A CHAPTER OF REAL LIFE.

On almost any day of the week, upon the sunny side of the sidewalk in Third street, Philadelphia may be seen an aged man hobbling along upon a staff, his whole appearance indicating that all his reflections are memories, and that if he knows a single hope it is fixed upon a country beyond the grave, where penury and want can never

The history of this old man was yesterday related to us. For convenience sake we will speak of him as Mr. James. Some time ago Mr. James was a man in comfortable circumstances. He owned a farm with stone house and barns, and cattle to match, dreary blank. in the most fertile part of Montgomery county. The devil, in the shape of a bank President, induced Mr. Green, a neighbor of Mr. James, to mortgage his farm, get a note discounted, and build a Grecian cottage with twenty-four columns holding up ious to rise early in the morning, to enjoy nothing. Mr. Green went ahead and built the fresh breeze which was blowing over COMMERCE St., a few doors east nothing. Mr. Green went ahead and built up the cottage. Mrs. Green then took on and directly opposite the new airs, and allowed that she could no longer associate "with them James'." This angered Mrs. James, who informed Mrs. Green ed with the leafy boughs that met and archthat she was "not to be trampled on." She ed over us in solemn magnificence. The right to a Grecian cottage with twenty-four Mrs. James kept up her din for some weeks. at the end of which time the subject of this from field to grove, amid the emerald tufts did any upstart dare to say she was sketch struck his colors to his wife. Even of solemn pine, a mocking bird gave forth escape curtain lectures. He berrowed a good round sum from the bank, gave his cian temple. For a brief period Mrs.
James was as happy as a dowager, and now that James had such an abundance of moncy, and could get as much more as he pleased, came on a shopping excursion to Philadelphia every day in the week, except Sunday. Mrs. James purchased the most extraordinary bargains, and flattered herself into the belief that she was cut out for commissary general. So far so good. In a little time Mrs James began to fidget again. The rusty homespun carpets were as old as Adam, didn't cover one-half of the floors, and were a disgrace to the Grecian temple, while the storekeepers are advertising Kidderminsters at a trifle below cost. Poor Mr. James!-He was a doomed man from the time he obtained his first discount. Mrs. James procured a $300 carpet for her parlors, while to keep it company, Mr. James had to buy a $70 mirror, a set of $50 window curtains, happy design.—a vulture eating an antelope -a bank financier "doing" Mr. James. All this "Splurge" carried beattitude to the heart of Mrs. James, and made her as happy as a foul at a fireman's parade. Dewith the idea that "Mr. and Mrs. James, of Druid's Dell," were making asses of themselves. Mr. James became low spirited, and felt that his farm was no longer his own. The Grecian temple and his fertile fields, instead of being a source of enjoyment, only increased his regrets, as he felt that ere long they must inevitably pass from his possession. One of those periodical tornadoes to which the credit system is subject collapse, and James was apprised by the cashier that his notes would not be renewed, and that there was no telling how soon the institution would be subject to a run. The sequel of the history is that James' notes went to protest; the mortgage was foreclosed, and the farm and temple knocked down, at public sale, for just enough to pay the notes. The property was bought in by the cashier, who thus converted paper promises into land. Mrs. James pined away, and died of disappointed vanity, and poor James has, at last, found shelter with a distant kinsman, where he shares the common lot of age and poverty-neglect and contempt. He is now upwards of four score years of age, waiting patiently for the call to a world where he humbly hopes to find rest in the presence humbly hopes to find rest in the presence of his Savior. His history contains a moral, and that is, that a snarling and discontented wife invariably drives ber husband to one of three things—intemperance, demoralisation, or bankruptcy. There are many women in the world having precisely the idiosyneracies of Mrs. James.

For the West Jersey Pioneer:

To one who has just commenced studying music, it may seem dull at first, yet looking around upon nature, we find music in nearly everything. One lovely day in the month of September, I found my friend and myself seated on the deck of the good old Steamer "Patuxent," for a short trip down the swift gliding Cohansey, as we waved a parting adieu to the few friends among the crowd that thronged the wharf.

ly on her way, we passed rapidly down the beautiful creek. The scenery was most delightful. There seemed to be music in every movement. As the wheels rolled around Stoop'd from its height and spread its wasting and moved the noble Steamer onward, they seemed to throw forth notes of joy, the rest of the machinery all seemed in tune, and kept perfect time. My friend having retired to the saloon, I stood gazing upon the blue-arched sky above me. It was a serence and steady gains give competency with tranand beautiful afternoon, the little birds were darting over our heads, keeping time to the motion of the boat, their melodious made, it was not many minutes before we borrow if you can possibly avoid it. Do their daily tasks, are the least disturbed by not marry until you are able to support a found ourselves safely landed at the place of our destination.

As we were hurried along towards our friend's dwelling, where we intended to make a short visit, we were startled by the sound of an Irishman, singing in his own Irish style, "Rory O'Moore," and "Larry O' Guff, and other merry Irish airs, being rendered in a manner that gave perfect satisfaction. Without music, Life would be a

It was not long before we were scated in our friend's house, and after partaking of some refreshments, and spending a short, but social evening, we retired, being auxthe rich fields, laden with the perfume of countless flowers, and winding road borderins, as "them snips on the next farm" plumage fluttered and sang, filling the air a wise man will often do foolish things to his varied song in notes, full, rich and musical. Next came the Thrush with his note, mortgaged his farm, and built a Gresoprano. The Lark with the tenor, and bass enough for the whole community. Surely here is music in the song of the one. Who is there who loves not the sound of vocal, sending forth its sweet melody to cheer the hearts of many. There have been those who have been well-nigh discouraged, and hearing the voice of music, it has awakened new pleasures, and thrilled their hearts with joyous anticipation. There is music in the little brook as it flows through hill and dale. Soft voices like a spirit-melody meet our cars. Purity, life and joy, must produce sweet tones of harmony.

Then, why do so many seem sad and dreary? why is it we pay so little attention and a $40 hearth rug. The rug was what the dealers called a gem. It had a very to music. Surely, if the birds delight in singing praises, should not we? It is not loudness of the voice that produces music, but the melody. The over-straining of the voice, or even keeping it up constantly to spite all this, however, Mr. James run away its full stretch, is a decided mark of ignorance and vulgarity.

Loudness requires mere physical or brute power; but sweetness and mellowness com bined, with as much power as nature will admit of, require taste and discernment, and can only be acquired by a close attention to the rules of art. There are almost always in a choir, some individuals, who, occurred. The bank began to sink into a conscious of their superior qualifications, or urged by a mistaken estimate of their abilities, offend against good taste, by an undue and this in all probability is the fact. We are sorry to say that this science has been so much neglected. These long Winter evenings, when we have one among us who is able and welk adapted to give such perfect instructions, and even if the voice should be out of order for the want of teeth he is also willing to replace them for a rearonable compensation.

GOOD ADVICE TO FAST YOUNG MEN.

In the pocket book of the Hon. Stephen Allen, who was drowned from on board the Henry Clay, was found a printed slip, apparently out from a newapaper, of which the following is a copy:

"Keep good company or none. Never be idle. If your hands can't be usefully employed, attend to the coltivation of your mind. Always speak the truth. Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets, if you have any.— When you speak to a person look him in As the noble Steamer moved majestical- the face. Good company and good convercharacter is above all things else. Your character cannot be essentially injured, except by your own acts. If my one speaks evil of you, let your life be so that none will believe him. Drink no kinds of intoxicating liquors. Ever live / (misfortune excepted) within your income. When you retire to bed think over what you have been quility of mind. Never play at any game of chauce. Avoid temptation, through fear you may not withstand it. Earn money before you spend it. Never run into debt unjust before you are generous. Keep yourself innocent, if you would be happy. CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT.

The man who is obliged to be constantly employed, to earn the necessaries of life and support his family, knows not the unhappiness he prays for, when he desires wealth and idleness. To be constantly busy is to be always happy. Persons who have suddenly acquired wealth, broken up their active purauits, and began to live at their ease, waste away and die in a very short time. Thousands would have been blessings to the world, and added to the commen stock of happiness, if they had been conteut to remain in an humble sphere, and earned every mouthful of food that nourished their bodies. But no; fashion and wealth took possession of them, and they were completely ruined. They ran away from peace and pleasure, and embraced a lingering death. Ye who are sighing for the pomp and splender of life, beware! Ye know not what ye wish. No situation, however exalted; no wealth, however magnificent; no honors, however glorious, can yield you solid enjoyment while discontent larks in your bosom. The secret of happiness lies in this-to be always contented with your los, and never sigh for the splendor of riches, or the magnificence of fashion and power. Persons who are always busy, and go cheerfully to

MAKE HOME ATTRACTIVE. There is evidently a lamentable want of domestic and fireside amusements of a harmless and innocent character, as is frequently proved by the many acts of rowdyism continually occurring, it is much to be feared in an increasing ratio in all our towns and villages. Nine tenths of the evening mischief and disturbances is committed by boys, or lads just rising to the dignity of a small growth of down. The street corners are bad school rooms; yet the knowledge acquired there often exerts an influence that is felt throughout the whole of this life .-Bad babits and principles are much more easily formed than corrected. It is idle to deny that youth will seek recreation and senanal amusement. If denied at home, it will be clandestinely sought elsewhere. One of the greatest faults parents can commit, is to neglect to make the fireside pleasant, agreeable, and even desirable to every member of the family circle. And to suppose that this can be done without effort, or even without self-sacrifices, is the height of absurprecocity of children, there is also a growing necessity for proper home restraint and culture. If the tastes and appetites of youth they can at least be directed. Amusements may be made beneficial to the domestic and social system of the family, as well as to the mental and physical system of the individual. By making home pleasant to each member of it, the desire to exchange it for the profanity and rowdyism of the street corhers, and kindred haunts of vice and immorality, would be lessened. Happily, amusement and instruction are already become somewhat blended. Little games of art and skill, are calculated to impart knowledge in the arts and sciences in geography, history and literature, yet so diversified in design and simple in arrangement, as readily to be adanted to all ages of childhood, while affird. ing amusement, and even instruction to every member of the household. ## EDUCATED FARMERS.

Farmers and Mechanics! Education is a subject which comes to you more directly than you think. Crafty politicians and public speakers are constantly calling you the bone and sinew of the land; and you anything else but bone and sinew, without education. That class of men who make the most and best use of their heads, will, in fact, be the most influential, will stand highest, whatever the theories and speeches may say. This is a nature of things which cannot be dodged nor got over. Whatever of the pastoral relation with this Church to class bestow great pains upon the cultivation of their minds, will stand high. The difference between the educated and uneducated portions of society is a real may rail and swear at this, and have his labor for his pains. There is only one way really to get over it, and that is to rear up a generation of well educated, thinking, reading farmers and mechanics. Just as soon as your heads are felt as much as your hends are that will bring you to the top. You see how it is even among yourselves. If a boy has an education, you expect him to be a lawyer, or a doctor, or a preacher. You tacitly admit that a farmer does not so, you cannot blame others if they follow your example. There is no reason why men of the very highest education should not go to the farm for their living. If a son of mine were brought up on purpose to be a farmer, if that was the calling he preferred, I still would educate him if he had common sense to begin with. He would be as much better for it as a farmer, as he would as a lawyer. - Beecher on Farming. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Ballou's Pictorial of 24th July says.—Realizing the true sense of responsibility attaching to the Editor and Publisher of a widely circulated journal, we should doem it dittle less than a crime to recommend any medical compound the real virtue of which we could not conscientiously indorse. This balsamic compound has become a home fixture; and all persons who suffer, and have in van attempted to cure their Coughs, Colds, Bronchial or Pulmonary Complaints, make use of this unequalled remedy. remedy.

A CASE OF CONSUMPTION AND ONE OF WHOOP-ING COUGH CURED. The following from a highly respectable gentleman speaks for itself: KETPORT, N. J., May 20, 1858

Speaks for itself:

E. W. Fowld E. Co., Gentlemen:—This certifies that I was for many years afflicted with a disease of the lungs until I became so weak that it was with difficulty I could walk: My cough during this time was very severe, causing me fre-mently to raise great quantities of blood, attended with profitse night sweats.

After using various reme lies to no purpose, I was advised to try Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I did so, and before using the first bottle I was restored to perfect health and strength.

I would also mention that this Balsam cured a little girl of mine, of a severe attack of Whooning Couch, when

A Tailor's Appeal to a Maiden.

Dear pattern for all woman kind, I bleed by woman's dart; Oh! may it prove a needle, love,

The tape of all the world would not In length sufficient be To take the measure of the love Within my heart for thee.

A suitor, I, to press my suit. Will now my thoughts unloose— Den't say my suit like suits of clothes, Is pressed, and by a goose. A single shear is worthless quite, Though with a sharpness rare;

But, to another rivited. Most useful are the pair. They work together as we would. If we were man and wife— We'd cut according to our cloth." And work our way through life."

Then let a pastor rivit us, And, for all future years, As steel we will be true, and one, As is a pair of shears. A perfect love, unclipped by Fate,

To fit me in my suit, thy heart Must not a remnant be. Perhaps you'll think, but do not say, When you this matter scan, Thou art thyself, a remnant, sir-

The ninth part of a man." And if I were your better half, "Then he who runs might see"
That I a vulgar fraction made, Could but an eighteeuth be."

Oh, don't say that! let no such thought Defeat Affection's plan— With nine-minths in his honest heart, A tailor is a man! I'll build you dear, a pretty cot,

With garden all around;
And in my shop will cabbage raise,
And flowers upon my ground. Thus profit will with pleasure come To bless us day by day; For we shall have the scents of flowers, And make the cabbage pay! I'll wear the garments which must c'er

For admiration call— They styles they make and cheaply sell At Bennett's Tower Hall Oh! then my dear, let Cupid sew. To thine my loving heart; And paught but death shall rend the seam.

Or cause a stitch to start; And we will ask in fervent prayer, Within our blest abode, That stitches ne'er may break in heart Like ours together sewed!

Being determined to close out the entire WIN-TER STOCK in its season, we offer inducements never before offered; such as place the best winer garments within the reach of all: BENNETTA GE.

PENNSVILE. April 21, 1859.

Mr. Robertsen—Dear Sire During the last winter, while afficied with a distressing cough. I was led to try the afficiency of your Pulmonic Elixir, and whit most kappy effect. It afforded almost immediate relief. I can most conscientiously accommend it to all suffering in like manner. We have administered it to our children in cases of colds, with happy effect; and have recommended it to others, who have used it and now testify to its vaine.

Yours, &c., Davior M. E. Church, Penn's Neck. Yours, &c., Pastor M. E. Church, Penn's Neck.

Messrs. Robertson & Laprincott-Gents.: During the sitting of the Musical Convention in this place, (from over work. I presume.) my threat and break got very sore. I obtained from you one bottle of your "Robertson's: Pulmonic Elixir," which in two or three days entirely restored mo. It has had a very beneficial effect on my mother who has a cought of several years' standing. I gave some to Prof. Rood, who had taken a severe code, and in every ease it acted like a charm. Believing it to be an excellent medicine for the class of diseases for which it is recommended, I cheerfully comply with your request in giving you the above certificate.

at length fully warrance the representations which have been made of them as rendering an undoubted security against the terrific element.

Philadelphis, April 12th, 1856.

Messis, Evans & Warson, Gentlemen.—It affords us the highest satisfaction to state to you, that owing to the very protective qualities of two of the Salamander Safes which we purchased of you some few mouths since, we saved a large perition of our jewelry, and all our books, papers, &c., exposed to the calamitous fire in Ranstead Place, on the morning of the 11th instant.

When we reflect that these Safes, were located in the fourth story of the building we occupied; and that they fell subsequently into a heap of burning ruins where the vast concentration of heat caused the brass plates to melt; we cannot but regard the preservation of their valuable-contents as meet convincing proof of the great security afforded by your Safes.

We shall take much pleasure in recommending them to men of business as a sure reliance against fire.
