For the West Jersey Pioneer. THE HEART OF BRUCE.

BY MRS. SARAH B. SCOWELL. "St. James Douglas, with the heart of Bruce in his custody, departed with a large army, for Jerusalem, in the year 1830. His purpose was to bury the heart, according to the desire of Bruce, in the holy city. But he determined to take Spain in his way, and to conquer the Saracens there. He encountered them, but was defeated, when he threw the precious onyx upon the ground, exclaiming 'Now pass thou onward, as thou wert wont, and Douglas will follow thee or die.' The fugitive rallied, though victory remained with the Saracens. Douglas fell, and his body was found on the field, carried back to Scotland, and buried under the high altar in the old cathedral of Dunfermline."

Pass on, proud heart, as thou wert wont, In the battle's foremost row, Where the clashing sword-strokes thickest fall, And fierceest rages the about

Pass on, proud heart, and Douglas still will follow thee, or die; For when, in the path where a Bruce hath led, Did a Douglas ever fly.

Like a clarion note that stirring cry Rang through the dying host, And the battle's raging tide surged back, Like a wild sea tempest-tossed.

The brave Scots rallied, but Douglas fell 'Mid the heaps of trampled slain; He sleeps far short of his destined goal, On that battle-field of Spain.

And the treasured heart of the kingly Bruce Hath found a safe repose, Where the Spirit of the Past keeps watch 'O'er the ruins of proud Melrose.

O Douglas brave, O noble Bruce, Not vainly did ye live, To each proud name the circling years New lustre still shall give.

And while old Scotia's soil contains The Bruce's hallowed grave, That hallowed soil will still be free, Her sons be true and brave.

An Incident of the Battle of Trenton. BY EDWARD S. ELLIS.

It was the night before the battle—the darkest night of the Revolution. The town of Trenton was lit up as if for a carnival, and gay forms could be seen fitting by the windows, and their boisterous voices often reached the shivering sentinels outside. Every one abandoned himself to revelry, and harbored no thought of danger.

While he was thus engaged, the following words were exchanged between two soldiers in Washington's army. "One of the speakers was young Manton, and the other a friend of his about the same age.

"We have them at last," exclaimed the latter, exultingly. "Yes, thank heaven they are in full retreat."

"Are they not near your house, Manton?" "Yes, and my dear mother and sister are no doubt thanking God for what is now going on around them," said young Manton, proudly.

"The American forces were now at the head of Warren street, and the British retreating before them. When the latter reached the house of Manton, they turned off to the right, through a by-street, and continued their retreat through Greene, toward the Assanpink creek. Washington, placed victory at once in his hands. Dividing the force, he dispatched one portion of it down Warren street, while his own body continued the pursuit through Greene.

The former division was instructed to cross the Assanpink as quickly as possible, and attack the enemy in the rear. Manton was in this body; and as he hastened forward to obey their orders, he glanced back at the windows of his home. He fell and died in less than ten minutes.

The result of the battle of Trenton is well known. It was the turning point of the revolution; and the dark clouds which had so long hung over our destiny as a nation, were there dissipated, and the bright hope of once more beamed upon our land.

After the battle, Manton and his friend revisited the house of the former. Then he learned that he had slain the insurer to his sister, and it is needless to add that it occasioned him but little regret.

DRAGONAL.

For the West Jersey Pioneer. FREE DISCUSSION.

The records of the past may be searched without finding the time, when injury has been produced by any subject being brought to the bar of human opinion and fairly discussed. The laws and principles of the material world are ascertained only by thought, investigation, and truth-seeking discussions of scientific minds. The principles which lay at the foundation of either individual or national prosperity are best realized by a candid and impartial discussion before the enlightenment of the world.

The subject which demands the most thorough discussion at the present time is, whether or no the North shall yield and make those concessions which the South threatens to frighten her into.

The South, together with slippery politicians and puppet editors, may counsel to repeal all Personal Liberty Bills, but their hope of success is about the same as that of a seaman who should attempt to repeal and tear down the famous Gibraltar rock.

Mr. Spurgeon's Strange Beginnings. I remember an instance of this occurring the first time I ever heard him preach, when I shared, with many others, the strong inclination to laugh, which only the solemn operation of time and place could subvert.

Almost a Jonah. A whale was caught and towed to the Isle of Dogs, England, some time ago; and the late Mr. Cliff, the energetic assistant of John Hunter, went down to see it.

A story is told of Dick, a drakey in Kentucky, who was a notorious thief, so vicious in this respect, that all the thieves in the neighborhood were charged to him.

"Sothy, do you love me any?" "Oh, don't!" "Why don't?" "Because you always bring me candy when you come to see Slavy Jane. Give me more."

"What do you think Slavy Jane love me for?" "Because you take her to concerts, and give her so many nice things. She says as long as you are cool enough to bring her, Slavy and Constance, she want me to stay how. Now, give me some more candy."

No. 105. Pride is as incompatible with piety as

The preparation for heaven can only be effected by the taking up the cross, and the corrupt desires and passions of fallen nature.

Religious characters, like the sun when sunk below the horizon, still shed a light upon the world.

It is an incontrovertible truth, that no man ever repented of Christianity on his death-bed.

Christians may be compared to a tree; the more we press it, the stronger it grows.

Vice incapacitates a man from all public duty; it withers the powers of his understanding, and makes his mind paralytic.

How desirable to get our hearts more affected with feeling for the sorrows of others, and with gratitude for our own mercies.

What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue.

A Christian must be a man of faith every step of the way, and one whom the world knows not, though he so well knows the world.

The first of all human blessings is the consciousness of having exercised the talents God has given, in endeavoring to serve the great interests of religion and virtue.

We may, like Adam, have recourse to evasions and palliations, as though we expected to hide ourselves from the All-seeing eye.

What a world do we live in, that it should require a good degree of resolution and grace to be able to say, I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ!

How comfortable and honorable does religion appear under the idea of a state of friendship with God.

What can the joys and idols of earth, which so many seek after as the only good, contribute to the real enjoyment of life.

How tender is that admonition, how forcibly should it affect our hearts—"Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God."

The true value of a thing lies much more in its usefulness than its splendor.

Oh! that those who have not, may begin to set their hearts on that one thing which will never disappoint.

We are nothing, have nothing, and of ourselves can do nothing.

When shall we be able to do business with the world, without catching the spirit of the world.

Oh! the vanity of ambition, and the worthlessness of the noblest talents, except as they are used to promote the glory of God.

Drowned

On Monday morning last, the inhabitants of Millville were much alarmed by the appearance of Mr. Frank Tice, a citizen of that place. He had been unwell for about a week, and during that time had shown symptoms of insanity.

It will be seen by reference to the Prospectus of The New-York Ledger, which will be found in another column, that the proprietor of that popular weekly has secured an array of distinguished contributors for his paper for the New Year such as has never been equalled by any publication in the world.

A Warning to Drivers.

One day last week a couple of yankee drivers found themselves face to face, in a spot where a single team could only "rub and go." Both were sturdy, athletic fellows, but one had the advantage of possessing a countenance which expressed the utmost determination, and the most ferocious courage.

"Look here, you scoundrel! It's no use talking, and if you don't turn out and let me go by, I'll serve you just as I served a fellow two miles back, by Jupiter!"

Management of Boats.

The Royal National Life-boat Institution, England, has published a circular on this topic, which may interest the people of B. Jersey. It says that the cause of a boat's "broaching to" in a broken sea, is by propelling it rapidly before the sea, instead of checking its speed, and allowing each successive wave to pass by.

HOME EDUCATION.

Whatever defects there may be in home education, it is certain that the exceptions are not general where the moral training of the mother is not according to her best capacity, for the benefit and advantage of her offspring.

The principal cause of departure from the path of right, is evil associations. The poor mother, engaged in her household affairs, dependent upon her labor for a livelihood, has little time to devote to her children; and as soon as they are able to walk by themselves, they seek playmates, and the youthful mind is readily impressed for good or evil, according to the disposition of the associations.

GREAT MEN—No. 8.

There is much of interest in the character and career of John B. Gough. He is now forty-three years of age, though he is said to appear much older from the effects of early dissipation.

NEW JERSEY.

We do not purpose, under this head, undertaking to prove that our State surpasses all others in every desirable quality, nor do we expect to fall into ecstasies at the sound of our voice in uttering the name of the State to which we owe our allegiance; but we would desire to offer our humble protest against the stale jokes of would-be witty journalists, who depreciate New Jersey, and everything pertaining thereto.

LABOR.

The frequent and striking labor is the normal condition of man, will bear of repeating. The law of labor has been established upon the human race. In man's depraved condition, the fulfillment of this law is not only conducive, but necessary to his well being.

It will be seen by reference to the Prospectus of The New-York Ledger, which will be found in another column, that the proprietor of that popular weekly has secured an array of distinguished contributors for his paper for the New Year such as has never been equalled by any publication in the world.

THE LATEST NEWS.

The House Committee of thirty-three, upon the state of the Union, adopted, by a vote of twenty-five to eight, the following resolution, offered by Mr. Rust of Arkansas: Resolved, That, in the opinion of the committee, the existing discontents among the Southern people, and the growing hostility to the Federal Government, and the war, are the result of a conspiracy, and that, unless the discontents and hostility are removed, the Union will be destroyed.

THE GREAT FAMILY PAPER.

Some people are much on the fact, that the price looks at pretty women. If that be a sin, we fear that there are fewer saints than angels in the world, though even saints might be excused for gazing at angels.
