe Cough, with violent Pains in the Side and Chest. I became so much reduced, that my friends frankly told me that I must die. At this crisis, I heard of Wistan's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and immediately sent for a bottle. The effect produced was indeed wonderful. My physician, one of the most respectable in Boston, who had previously told me that a cure was hopeless, came in, and I informed him what I had taken. He examined the Balsam, and advised me to continue the use of it; since which time I have continued to improve daily; and the same physician who had given me up, told me, a few days since, that I might yet live many years.

"QUEEN BESS," THE PET MOUSE.

By THE BARD OF TOWER HALL. For several years we had kept in a little tin cottage, an Italian white mouse, on which we had bestowed the title, "Queen Bess." seemed to possess something more than instinct, and had been taught many things which made her very interesting, and the pet of the house. On Sunday morning we found her dead in her cottage home. "Queen Bess" is dead, our darling mouse; And vacant now the little house In which she lived so long.

We mourn her loss, and must indite A dirge-like strain-oh! who will slight For good "Queen Bess" a song. In robe of fur, as ermine white, She moved, with fairy footstep light. in more than queenly grace. Oh! such a mouse was never known-Her brilliant eyes like rubies shone,

And lustrous made her face. But she is dead, and, though a mouse, There is a sadness in our house-If not a grief profound-For little "Bess," of home a part, A corner held in ev'ry heart, Where love for her was found. No more, from wool of lambkins white, Will she step out by day or night, Her food and drink to seek:

No more she'll turn her shell-like ear, That she her whisper'd name may hear, When we that name may speak. No more will "Bridget" have to please The good "Queen Bees" with cake and cheese And table dainties all: It inside her improvibles to do.

For well the mouse her kint friend knew, And come at Bridget's carl. No more with pleasure will be seen The cottage home which our queen A life of quiet led; No more my wife (with other cares,)

Will have to bring from "way up stairs,"
The wool to make its bed. Alas, no more!—My wife is near: I see within her eye a tear,
Which must the lid run o'er; Well may the tears her eyelids wet; For good "Queen Bess," our household pet. Will be with us no more! These is no other mouse like her! Our loss is great; but why demur?

The loss we're forced to bear; But, if for mice there be a heaven, To little "Bessy" will be given A place the nicest there. A mouse is but a little thing, Yet we are moved of one to sing To you, our readers, all: If you for little things don't care,

Then seek the great—the bargains rare, In CLOTHES at TOWER HALL. Being determined to close out the entire WIN-TOCK in its season, we offer inducements never before offered; such as place the best winter garments within the reach of all. BENNETT & CO., 518 Market Street, Philadelphia.

I purchased, while I was very ill, a bottle of Robertson's Palmonic Elixir, which entirely cured me in the short space of 4 days, and I now feel bound to make it known, for it, e benefit of fellow-sufferers, and in justice to the Proprietors.

Survey 2 drop, 18th 1860

Win. B. Robertson, Respected Friend:—During the past winter my wife was attacked with a very severe Influenza, accompanied with a dry, distressing cough. After trying several popular remedies without receiving any benefit, she was recommended to try the "Pulmonic Elixir." By Salen, 3d mo., 18th, 1859. Respectfully, thy friend, JOSEPH A. MILLER.

PENNSVILLE, April 21, 1859.

Mr. Robertsen.—Dear Sir: During the last winter, while afflicted with a distressing cough, I was led to try the virtue of your Pulimonic Elixir, and with most happy effect. It afforded almost immediate relief. I can most conscientiously recommend it to all suffering in like manner. We have administered if to our children, in cases of colds, with happy effect and have recommended it to others, who have used it and now testify to its value.

Yours, &c.,

Pastor M. E. Church, Penn's Neck.

Messrs Robertson & Lippixcott—Gents.: During the sitting of the Musical Convention in this place, (from over work, I presume,) my threat and breast got very sore. I obtained from you one bottle of your "Robertson's Pulmonic Elixir," which in two or three days entirely restored me: It has had a very beneficial effect on my mother who has a cotgh of several years standing. I gave some to Prof. Root, who had taken a severe celeir and in every case it acted like a charm. Believing it to be an excellent medicine for the class of diseases for which it is recommended. I cheerfully comply with your request in giving you the above certificate.

Philadelphia, April 12th, 1886.

Messrs. Evans & Warson,—Gentlemen.—It affords us the highest satisfaction to state to you, that owing to the very protective qualities of two of the Salamander Safes which we purchised of you some few months since, we saved a birga perion of our jewelry, and all our books, napera. &c. exposed to the calumitous fire in Ranstead Phise, on the morning of the 11th instant.

When we reflect that these Safes-were located in the fourth story of the building we occupied, and that they fell subsequently into a heap of harming ruins where the sast concentration of heat caused the brass plates to melt we cannot but regard the prevervation of their valualle contents as most convenient proof of the great security affirded by your Safes.

We shall take much pleasure in recommending them to men of Lusiness as a sure reliance against fire.
