BUYING A HORSE. Jones has been buying a horse, and thinking that his experience might be of some use to others, he gives them for the benefit. of the readers of the PIONEER. Now Jones is a little man and doesn't know a great deal about a horse, except when he has hold of the ribands. We me not sure that Jones himself thinks that he knows much about the good points of a horse, but if he does think so, we know that he is mistaken. Now about somethings, Jones knows a considerable, if not more-on sweet potatoes, oysters and some other animals, he is some - Jones is; but on horses, Jones isn't much -he isn't. Well this little man, Jones, and another little man, Jones' friend, whose name we are almost afraid to tell for fear he might read this and might not like to see his name in the papers, took it into their heads that they wanted to be like other folks a little, and so concluded to buy a horse together. We didn't hear them say how they were going to have the horse, which half Jones was going to own, nor which half Jones' friend was to have, but we suppose they arranged that matter satisfactorily between themselves. However they wanted a horse, and Jones, the little man, set out to buy one, He borrowed a horse and buggy for the occasion. The horse was rather old, but having been kept well, it didn't show its age, but trotted off as if it had not seen the frosts of more than three or four winters 'Now," thought Jones as he started, "I'il huy a horse." He felt the importance of his business-felt dignified, Jones did. He trotted off briskly - the horse I mean, not Jones. Pretty soon he saw aman coming on ahead, driving what seemed to be a handsome horse .-"Now," thought Jones, "I wonder if that man knows I want to buy a horse." "Good morning, sir! What will you take for that horse of yours?"

"That horse is not for sale, sir, (with dignity).

" No-well-thank you-I'm much obliged to you-some prospect of rain"- and Jones rode on again. This cooled Jones arder a little and the next man he met was allowed to pass without salutation. After riding on sometime without seeing any one, he met another man and addressed him briskly as follows :-

"Will you tell me, sir how far it is to where I am going?"

"Well. I should think it was not much further than two miles and three thirds." "No further than that, ch? Do you know of any one that has a horse to sell?" " No, I don't know as I do; -but seeing it's y u, for the sake of accommodating you, I don't know but what I would be willing to let you have this one of mine. I ought not to sell it, I need a horse, and this one is such a good one, gentle and kind every way I think he would just suit you, Mr.

Jones." Jones proceeds to examine the horse nowingly.

"How old is he?" said Jones. "Just seven years old."

Jones gives him a further examination. "What will you take?" "Well, I ought not to sell him any how but seeing it's you, I don't know but I will sacrifice on him and let you have him for seventy dollars."

Jones still further examines. "You just hold my horse a few minutes and let me drive yours a little ways."

Jones drives the animal a short distance and finds that he stumbles and doesn't follow the road well. Drives back and gives another knowing examination. "Your horse is blind in one eye; isn't

"Yes, he is blind in one eve."

"And can't see very well with the other; can he?" " Not in the dark."

"And as it's always dark to him I don't suppose he can see much better than a ced. If you cannot do all you would like blind horse; I guess you had better keep do what you can, and do it like a man him and not make the sacrifice that you Never falter nor hesitate because you canlars, and as my time is limited I guess I must hurry on."

"Well I have another horse at home, first rate one, only seven years old, that I would like to trade for that colt of yours." "I guess not," said Jones, "in the first trade; and in the second place, it isn't a accomplishment, and are unwilling to take olt, though I expect it has been a colt once any halfway preliminary steps.

-they say it has—but it must have been "Half a loaf is better than no bread." they say it has-but it must have been o long ago that it's a matter of doubt now." "Just call around to my house and see

Jones drives on and calls on Mr. Jenkins. finds that gentleman and asks him if he has a horse for sale. Mr 'Jenkins doesn't seem to know whether he has or not, but finally that, shortly after his admission to the bar, explains in this way:

"You see that Albert-that's my son, January and is as good a boy as you ever before the appointed day. During his visit came across, 'cept he don't like to work, one evening, he remarked that he believed Albert don't - well Albert came to me yes- all necessary arrangements for the wedding no. I guess it was yesterday—I don't know which it was, it was one or the other are day makin' fence - well as I said before, Albert came to me and he says, says he "Fath- mother, which carly became to him a pleacrops are poor," says he, "and grain is going have don, and through all his privations and to be high, says he, "and you have too ma ny horses," says he. "I don't know but what we have," says I, and now there's the ported by the thought of the pleasure his horse, you can look at him and see what a fire horse he is and if you like him and will pay a hundred dollars for him, why you kin take him right along." " How old is this horse?"

"Ile is only seven years old" "I never knew until to-day that all hores were just of an age," remarked the inreterate Jones.

"How much over ten, though, did you say "Only three months," said Mr. Jenkins "You called him 'Old Gray' just now."

"Yes, but that was only to distinguish m from a gray colt we have." "Oh! well, he is spavined, isn't he."

how he likes it - replies as follows: "He drives very well, but then I don't see the use of a horse having four legs if he only uses three."

Jones takes his leave. He next visited Mr. Smith, to see a horse that he heard he had for sale.

"How old is your horse, Mr. Smith?" "Seven years old."

"There must have been a good many colts raised seven years ago," remarked the philotie harnessed up this horse, too, and found him to have been a valuable horse; still fast, but requiring time and attention to make nim look better, as the framework of the system showed rather too plainly. When he got back, Mr. John Smith asked him how he liked his horse. . Very well, indeed, and I'll recommend him to some doctor, or some other man who wants a fast horse, and has another that he can use some of the time while he is getting this in good order, but you see as I am a little man, this horse, especially when he gets fat, would be too big, and wouldn't correspond," said the modest Jones.

At the next place the weary Jones was successful, and found a fine, young horse to his liking; but as he doesn't tell the particulars about this so freely as in the other cases, we shall not be able to give them to our readers. However, if you see a little man driving a fine looking horse, that can trot truth and mercy. Now he is the beloved three minutes in a mile, and not half try, you may know it is our friend.

A man arrested for bigamy excused himself by saying, that when he had one wife

Not long since we heard a female, on getting into a horse car, remark to a friend that she never saw so many common people in the cars in her life, and she took occasion to repeat it so often, as to draw attention to herself. Of course, we took a good look at her, common person. And this is the result of our scrutiny: She was extremely plain in features and we recall the same of the purpose; and if his words be features, and we could discover but little that was intellectual about them, yet she was a self-satisfied smirk that plainly told that she considered herself as something more than "common." Her dress was in good taste, rich but plain, and lacking the usual supply of pinchbeck jewelry, so common now-a-days. Taking these things together with that silly remark, we confess we were at first puzzled. Who, pray, we asked ourselves, can this woman be, who exhibits such a sovereign contempt for what she pleases to call "common people?" and this solved the problem. We draw the inference

COMMON PEOPLE.

-how could it be otherwise? that she was she, who had probably been a house-maid or laundress, had been raised from poverty -superadded to a low state of society-to affluence. And such a person to talk about "common people," some of whose shoes she was unworthy to unlatch. This nonsense about "common people," may do very well among aristocrats, but in a republic where there are no recognized distinctions, it is ieight of vulgarity.
But who are the "common people" in our community? Why, simply, the bone and sinew of the land. They are to be found in the machine shop and at the forge; they build our ships and guide them on their pathway over the trackless deep; at their command the iron steed goes snorting over his narrow course; they build our eities and cultivate our fields, and they, too, are the real sovereigns of the land. "common people," call them such if you will, and you, Madam, surrounded with all the luxury that wealth can purchase, elevate your head in supercilious contempt of them, shrink from their approach as if their touch was contamination itself; but remember that it is to them-under God,-that you owe it all; "common people" delved for the money that you are wasting in foolish show and senseless pleasures; and "com-

TRAINING CHILDREN .- A quiet government is no doubt the best, and generally the most efficient. The parent who rules in a quiet way, has the best control of his own to be to the purpose; and if his words be savory also, they will seldom fail to forward the end designed. Where much is said, counsel is often obscured by the multitude of words. Threatening, also, should be avoided. Threats are sometimes the resort of those who love their case, and hope thereby to escape the trouble of a better discioline, but generally they are made under the influence of a britile temper - of harsh feelings. Harsh feelings will dictate harsh judgment, and harsh judgment carried out, will harden the heart of the child. Threats made and not executed, do but weaken the authority of the parent, and confirm habits of disobedience in the child. They encourage presumption also; for knowing the parent's will, and presuming upon their forbearance, children learn to become heedless. of their displeasure-a most dangerous habt for a child to contract in early life. The writer is very far from any disposition to claim to himself the credit of having always acted up to the advice he is giving. He has made many mistakes which he would he glad of the opportunity of correcting, but from a good deal of experience and observation, he is fully persuaded that in the hands of an affectionate parent, or considerable degree of strictness in early training is no cruelty, but the reverse. If it braks the spirit, it is only the spirit of the oppressor, which ought to be broken - that spirit which is seeking to wrest the government of the child from its rightful ford and establish over it the worst of tyrannies-that spirit which seeks to mar the beauty and innocence that the good spirit often imprints upon the child in tender years. Against this spirit it is we should contend and not against the child, but rather for the child,-for his life and for his happiness-break the spirit of the oppressor and deliver the innocent and oppressed. If the parent is not accustomed to watch over his own spirit, nor to keep it in subjection, the enemy will insinuate himself and contend against the child with his own weapons, thus wounding the spirits of Leaving the Falls we proceeded to Buffalo, and from thence by the long and circuitous route through Lake Erie, Huron, Michgan to Milwaukie. We will not detain the long and somewhat monotinous voyaye .-Stopping now and then at some city, village or island for the purpose of taking passengers or freight, listening now and then to some interesting "yarn" from the lips of the Captain, viewing the scenery now on shores, gazing at the white winged messengers of commerce, dotting the distant horiing now and then the shrill noise of the whistle, and the ever ceaseless and monotiwere nearly all that occurred worthy of note were unusually calm Once, however, during the veyage, the wind blew severely, and the boat rolled and pitched, not a little to the annoyance of the lady passengers .-After a journey of some four days, we reachafter a journey of some four days, we reached Milwaukie, Wis, a short time previous to the loss of the Lady Elgin, which happened near that city. Nearly one half of the passengers of the ill fated steamer were residents of this city. Milwaukie is somewhat peculiar in its appearance, on account of the brick manufactured here. They have a delicate, clean color, which is regarded as very enduring .-The town was settled in 1835, and was said some time since to contain 50,000 inhabitants. The census, however, which has just been taken, shows a population of 15,000. Racine, a city just below Milwaukie, is laid down on railroad guides as containing 12,-000 while the late census shows a population of less than 7,000. May it not be presumed that most of the western towns and cities, have for some reason, in respect to their population, been over estimated? In passing from Milwaukie into the interior of the State, we found the country remarkably level, interspersed here and there with noble forests, made up exclusively of oak. That the soil is extremely fertile, is evinced by the fact that portions of it have been under cu'tivation for twenty years, without the application of manure, and yet there has been no diminution in the crops. The houses generally, are remarkably small. many of which resembling the log cabins and negro huts of the South. The truth is, the inhabitants for the last few years. have been compe'led to put up with all sorts of inconveniences. Many of them emigrating thither previous to the year '57, contracted for their lands at a Ligh price, and being unable to pay the entire amount. mortgaged their farms as security for the debt While they were struggling manfully beneath this burden they were overtaken for a time in a prostrate and helpless condition. None but actual settlers can fully appreciate the hardships under which they have struggled. But we trust a brighter was here that we were permitted for the West. The largest cop has just been harvested that was ever before raised in the State of Wisconsin. The same remark is applicable to all the States of the North West. The wheat has often exceeded forty and the corn seventy bushels to the acre. With such crops as this, for the next three or four years the new states of the West will be p. sed in a condition of prosperity seldom reached by their elder sisters of the East. The beneficial effects of this great harvest, is even now being seen and felt .-Business long crushed and stagnant, is already showing new signs of life and vigor. The farmer is beginning to walk with a more elastic step, the mechanic, long idle, is finding employment for his labor and skill, the merchant, who has long dreamed of bankruptey, is now enlarging his stock of goods.

RELIABLE TESTIMONY.

We call the attention of the reader to the following etter from President Smith, of Wesleyan University:

MIDDLETON, Feb. 28, 1850.

SETH W. FOWLER & Co.:—Gentlemen.—I first made use of the Oxygenated Bitters some seven or eight years smee. Having suncered for twenty years from a form of Dyspepsia, which was attended with a nervous headache an anverage of not less than one day, if a week, I was induced by the unpretending recommendation of Dr. Green to try one bottle and if no benefit was received to discontinue the use.

The use of one battle warranted a further trial to the extent of some three r four, with a careful observance of the accompanying directions. The result was an almost enter relief from the usual dyspeptic symptoms and their depressing, painful consequences. I believe these butters produced an entire change in the habits of my system and upon the active energies of the diges five organs. I now deem my self as exempt from Dys pepsia as most persons. These bitters have also been of service to other members of my family.

MANDERSON & CO., Proprietors,

[Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1800, by Mandenson & Co., in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.] CONSUMPTION.

WE cannot speak too highly of this TAR CORDIAL as a cure for Consumption. Many persons, once poor and emaciated, can testify that when everything else failed, and they were just ready to step into the grave, a new light sprang up—they heard of the FOREST PINE. TAR CORDIAL, and its wonderful cures; and as the strong man, grappling with the mighty waves, lays hold of every object that offers a shadow of issistance, they took the Tar Cordial and were restored to perfect health. To the Consumptive, then, we say, take contagge; the Forest Pine Tar Cordial has cured as hopeless cases as yours—it may cure you, at least do not despair until you have given it a fair trial.

Read the following: Read the following: To Jonn D. Batter, Esq.—Dear Sir:—Being a great suf

To John D. Baller, Esq.—Dear Sir:—Being a greet sufferer for fourteen years, from a confirmed Asthma, the bottle you brought me of the Forest Pine Tar Cordul prepared by Manderson & Co., restored me to period health, after being pronounced incurable by our of the leading Doctors of the city. My sincere prayer is to let the world know it.

Your obedient servant.

Read the following:
Gents:—Being of a Consumptive tendency, with weakness pain in the breast and lungs, and general debility.
I was induced to try your genuine Forest Pino Tor Cordial, and am happy to say it has been of the greatest benefit, as my pain and weakness have left me, and I am gaining in strength and desh daily. I believe your Forest Pine Tar Cordial to be the best medicine known, and can with confidence recommend to those similarly afflicted.

Yours, Respectfully.

SUMNER HILLI. Clerk of Steamsh.p Phineas Sprague. Philadelphia, April 28, 1860.

CAUTION.

The success attending the sale of the Forest Pine Tar Cordial, and the wonderful cures performed by it, have induced others to indicate and make an inferior article, so as to impose mon the public, and induce the inwary to believe that in purchasing said Medicines, they were getting our celebrated and wonderful Forest Pine Tar Cordial. Therefore, to protect the bubble against all such spurious articles, they have had the words "FOR-EST PINE TAR CORDIAL, the Great Cure for Consumption. Bronchitis, &c." and their name, "MANDERS IN & CO." blown on each of the bottles, which are of darkgreen glass—none genuine without those words on—Remember, we have no connection with any Ppreparation of Tar but this Paice. One Dollar per bottle.

CHESNUT GROVE WHISKEY,

(The Purest Medicinal Agent ever known.) has furnished the community a Stimutant. Pure, Healthful and In vigorating, at the same time a mild delicious beverage It is calculated to do away with the vile drugged stuff that is palmed off on the community, and which is injurious to body and mind. In addition to the certificates branch, he has received a Diploma from the State Agricultural Society, and additional testimony from DR. JACK-SON, of Boston, who testifies under eath to its absolute Certificates. PHILOGRAPHIA. Sept. 9th. 1858.

We have carefully tested the sample of Chesnut Grove Whiskey which you sent us, and find that it contains none of the Poisonous Stubstance known as Fusil Oil, which is the characteristic and injurious ingredient of the whiskeys in general use.

Analytical Chemist.
Boston, March 7th. 1859.

I have made a chemical analysis of commercial samples of Chemut Grove Whiskey, which proves to be free from the heavy Fusil Oils, and rerfectly pure and unadulterated. The fine flavor of this Whiskey is derived from the Grain used in manufacturing it. Respectfully,
